3d Roosevelt Bureau Wiped Out By House

Personnel Council's $25,040 Stricken From Independent Offices Measure

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The House yesterday followed in the footsteps of its appropriations committee by striking from the billion-dollar independent offices appropriation bill funds for one more agency—at a saving of $25,040.

Third Presidentially-sponsored bureau to be stricken from the measure, the Council of Personnel Administration was removed on the grounds that it has no specific legislative authorization. The other two agencies—National Resources Planning Board and Office of Government Reports—had been knocked out in committee for the same reason.

As the bill rapidly moved to completion yesterday, the economizing temper of the House was indicated in the defeat of an attempt by Representative O'Connor (Democrat), of Montana, to add $22,000,000 to a $15,000,000 appropriation for public buildings, including postoffices. O'Connor's motion was defeated on a voice vote after floor manager for the bill, Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, had warned that "this is not the time for such a program and anyway we haven't got the money."

Treasury Bill Reported Slashed

Meanwhile, The Post learned last night that the Treasury-Postoffice appropriation bill, which is in the hands of an appropriations subcommittee, had been slashed about $10,000,000 below estimates. The principal saving is understood to have been made at the expense of the Treasury Department. It was pointed out that a saving of several million dollars in the estimates of old-line departments, such as Treasury or Postoffice, is an indication that drastic cuts will be made throughout the budget.

While the House yesterday beat down O'Connor's effort to add $22,000,000 to the Independent Offices bill, it likewise defeated on voice vote an attempt of Representative Schafer (Republican), of Wisconsin, to cut the $125,000 allotment for administrative expenses of the Export-Import Bank.

In a brief reply to Schafer's argument, Representative Woodrum smilingly observed that "a little learning is a dangerous thing," and then pointed out that the bank is "one of the few money-making activities" included in the bill. The Export-Import Bank involves "no drain on the public treasury," he said.

A provision allowing the United States Housing Authority to spend $152,000 for its "information service" was vainly attacked by Representative Luce (Republican), of Massachusetts, who described the USHA's publicity work as "a one-sided presentation of a bad case."

Bill Exceeds Billion

The bill, due for House passage this afternoon, now stands at approximately $1,100,000,000, and is $94,000,000 below the President's budget estimates.

However, economy advocates face a fight by Chairman Bland of the Merchant Marine Committee to restore to the United States Maritime Commission the $75,000,000 slashed by the committee from the recommendation of $200,000,000.

Representative Case (Republican), of South Dakota, obtained elimination from the bill of clauses that would have relaxed restrictions on the use of funds of the Electric Home and Farm Authority and Home Owners Loan Corporation. Case contended that the passages to which he objected were efforts to

Murphy, in Valedictory, Denies Shielding Political Leaders

Answers Critics as He Prepares to Take Court Oath Today

FRANK MURPHY

Attorney General Murphy, preparing to take the oath as associate justice of the Supreme Court, early today issued a statement denying published "insinuations and implications" of Department of Justice favoritism toward some political leaders.

He mentioned specifically Mayor Kelly of Chicago and Mayor Hague of New Jersey City and declared the Department had pursued "a policy of firm and equal enforcement of the laws."

The statement said:

"As I leave the office of Attorney General of the United States, I feel it is my duty to clear up certain misstatements of fact, and insinuations and implications based upon such misstatements, which have today and lately been circulated in a portion of the press.

"Such misstatements are to the effect or insinuate that as Attorney General I have, for political purposes suppressed possible proceedings against Mayor Kelly of Chicago, Mayor Hague of Jersey City and other political leaders, and that my successor in office, Mr. Robert H. Jackson, is expected to continue the same policy of suppression and inaction, to serve alleged political purposes of the Administration.

"Such stories and such statements are not true. I resent them and the implications arising from them.

"Proceeings by grand jury and otherwise, have been pressed against political leaders without regard to their party, their power, or their influence, for the violation of Federal laws whenever the department has been able to obtain evidence to

State and FBI Seek Cause of DuPont Blast

Two Dead, Five Hurt In N. J. Explosion; Sabotage Is Denied

By International News Service

Gibbstown, N. J., Jan. 17.—A tremendous explosion of 6,000 pounds of nitro-glycerine in the Repauno plant of the E. I. duPont de Nemours Co. here today killed at least two workmen, injured five others and rocked a 60-mile tri-State area.

Investigation to ascertain whether sabotage was responsible was ordered by Col. Mark O. Kimberling, superintendent of State police. Federal Bureau of Investigation agents also were investigating, although company spokesmen said they doubted the possibility of sabotage in the heavily guarded plant.

The blast broke windows in a wide area and rattled them as far away as Philadelphia, but it was more than 30 minutes before even the chief of police of Gibbstown could locate the scene of the explosion.

Wild rumors spread that the Philadelphia Navy Yard had been bombed. Philadelphia and Camden sent fire apparatus and ambulances speeding there.

Finally, the duPont company announced:

"An explosion wrecked one of the units in the manufacture of nitroglycerine at the Repauno plant of the duPont company at Gibbstown."

The two men killed were: Edward M. Burden, jr., 31, of Paulsboro, N. J., and Earl L. Harbison, 30, of Clayton, N. J.

A grade school near the plant trembled and shook, and its win-

Counsel Admits Browder Lied About Name

Attorney Argues He Had to Travel Under an Alias

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Counsel for Earl Browder acknowledged late today the United States Communist leader used an assumed name in obtaining a passport he carried on a European trip which presumably was climaxed by a visit with Soviet officials in Moscow.

"We do not deny," said George Gordon Battle of defense counsel at the outset of Browder's trial for passport misuse, "that he obtained the 'Richards' passport in 1931 under that name.

"It is in evidence that he is an official of the Communist Party and certainly a man in his position in that party could not be blamed for traveling under an assumed name through the countries of Europe at that time."

Battle's effort to justify Browder's use of an alias was made in answer to the prosecution statement before a Federal Court jury that the Communist leader had deceived the American Goverment with "a bulk of false material" while seeking the protection of its passports in travels to Russia and other lands.

While United States Attorney John T. Cahill thus denounced him, the little mustached revolutionary sat slouched deep in his tilted chair, his eyes blinking slowly and his hand occasionally seeking the part in his graying hair.

Defense Loses Pleas

Browder is on trial for using a passport obtained through false representation. The Government claims he used the aliases George Morris and Albert Henry Richards on visas and borrowed the name of Nicholas Dozenberg, a one-time "comrade" who has pleaded guilty to passport misuse and is expected to testify for the Government.

Cahill's statement of what he expected to show was made after a half dozen defense attacks upon the indictment had been denied by Federal Judge Alfred Coxe.

The prosecutor, saying his case would rest largely on documentary and handwriting evidence, never once mentioned Browder's position in the Communist Party and the jury at the outset was admonished to disregard any Communist implications.

"We are here to try a passport case," Cahill told the jury, "and

Navy Ensign Killed as Plane Falls Into Sea

Ensign Malcolm Charles Kirby, U. S. Naval Reserve aviator attached to the carrier Ranger, was killed Tuesday when his plane crashed into the Atlantic. His body was not recovered, the Navy announced yesterday.

Kirby was 27, a native of Sayre, Okla., and became a naval aviator last September. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. M. C. Kirby, of Norfolk, Va., and his mother, Mrs. Orlean A. Kirby, of Granite City, Okla.

Pneumonia and Flu Fill D. C. Hospitals to Capacity

If hospitals sold standing room, all those in Washington would have hung out "S. R. O." signs yesterday.

Although it has not reached epidemic proportions, according to Health Officer George C. Ruhland, a city-wide outbreak of respiratory disorders has the Capital's hospitals operating to capacity, a survey revealed last night.

With the exception of their obstetrical and children's departments, virtually every hospital canvassed reported all beds filled, due principally to the wide prevalence of pneumonia, influenza, throat infections and other respiratory conditions.

"We've had to put several patients in the first-floor guest rooms," said Providence. "Regular four-bed wards have been equipped with a fifth bed. The only department which isn't filled up is the children's. We had to have extra beds rushed over from Baltimore to meet the demand."

D. C. Cracks Down on Speeders

Crusade's First Day Shows Light Trucks Worst Offenders; Some Clocked at 70

By Howard F. Wentworth
Post Staff Writer

In the face of mounting traffic death tolls, Washington police yesterday opened a crusade against potential killer-drivers on District streets.

Armed with orders of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to go after major violators, they concentrated on speeders, reckless drivers, those who handle their automobiles as if they were alone on the road.

Spearhead of this drive against death on the highways was Policeman George Patton, the District's "safety officer," put in service in March, 1937, in conjunction with The Post's drive for safety.

Trucks Worst Offenders

Driving an unlettered automobile with plain District tags, Patton, with a Post reporter, pursued speeders and reckless drivers through heavy traffic and along parkways at speeds sometimes reaching 70 miles an hour.

Drivers of light delivery trucks were found to be the worst offenders. In one instance, on upper Sixteenth street a delivery truck roared past the police car at Madison street. Traveling north, it weaved in and out of heavy traffic until Patton caught it at Kalmia road. It had touched 70 on the way.

"I wasn't paying any attention," said the driver. "Anyway, I didn't know you were behind me."

Eight light delivery trucks were stopped during the day for speeds ranging from 40 to 60 miles an hour. In most cases the speeders chose congested and narrow thoroughfares to hurl their vehicles through traffic.

Several children playing on Chevy Chase parkway were noticed scurrying for cover just as Patton turned into the drive. A speeding car rushed through the spot where they had been and Patton gave chase.

They "Wouldn't Kill"

Several blocks farther on he halted the automobile after its speed had been checked at 40 miles an hour. Its driver was an 18-year-old high school boy going back to classes after lunch.

It was his third speed offense since April and he begged Patton not to tell his father. He will appear in court Saturday.

A few minutes later, on Connecticut avenue, Patton and his companion risked their necks in dense traffic to run down a colored chauffeur driving a large coupe. The automobile dashed away from a traffic light at Albemarle street and reached 55 miles an hour before turning off into Ellicott street.

When overtaken, the chauffeur explained his boss told him to "hurry home" with the automobile from a midtown garage, but he didn't think his speedometer registered "more than 30" on the trip

Time after time Patton halted speeders. And each time he asked: "Don't you realize you might be the cause of someone's death—that

Police Dog Breaks Through Window, Saves 3 in Fire

Powhatan, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—In the Joseph Bonavitch family man's best friend is Man.

Man is the Bonavitch police dog and his bravery, coupled with his size and weight, saved the lives of his master and Bonavitch's two sons, Otto, 14, and Randall, 16, in an early morning fire at the home yesterday.

The old home near Michaux was in flames and the three occupants of the house still slept. But the big dog, sensing the danger from outside the building, threw his weight against a window, pawed a screen aside and leaped into a downstairs room. He then jumped upon Bonavitch's bed.

Bonavitch roused his two sons in another part of the house and the three, taking only time enough to grab up some clothing, fled the building with their dog.

Aid to Finns Faces Delay In Congress

Apathy, Hostility Greet Loan Plan As Committee Starts Study

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

Prospects for swift "material aid" to Finland dimmed perceptibly yesterday as the President's plan for nonmilitary advances to the beleaguered republic received apathetic treatment at the Capitol.

The Senate Banking Committee heard Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones insist Congress take responsibility for further aid to Finland and then adjourned hearings a week. Secretary of State Hull will be the next witness.

General leadership opposition to a direct military loan was reported. Vice President Garner was among those reportedly feeling it would be "unwise" and conflict with neutrality policy. Administration chiefs were ready to "go along" with the President's plan, but were exerting no pressure.

One high-ranking party member predicted "little more than a friendly gesture" to Finland would finally emerge from a dual committee gantlet of hearings, if in fact aid proposals are not actually pigeonholed by the Senate Banking or the Foreign Relations Committee.

Hoover Urges Credit

In New York, Former President Herbert Hoover, leading a drive for private Finnish relief subscriptions, said the President's proposal for nonmilitary credit "should be supported" and surplus foodstuffs should be sent free to "such countries as Finland and Poland."

But the Hoover statement received no echoing response in Congress, where Republicans generally were cool to the plan. Senators both parties repeated professions of warm sympathy with a "wish we could do something," but steered gingerly away from any proposal "which might lead to involvement."

Before the Banking Committee, Jones testified that the $10,000,000 in credit for nonmilitary domestic purchases already advanced was, in his opinion, "a good credit risk" and would be returned whether the Finns win or lose.

He said he could find $25,000,000 for further credit, but said this was a Congressional responsibility and he will grant no more credit unless Congress authorizes it.

Jones proposed that the Export-Import Bank's $100,000,000 revolving fund be increased by $100,000,000, to permit continuance of the bank's South American loan policy and, if Congress saw fit, additional credits for Finland.

$60,000,000 Suggested

Jones testified in a closed committee room, but it was learned he suggested Finland might use $30,000,000 for food and $30,000,000 for military supplies. He made it clear he ha turned down all requests for credit not involving purchase here of strictly nonmilitary supplies.

One means of military aid brought out in the course of the discussion was that Finland's acquisition of food supplies in this country might

Business Man Turns Over Island To Honeymooners

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—A 43-year-old business man who has always loved islands decided today to turn over a wooded isle he owns in the Gulf of Mexico to honeymooning couples—on the theory that "your honyemoon should be the happiest, most carefree time in your life."

From now on until September, they can go and live for two weeks on Clinton M. Washburn's island—now called "Hog Island," but henceforth to be "Honeymoon Isle"—25 miles off Tampa, Fla.

Palm-thatched roofs will be their shelter. There's a sandy white beach. Washburn is going to provide a radio or two, so they can dance on the beach in the moonlight.

The only things they have to bring: Clothes, cooking equipment, wherewithal to buy groceries on the mainland, and whatever they wish in the way of sleeping bags.

Mannerheim Pledges Battle 'To Last Old Man, Last Child'

Finns Will Scorch Their Frozen Earth Before Yielding, He Says

By International News Service

Paris, Jan. 17.—Baron Carl von Mannerheim, field marshal of the Finnish armies, today pledged the nation to a fight "to the last old man and last child" in a dramatic challenge to the Russian invaders.

In his first interview since outbreak of the conflict, the old warrior who won Finland's freedom from Soviet rule in 1919, told Georges Kessel, war correspondent of the Paris Soir, that:

"We will fight to the last of our old men and the last of our children.

"We will burn our houses and our forests.

"We will destroy our towns and our industries, and what we leave for the Russians will be cursed by Nature."

In his field headquarters Mannerheim hurled his challenge as Finnish soldiers were fighting their staunch and stubborn warfare in bitter cold. They were fighting—and winning—the marshal said.

"The world once laughed at us," he continued, "because we organized our women into 'Lotta Svard' battalions of auxiliaries.

"But these brave women, by going to work with both hands, have made it possible for every able-bodied man in Finland to go to the front.

Reich's Plight Is Like 1916, Britain Says

Blockade Is Making People Starve and Shiver, Is Report

By Frank R. Kelley.

London, Jan. 17.—At the end of 4½ months of war the two-way blockade of Germany by the British and French navies has produced an economic strain in the Reich equivalent to two years of the World War, Ronald H. Cross, Britain's minister of economic warfare, asserted in the House of Commons today.

Admitting Germany was technically stronger in the economic sphere than in 1914-18, Cross contended that the Reich thereby had been made more "brittle" than ever before.

He declared that the "mere decision" of Britain and France to stop Germany's exports after December 4 had been sufficient to "cut off the overwhelming bulk" of shipments abroad by the Nazis. Meanwhile, he added, the Allies had drawn their contraband control net so tight "that there are no important leakages and virtually the whole of Germany's imports controlled by this weapon have been stopped."

Important steel works in Germany have been forced to suspend operations solely through lack of raw materials, according to Cross, who also painted a drab picture of conditions of life for the German masses, although he claimed "sufficient crayfish are being imported by plane from Danubian countries to provide a standing delicacy on the tables of the Nazi party leaders."

Cross' statement in Parliament, his first summary of the work of the Ministry of Economic Warfare, coincided with the publication of official statistics which showed that the recovery of British foreign trade which began in November had increased last month, although figures for 1939 as a whole reflected a slump.

Send Finland Real Help, Swedes Urged

Ex-Foreign Minister Assails Neutrality As Riksdag Cheers

By the United Press

Stockholm, Jan. 17.—A demand by former Foreign Minister Richard J. Sandler that Sweden send troops to Finland's Aaland Islands and give "real help" to the Finns in resisting the Russian invasion today created a furore in the Swedish Riksdag (Parliament).

Sandler resigned as foreign minister last March when the government refused to adopt "certain immediate measures" which he proposed for protection of the Aaland Archipelago lying at the entrance to the Gulf of Bothnia, between Sweden and Finland.

The strategic islands are Finnish, by League of Nations grant, but are populated largely by Swedes.

Assails Neutrality

Sandler assailed Sweden's entire neutrality policy, said that "Swedish national feelings have suffered one of the worst degradations" and that the government refused to protect its interests against the spread of bolshevism.

His statement before Parliament today, taking the deputies by surprise, was cheered loudly, but Pre-

British Refusal To Stop Searching U.S. Mail Reported

Copyright by New York Times

London, Jan. 17.—The British foreign office sent a reply tonight to the American protest against British interference with American mails bound for Germany. The reply is said to amount to a carefully qualified refusal to cease searches.

The United States complained that the practice of forcing neutral ships into British ports for search amounts to an act of "censorship" and contravenes The Hague convention of 1907.

8 German Refugees Describe Life as French Sub's Prisoners

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Jan. 17.—Eight Germans whose voyage to the United States as immigrants was interrupted December 16 when a French submarine took them off the Italian liner Saturnia and held them for ten days, reached New York today on the Vulcania.

The men, all refugees, told of having slept uncomfortably on the submarine floor while it continued war patrol duty, journeying hundreds of miles between the Canary Islands and the Azores.

They were taken to Casablanca the day after Christmas. Finally, after questioning by French officers who sought military information, they were taken on a French cruiser to Gibraltar, where the Vulvania called January 8.

David Werner Meyer, 27-year-old engineer from Berlin, said food conditions in Germany were becoming serious but that there was no other manifestation of the war in the capital. The German people are unaware of what war is like, and he thinks if the Allies ever attack large

Drive Frozen Out

By the Associated Press

Helsinki, Jan. 17.—Death-dealing, cold laid a deterring hand on Russia's war machine tonight, but the Finns reported their troops were driving toward a new victory near Salla, above the Arctic Circle.

Phenomenal 54-degree below zero temperature restrained the Russian air force, which has been raining death and destruction on Finnish towns, and apparently immobilized Russian ground forces which have been attacking on the Karelian Isthmus.

Temperatures were so low that touching a piece of metal with a bare hand raised immediate blisters. Movement of tanks and armored cars was hazardous even if no shots were fired.

Front-line trips by correspondents were called off by the Finns because of the danger of freezing to death.

Clad in their warmest Arctic clothing and calling upon their unusual resistance to low temperatures, the Finns were reported driving Soviet troops back in the Salla region.

Red Retreat Reported

(The Copenhagen newspaper Berlinske Tidende reported a general Russian retreat in the Salla sector, involving 40,000 troops.

(The newspaper's correspondent on the northern front wrote that the Russians apparently had given up hope of holding the frigid Salla sector for the winter. The 40,000 retreating Russians were reported closely pursued by Finnish units, which hoped to inflict heavy rearguard punishment.)

An army communique said only that "our troops are fighting successfully in the direction of Salla," near the eastern border of Finland, but other Finnish sources said developments in the Salla region raised hopes of further successes.

Two days ago reports from Salla said the Finns had cut Russian supply lines, leaving the Soviet troops without sufficient food to carry through their winter campaign.

The Red army was reported to have dug itself in behind heavy fortifications, while bombing planes attempted to drop provisions from the air.

The Finnish communique said the Finns routed an enemy company northeast of Lake Ladoga yesterday, killing 70 Russians and capturing two tanks.

Finns Bomb Enemy

Finnish dispatches reported certain foreign governments had asked for price quotations on captured Russian tanks. Foreign general staffs were said to be interested in dissecting the Soviet products to see what new developments they might contain.

Military observers estimated the Finns have captured or destroyed 500 Russian tanks since the war started.

IF THIS BE TREASON

LECTURER-SLEUTH: Blond, brilliant Graham Hutton, the personable young British economist, who lectured here last year, is the new chief of the American section of the British Secret Service. So says the London grapevine.

RIVAL BROKERS: They smile at the SEC about the sharp rivalry between big brokerage houses like Morgan, Stanley about whose name shall head the list when a new flotation of bonds is advertised jointly, with a list of bond firms handling the issue.

* * * *

Sometimes they match pennies or draw lots to decide whose name shall lead all the rest; quite boyish. Sometimes they take turns. For a long time the firm of Kuhn, Loeb has declined to let its name be used in an ad unless it was at the top, like Abou Ben Adam's.

TWO PER CENT: The same gifted income and Treasury sleuths who unhorsed Pendergast at Kansas City have, according to Capitol Hill gossip, been assigned to work on the Two Per Cent Club in Indiana, and some of them have, in fact, been there for months. So far they have harvested a rich crop of rumors.

* * * *

The spies doubtless filed voluminous reports, but actually learned little.

Wisest opinion was that the one-day seminar at the Mayflower was just window-dressing, that the serious business of the German agents was transacted elsewhere, probably at the gloomy red brick German Embassy near Thomas Circle.

* * * *

Ostensible reason for the German confab was to discuss plans for getting out of the country the 600 German sailors off the scuttled Columbus.

Some wags said the real reason might be to find ways of keeping some of them in this country.

"—Nazi Big 3 and 600 sailors"

U. S. officials will breathe easier when the 600 sailors have shoved off from these shores. Theoretically, as stranded sailors they have a right to spend a limited but untrammeled time ashore. Actually, they are likely to be under surveillance.

A few of the ship's officers have been allowed shore leave from Ellis Island.

Also, it costs $1,500 a day to feed and shelter the 600, and our immigration officials want a German name on the dotted line for their board and room and expenses homeward.

What did the 12 consuls contribute to the plans of the Nazi Big Three? By this time certain American officials probably have a complete report.

Senate Inquiry Into Banking Is Reported Fought

By the Associated Press

Usually reliable sources reported yesterday that Administration officials were opposing Senate hearings into monetary and banking policies on the grounds that they might check business recovery and disturb party and national harmony.

Chairman Wagner (Democrat), of New York, called the Banking and Currency Committee together yesterday for a decision as to whether hearings should be conducted but no decision was reached.

One of the reasons Administration officials were reported to be opposing hearings was the public clashes in recent months between the President's monetary and fiscal advisers.

Textile Hands Cowed, NLRB Inquiry Told

Examiner's Letter Likens Conditions To 'Tobacco Road'

By the Associated Press

A trial examiner's word picture of alleged anti-union activities in Gaffney, S. C., textile mills, among people he described as "characters right out of Tobacco Road," was made public yesterday before the House committee investigating the Labor Board.

Copies of two informal letters, running to 1,200 words, written by Examiner C. W. Whittemore to George O. Pratt, chief examiner here, while he was conducting a board hearing in Gaffney in December, 1938, described "starved, starving people and tired land. Girls with yellow teeth, who chew snuff to keep dirt from their lungs. Stupid faces, resigned when sober, but lynching brutes when roused by liquor."

Whitemore's letters asserted four of five Gaffney mills were controlled by two brothers he identified as the "Hendricks," and that union organization was resisted through attempts of the employers to organize "good fellowship" clubs.

"Herded" to Church

"Thugs and (religious) fanatics herded union members into the clubs," the examiner wrote. "It was a clear case of 'come to Jesus, brethren—or I'll blow your guts out.'"

The hearing was on complaint of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, a C. I. O. affiliate, charging the Alma, Limestone and Hamrick mills at Gaffney with discouraging union organization.

Whittemore, in an intermediate report last April, recommended that the board order the mills to stop alleged intervention, to disestablish a company union and to reinstate 22 discharged employes, but the case has been reopened and another hearing is to be held next Monday in Spartanburg, S. C.

Whittemore described a "preacher parker" who, he said, "led religion-drunk 'prayer bands' from one company house to another, foretelling the end of the world." Whittemore explained:

"Because—and he quoted glibly—Revelations tells us that just before the end chariots shall be seen—out of the sea will rise the devil—and on the foreheads of people will be seen the 'mark of the beast.' The devil, he says, is John L. Lewis—the 'mark of the beast' is Communism.

Calls It Tragic Farce

"I asked about the chariots," the examiner added. "Triumphantly he answered, 'automobiles.'"

"It sounds humorous," Whittemore commented, "but the effect is tragic. Those who can't swallow the religious advice of the preachers are impressed by a half-dozen thugs who use physical persuasion.

"Men who admitted all types of crimes, leaders in Hamrick's 'Good Fellowship Clubs,' formed to bring C. I. O. members to Jesus. It's fantastic at your distance, and hardly believable. Here, it is tragic and revolting."

To substantiate his accusation of "thugs," the examiner wrote that an 18-year-old witness had been threatened with violence as soon as Whittemore and the board attorney, Warren Wood, were out of town.

"It is heart-rending to see one witness after another come to the witness chair, start to tell his story, catch Hamrick's eye and then stutter his or her answers until courage returns," he wrote.

Whittemore declared the "bravest of the brave" was Sam Bailey, a Negro who had headed a Negro union local in 1936 and since had become a tenant farmer. Whittemore told how he and Wood went to see him shortly before Christmas and "left Sam a handful of small bills" so the "chappies" could have presents. The examiner said, in answer to questions, that to the best of his recollection he had given the Negro four $1 bills and that his motive was purely humanitarian.

Calls County Controlled

Whitteore charged that the "Hamricks" took the cream of mill profits, had withdrawn most of their own stock "and for operating capital are using RFC money."

"They control the county officials—the sheriff—the local police force, the Representative (in the State Legislature) from this district," he wrote. "Their major mill property is policed by two deputized officers, whose salaries they pay.

"And they control 1,000 mill hands—control their bodies, their living and dying."

Whittemore expressed belief that some good had been accomplished by the hearing, that "I believe it has put heart and encouragement into the souls of the handful of union complainants. For the first time they have heard Lyman Hamrick promise to discharge any of his group of things who attempts to interfere with these hearings."

Chiropractor Guilty Of Texas Kidnaping

Beaumont, Tex., Jan. 17 (AP).—Dr. W. C. Welch, 2, Port Arthur chiropractor, was found guilty today of the ransom kidnaping on December 7 of 11-year-old Irwin Mingle and was sentenced to 15 years in prison.

Irwin was found the next day in the attic of a vacant house near the chiropractor's residence. Dr. Welch, for many years an acquaintance of the Mingle family, was in the searching party that heard Irwin's cries.

Long Machine Faces Run-off As Rural Returns Cut Lead

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

Mrs. Sam Jones, wife of the Louisiana gubernatorial candidate, gives him a "victory" kiss although he trails Gov. Earl K. Long in the Democratic primary

New Orleans, Jan. 17 (AP).—Jubilant at partial victory in yesterday's Democratic primary, Louisiana "reform" forces looked today to a run-off test to wrest the governorship from Earl Long and break the 12-year rule of Huey Long and his political heirs.

The brother of the slain "Kingfish" held a plurality of slightly over 50,000 with only about 150,000 votes uncounted, but apparently had failed of the clear majority necessary to win the nomination. This is the first time since 1928 that the Long machine has not swept its objectives easily in the first vote.

Long tonight refused to admit that he would be forced into a run-over, but Sam Jones, Lake Charles attorney, leading the field of four antiadministrationists, announced he would take the stump this week in preparation for the second primary February 20.

New Orleans Votes In

With 1,060 of 1,703 precincts reported, Long had 149,920 votes; Jones, 99,743; State Senator James A. Noe, of Monroe, 77,867; James H. Morrison, of Hammond, 24,152; Vincent Moseley, Opelousas, 5,442.

This total included virtually complete returns from New Orleans where Long ran strongly with the support of Mayor Robert Maestri.

Jones' backers insisted Long drew his maximum strength Tuesday and their man would get the votes of the three eliminated candidates regardless of what these three might say. The governor declared, however, he would get 80 per cent of the Noe vote and was a "cinch" for eventual election.

Noe, stormy former governor and as ardent an admirer of Huey Long as he was a critic of Earl Long, insisted the "crossroads" vote would sweep him into second place if not directly into the four-year gubernatorial term.

Investigation Begins

While returns from outstate still dribbled in, a Federal grand jury began an investigation of irregularities in yesterday's turbulent balloting. "Say anything you like but don't forget to say we were robbed," said a spokesman for Morrison.

Long's ticket seemed riddled by the ballot, with his candidates for attorney general, State treasurer and State superintendent of education either apparently defeated or facing a runoff.

Eugene Stanley, fighting New Orleans district attorney who battled Huey Long for years, appeared to have won the post of attorney general on his campaign promise he would stop "graft and corruption" and reform the courts. He opposed Francis P. Burns, Long candidate.

Long said "the only thing I'm worried about is Burns and Christenberry." Earle J. Christenberry, Huey Long's former secretary, was a candidate for State treasurer.

On Capitol Hill

Sponsored by Veterans of Foreign Wars, a bill to grant pensions of from $20 to $60 monthly to permanently disabled war veterans was introduced yesterday by Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts. The bill would grant pensions for total disability even though not arising from service of the veterans.

McCORMACK

Pointing out that it has been 23 years since this country entered the World War, McCormack said the Government, following previous wars had assumed the burden of caring for all the disabled veterans within about 20 years.

Recurrent efforts to close the Congressional Record to all matter except the remarks of Congressmen themselves had the support yesterday of Representative Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, House majority leader.

Rayburn notified his colleagues that he would object to printing "extraneous matters" in the Record, which costs $45 a page to publish.

Representative Martin J. Kennedy (Democrat), New York, yesterday requested Secretary of State Hull to suspend negotiations with Canada for the proposed St. Lawrence-Great Lakes waterway pending action on his resolution for a House Interstate Commerce Committee investigation into the project.

Simultaneously 17 organizations headed by the Albany port district commission met here and adopted a platform opposing the waterway. They agreed that "any benefits which might accrue from either the transportation or power aspects are far outweighed by their detrimental effects, and that the whole project should therefore be vigorously opposed."

A startling addition to the Senate's secretarial staff was made yesterday in the person of—a Senator.

The newcomer, secretarial assistant to Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, is Senator Chandler Bigelow (Republican), of Massachusetts. The catch is that he's a State Senator.

Lodge said he thought it a good idea for State and Federal legislators to learn more about each other's business, particularly in view of the increasing number of laws involving Federal-State cooperation.

Farmers Gain By Trade Pacts, Grady Says

Feels House Hearing Plan Is Not a Form Of Sharing Wealth

By the Associated Press

Taking sharp issue with a Republican contention that reciprocal trade agreements constituted a "share-our-wealth" program, Henry F. Grady, Assistant Secretary of State, urged Congress yesterday to extend the executive power to negotiate the treaties.

Grady appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee.

When Representative Knutson (Republican), of Minnesota, a committee member argued that the program was a wealth-sharing idea, Grady replied that industry in the United States, with higher pay for labor and shorter hours, "still can produce and compete in world markets." He added that half of American exports were in manufactured goods.

"Because our method is the negotiation of bilateral agreements with individual countries," he said, "the mistaken view is often held that the benefits provided by these agreements should not be generalized to other countries, but should be restricted to the trade between ourselves and the country with which each agreement is negotiated.

"This policy would involve the application of discriminations which would provoke retaliations, and would draw us into the trade-restricting policies followed by those governments which seek to balance their imports and exports with individual countries."

Using charts to buttress his arguments, Grady said that farmers had received millions of dollars of added income since the advent of the trade program.

He said the cattle producers' 1939 income was far higher than in 1932, before the reciprocity system started, despite cattle imports. He said that higher prices always attract imports and speculated that farmers preferred high prices and some imports to low prices and no imports.

Dairymen, he declared, have 99.5 per cent of the domestic market, asserting that "lamentations that the dairy market has been rumed" were unjustified.

He went on to say that corn producers had 100 per cent of the domestic market in 1937-38 and added:

"I don't know of any way that could be increased."

Grady said that corn imports in 1936 were attributable to a shortage caused by the drought.

Grady said that if Senate ratification of reciprocal trade treaties were required it would mean "a complete blackout" of executive tariff-making authority. "Ratification," he said, "is tantamount to repeal."

Van Zandt Hits Administration Defense Policies

Representative Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, told the Washington Passenger Association last night that efforts are being made to "stampede the American people into spending billions for defense, when the national debt is a far more serious vent in our armor."

Speaking at the association's twenty-seventh annual banquet in the Willard Hotel, Van Zandt said:

"It is unfair to place the burden of national defense upon any one group. We must not indulge in 'soak the rich' taxes. If taxes are necessary, they should be general taxes, so that everyone can make his contribution to the cost of defending the country."

Bell, Sullivan Take Over Posts

Daniel W. Bell, 47, capped 28 years of service in the Treasury by becoming undersecretary yesterday and John L. Sullivan, of Manchester, N. H., became assistant secretary. Secretary Morgenthau presided over the installations.

In addition to former duties of managing the Treasury's fiscal affairs, Bell was assigned supervision over the office of comptroller of the currency, which supervises all national banks.

Ohio's Third Term Pledge Challenged

Rep. Harter Questions Party Chief's Authority To Bind Delegates

The plan of Ohio Democratic politicians to organize a slate of convention delegates who would switch to a third term for President Roosevelt was challenged yesterday by Representative Harter, Ohio Democrat, while Senator Donahey, who was to play a leading part, said he had not been consulted.

Donahey did say, however, according to the Associated Press, that he had filed in Ohio a declaration of his candidacy for the Presidential nomination.

Meanwhile former Representative Charles O. West said, after a call to the White House, that he saw no evidence that the President was disturbed at word that Ohio's 52 delegates would be favorable to a third term.

This was followed by a prediction by Senator Pepper, Florida Democrat, that Florida's 14 delegates would back the President for a third term.

Limbach's Authority Questioned

Harter questioned the authority of Arthur L. Limbach, Ohio Democrat chairman, to pledge the party's convention delegates "without consulting those who should be consulted."

His reference was to a statement by Limbach that Ohio delegates would be pledged nominally to support Donahey as a "favorite son," but they would vote as a unit for a third term if the first ballot trend indicated that the convention favored a third term.

"The anouncement is a surprise to me," Harter said. "How a State chairman can assume to speak for the delegates before they are chosen. I can't understand."

The slate of delegates would be organized to be entered in the primary to be held in Ohio in May. Under Ohio law, in order that delegates may be instructed to support a particular candidate, the latter must give his consent in writing.

President Puts Down Foot

Ohio Democrats first proposed to enter Mr. Roosevelt's name in the primary. But the President put his foot down on this suggestion. He was unwilling to give the necessary written consent.

There were intimations after West called at the White House yesterday that the Limbach announcement had made unnecessary any further efforts to persuade the President to allow his name to be entered in the primary.

Pepper said the President would be in a position to step out at the end of his present term with a "glorious record behind him," but he believed the country would want to draft him for a third term.

Under the plan announced by Limbach, the Ohio delegation would be pledged to support any man the President wished to designate as his successor.

Alaskans Want Farley

Juneau, Alaska, Jan. 17 (AP).—Democratic National Committeeman John A. Hellenthal keynoted the Territorial party convention today with a plea for the nomination of James A. Farley for President "unless world conditions make it necessary to draft Roosevelt." He described Farley as the "best friend Alaska ever had."

Garner Not to Quit

Dallas, Tex., Jan. 17 (AP).—Co-chairman E. B. Germany, of the Garner-for-President headquarters, said today that Vice President Garner was in the Presidential race to the finish.

His statement came in rebuttal to a prediction by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson in Philadelphia last night that Garner would withdraw soon as a candidate. Johnson said he was "sorry to say" President Roosevelt, after Garner's withdrawal, would be re-elected.

Burlew Lashes 300 Waiting For President

Interior Employes Leave Desks in Hope Of Seeing Roosevelt

More than 300 Interior Department employes yesterday received a bitter tongue-lashing, all because their grapevine information was correct in substance, but two hours premature.

From a source as yet undiscovered, the employes found out that President Roosevelt was to visit the department to see scale models of the Jefferson Memorial, on display in the Park and Planning Commission offices. Eager to see the President, they flocked to the corridors.

Emerging from his office at about 3:30 p. m., Undersecretary Ebert K. Burlew was confronted by what was described as "a sea" of employes, packed along the corridors.

"Paid to Work, Not Loaf"

Burlew flew into a rage.

"Get back to your desks in a hurry," he was quoted as shouting, "and make out leave slips for the time taken off. You're paid to work, not loaf."

Last night Burlew admitted he was sorry at the outburst. He knew, however, that the Presidential visit was not due until long after working hours but could not disclose the exact time to the employes.

The Census Bureau has taken time out to deny as erroneous statements to the effect that there is no legal compulsion to answer the inquiries of census enumerators.

If you don't answer the questions, Director William L. Austin points out, you are liable to a fine of $100 or 60 days in jail. If you willfully give incorrect information, the penalty is $500 or one year.

Fortunately, he says, in 150 years of census taking, it has rarely been necessary to resort to compulsion.

Yesterday's debut of a new sinusoidal wave from an organ was something less than prompt.

Several hundred Patent Office employes and friends jammed the Commerce auditorium yesterday afternoon to hear a performance of the electrical organ. Someone kicked a wire.

Jerking the wire left the organ in the same condition as absence of a pumper would leave an old-fashioned air organ.

Meanwhile, James A. G. Koehl, attorney for the company making the music box, lectured on how an organ, using electricity, manufactures notes, tones, timbres, harmonics, etc. Westley F. Curtis, of Washington, gave a chalk-talk laying bare the inner secrets of the machine.

Engineers were working all the time, and when the talks were over they managed to get the musical robot to sing "Roses Are Blooming in Picardy." And, about an hour after he was scheduled to do so, H. Jerome Graham, organist at Universalist National Memorial Church, played a concert.

Group Charges N. Y. Police in Christian Front

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—A National Guard official hinted today that cordite powder found when 17 "Christian Front" members were arrested on charges of seditious conspiracy had been taken from a Regular United States Army base.

A second development was a charge by the Nonsectarian Anti-Nazi League that it possessed evidence that 27 New York City policemen were enrolled in the "Christian Front" movement.

Police Commissioner Valentine announced a suspended police lieutenant had belonged for a "short period," but had withdrawn.

When Valentine was advised today that the New York Times had received a letter stating that 3,423 members of the police department were Christian Front members and was asked concerning the known membership and plans for investigation, he made this written reply:

"The membership of members of the police department in the organization is unknown, but I doubt very much if it is as high as the figure stated. The matter is under investigation by appropriate officials."

Lieut. Col. Edward Bowditch, inspector general of the Twenty-seventh Division, New York National Guard, said Federal agents had traced "to their source" the explosives and 3,500 rounds of ammunition found in the possession of the alleged conspirators.

Bowditch is conducting an investigation of connections between the National Guard and the "Christian Front" group. Several of those arrested were present or former members of the National Guard. Two are Marine and Naval Reservists and one a German-American Bundsman.

In Boston, Gov. Aiken of Vermont, a Republican, asserted the arrests were an attempt by the Administration to increase the "war fever" and to "teach a lesson to other citizens who feel like criticizing the Government."

Hearse, Corpse And All, Goes to Jail in Violation

A hearse bearing a corpse and four live men was impounded by police Tuesday night for offenses which cost Walter J. Banner, colored, 34, the driver, $32 in fines at Traffic Court yesterday.

Policeman W. J. Middleton and his partner, H. L. Truex, Twelfth Precinct, stopped the burial car at Lincoln road and Rhode Island avenue northeast, for speeding. Banner, Middleton testified, did not have a driver's license so the policemen drove the hearse to the station, not knowing that it contained a body.

Charges of speeding, no permit, bad brakes and no emergency control were placed against Banner. He explained to the court that he had been to Glenn Dale Hospital. His companions, all colored, were released.

Miss Curie came to lecture in 30 American cities

Franklin Disciples Rewrite Advice to: Later to Bed . . .

Philadelphia, Jan. 17 (AP).—Modern disciples of Benjamin Franklin gave a party for Latin-American diplomats on Poor Richard's 234th birthday tonight and flaunted his "early to bed, early to rise" advice.

Members of the Poor Richard Club, an old Philadelphia organization which calls Franklin its "patron saint," took over two floors of a downtown hotel to bring the envoys and United States advertising men and manufacturers together in a spirit of "let's play."

The "playing" lasted until dawn. Banquet highlight was the presentation of the club's gold medal of achievement to Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director General of the Pan American Union, for improving social, cultural and economic relations with the Americas to the south.

Policeman Sentenced For Shooting at Officer

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—Elmer Griffith, 48-year-old Baltimore policeman, was sentenced today to two years for shooting at a police lieutenant.

The criminal court jury denied his plea of temporary insanity. Judge Edwin T. Dickerson told Griffith the sentence would have been more severe if there were not some doubt of the "quality of your mentality."

N. Y. Fears Coal Shortage From Strike

Nearly All Deliveries Halted as Temperature Falls Below Freezing

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Householders and superintendents of office buildings, hotels and apartment houses eyed their coal supplies anxiously tonight as the temperature fell far below freezing and a strike of coal handlers virtually halted all deliveries.

Daniel M. Rugg, chairman of the employers' negotiating committee, estimated 75 per cent of the industry was tied up, but Michael J. Cashal, international vice president of the Brotherhood of Teamsters and Chauffeurs (A. F. of L.), which called the strike for higher wages, fixed the percentage at a lower figure.

Cashal said men had struck in yards handling about 15 per cent of the distribution, while dealers handling about 30 per cent had locked their men out as a retaliatory measure.

The union demanded $1.20 an hour for a 48-hour week and an extra man on each truck to reduce unemployment. The men now receive $1 an hour.

Mayor LaGuardia said he had assurances from the union that deliveries to schools and hospitals would not be affected.

The poor were likely to suffer, though, for the union announced it intended curbing small dealers buying a ton or two at a time directly from the yards for peddling. There are about 1,500 of these small dealers distributing about 10,000 tons daily.

A somewhat similar strike, affecting 700 workers in Jersey City, Bayonne, North Hudson and Hoboken, also was called.

Rugg, speaking for the New York City employers, said the merchants had been in contact with William H. Davis, chairman of the State Mediation Board, and would be happy to resume the negotiations which broke off yesterday. Cashal, however, said there was little hope a conference could be arranged before Friday.

Rugg denied there were lockouts and declared the union had instructed its men not to report for work.

Meanwhile, union officials called a meeting to determine whether the strike should be extended to companies handling fuel oil.

Unidentified Man Dies In Baltimore Plunge

Baltimore, Jan. 17 (AP).—An unidentified man, about 30, jumped to his death late today from an upper floor of the Mercantile Trust Building.

Police found a note in his pocket asserting: "Just a no-good bum that has lost everything. Forget the identification. I have done nothing but harm my family."

WPA Accused Of Employing Secret Police

By the Associated Press

Representative Wolcott (Republican), of Michigan, charged yesterday that WPA employes were being used "as the secret police of the Government" but Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, reported a denial from Col. F. C. Harrington, WPA administrator.

"Hitler has his Gestapo and Stalin has his Ogpu," Wolcott declared. "We must be cautious the New Deal not create a secret police force."

He said an "information service representative" of the WPA in New York had made a report on Representative Taber (Republican), of New York) after Taber's questioning of Harry Hopkins, former WPA head, at an appropriations hearing.

A man who signed himself William M. Cohen, Wolcott said, wrote the report which Wolcott said related that "there have been persistent reports" that Taber had "conspired" to have telegrams sent to Washington opposing WPA legislation.

"I don't think Congress intended to create secret police," Wolcott said. "Did you know the WPA had information service representatives throughout the country?"

"What the WPA has," Voorhis told the House after a conference with Harrington, "is a small number of men whose duty it is to see that corrections are made of any wrong reports concerning the WPA."

Finn President Asks U. S. Help Stop Bombings

Send Planes, Guns, Kallio Asks, for Use Only in Defense

By Harold Denny

Copyright by New York Times

Helsinki, Jan. 17.—President Kallio appealed to Americans today to provide Finland with a fleet of fighter planes to defend Finnish civilians from attacks which Russian airplanes are making on towns and cities with their daily toll of civilian lives.

The plan outlined by the President in an interview today is that an adequate number of modern pursuit planes—he did not say how many—and antiaircraft guns for villages which are now bearing the brunt of the Russian attacks be given by American sympathizers.

Such planes would never be used beyond the Finnish borders and would not take part in military operations against Soviet troops or against enemy airplanes engaged in genuine military operations against Finnish troops.

Suggests Adoption Plan

President Kallio conceived that provision of these planes would be part of the humanitarian work for Finland already being carried out in the United States and other democratic countries, such as the gifts of food and clothing.

"We deeply appreciate this help," said President Kallio. "It is generous of your people and very valuable. But if our civilians—our old men and women and children—are to be killed in their houses, as is happening every day in our cities, towns and villages, they will have no need for food and clothing. Finland simply cannot afford to buy all the airplanes and guns needed to beat off the Soviet's air raids."

When asked just how Americans could contribute these things, he immediately answered, "Why couldn't your American cities and towns adopt Finnish cities and towns?"

Our interpreter—President Kallio speaks nothing but Finnish—suggested that people in Washington might adopt Helsinki, that New York sympathizers might adopt Viipuri, and Chicago citizens might adopt Turkuabo. Kallio agreed with this, then added that since Finland was so small, whole States in America might adopt Finnish cities and towns.

The war is very close to President Kallio personally, for he has two sons at the front. He is working incredibly hard, as are all the higher Finnish officials whom I have met. When I went into his office today he was studying a sheaf of telegrams regarding yesterday's air raids in various parts of Finland.

"I am glad you have come here to see for yourself what really is happening," he said. "We have nothing to conceal. We only want the world to know the truth. We are deeply grateful for the help America has extended to us with humanitarian materials, but such help must be altered if the Finnish population is not to be massacred.

Faced by Total War

"Most of the towns have no air defenses at all and, as you have seen for yourself, Russian airplanes are raiding these defenseless towns, as well as larger places, killing old men, women and children and sometimes people who have been evacuated from the bigger places to such villages where we thought they would be safe because there was no possible military reason for bombing them. But now the Russians are carrying on a total war even against such as these.

"The good effect even of a little anti-aircraft defense upon our civilian population has been illustrated again and again. When a Soviet plane is shot down the people go on with new faith. But these towns and villages must have help. They must have fighter airplanes protecting them and anti-aircraft guns. We can provide the pilots and gunners but we cannot provide the planes and guns.

"Finland cannot be conquered. Though we suffer we never give up hope. Finland is stronger on the battlefield than Russia. That is why Russia is now waging war on our civilians."

Though President Kallio would not state the number of planes he believed necessary to defend Finnish civilians, neutral military observers here estimate that a force of 100 would be extremely effective but that there really should be 300 to take care of losses and repairs.

Nazis Massed Near Hungary, Says Polish Hero Visiting D. C.

Gen. Walter von Brauchitsch, commander of the German army, is now stationed near the Hungarian border with a force of 60,000 soldiers, it was reported here yesterday.

The information was brought to the Capital by Gen. Josef Haller, veteran of four wars and now minister of state for the refugee Polish government in France. Gen. Haller declined to speculate on significance of the Nazi troop concentration.

Ten regular divisions and large details from the Gestapo constitute the German army of occupation in Poland, he said.

Gen. Haller, who landed in New York last Friday, has come to this country for a three-month good will tour. He is not appealing for funds, he told a press conference at the Polish Embassy yesterday, but is attempting to acquaint officials and the American people with living conditions in conquered Poland.

He was received earlier yesterday by President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull. Gen. Haller said he talked 45 minutes with the President, who was "very much interested and asked a number of questions."

Sure of Allied Victory

The former Polish chief of staff sees "absolutely no possibility" of an alliance between Germany, England and France, directed against Russia.

He said he is confident the Allies will defeat Germany. When that victory is won, Poland "will deal with Russia," he declared.

The 66-year-old World War hero insisted that there has been no break in "the continuity of the Polish government." Poland continues, as an ally of France and Britain, to fight the Reich, he said, and the Polish forces now in France should be designated as the "Polish Army" rather than a "Polish Legion."

Nazi persecution of minority groups in Poland and Polish intellectual leaders is cruel and highly organized, while the technique in the Soviet-occupied area of Poland is "less methodical," he related. "The Germans had a thoroughly prepared program and they ruthlessly executed it," he confirmed.

Gen. Haller said the Jews in German Poland have refused an offer to "buy their civil liberties" for $180,000,000. The Jewish population is being herded into ghettos, he reported, and is rapidly losing any freedom of movement.

Simultaneously the Poles are being compressed into the smallest possible area to clear the land for German "living room," he said.

Expected to Fight Reds

The Polish official refused to say whether his government would accept Poland's frontier with Germany when the war has been won. He charged that Hitler "prepared for six years for this aggression." The Polish army was ready for war with the U. S. S. R., he said, but not with the Reich. "We trusted Hitler but not the Soviets," he added.

Gen. Haller addressed a meeting of Polish-Americans in Baltimore last night. He is expected to confer today with Norman Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross.

Members of his party are Arka Bozek, member of the 24-man Polish National Council and holder of the German Iron Cross for his World War service, and two other Polish officials, Alfred Marski and Janusz Stamierowski.

Real Aid for Finns Is Urged in Sweden

mier Per Albin Hansson refused to support the demand.

"The Swedish government should have dispatched armed forces to the Aaland Islands in order better to secure their neutrality," Sandler said. "It is not yet too late to do something. The last word has not yet been said.

"If the Red army in this war should defeat Finland this would mean the complete bolshevization of Finland with the consequence that the Finnish race must take refuge in Sweden and Norway.

"Real Swedish help to Finland would be the most effective limitation of the danger that Sweden may be drawn into the great war."

Of the Aaland Islands, which in Russian hands would place Soviet bombing planes only a half-hour from Stockholm, Sandler said that their fate "must be considered to be a sympton of a condition which will bring still further consequences."

"I consider the Aaland a reality of such importance that I was unable to hold my post as foreign minister in the face of the opposition of my former colleagues," he said.

Broadly assailing the Swedish government's neutrality policy, Sandler said that "when certain incidents occurred Sweden was not prepared to risk her stake."

Collaboration Defeated

"The government's policy, is, as a matter of fact, the wreckage of northern collaboration," he asserted. "The policy of Scandinavian collaboration has suffered a defeat.

"The meeting of the northern sovereigns last October was excellent and thrilling but behind the facade, however, the actual collaboration which the situation demanded was quietly torpedoed."

Premier Hansson answered Sandler's statements briefly, asserting that Sandler himself had not shown great strength during the Italo-Ethiopian affair when Sandler was a leading figure in the League of Nations councils.

Earlier in the session proposals had been made that all Communist members be expelled from the Riksdag, in action similar to that taken by the French Chamber of Deputies yesterday.

The premier rejected the proposals but warned:

Red Maps Point to Sweden

Helsinki, Jan. 17 (AP).—A Swedish police chief studying Finnish air raid precautions today said maps taken from captured Russian airmen showed detailed routes from Soviet airfield southwest of Leningrad to points in Sweden and Norway.

"This looks like evidence they expect to do some bombing in Norway and Sweden," Police Chief Ernst Fontell, of Gothenburg, declared.

The Swedish police chief said he was traveling in Finland to study methods of combating air raids by profiting from the Russian attacks against Finnish cities.

"In Gothenburg alone we already have built 1,000 shelters," he said. "In another fortnight there will be 2,000 ready."

WHAT YOU SHOULD KNOW ABOUT FACE PIMPLES

These disfiguring spots affecting the outer or surface layer of the skin often result from a temporary disturbance, or merely from incorrect cleansing.

You can relieve the itchy, burning soreness and help your skin by using an ointment whose medication stays in active contact with the pimply spots. Apply it every night and leave it on all night. It does a world of good.

For nearly 45 years people have used Resinol Ointment to fill this need. It soothes the irritated oil ducts where many surface pimples start, and aids healing. Carefully cleansing the skin with Resinol Soap helps to quicken the pleasing results. Its gently active lather is refreshing and it rinses easily.

Germany's Plight Is Like 1916

Britain Gets Dollars

Britain's exports last month totaled £40,169,000 ($160,676,000) against £37,360,000 ($149,440,000) in November and £39,099,000 ($156,396,000) for December, 1938. Imports last month aggregated £86,582,000 ($346,328,000) against £83,988,000 ($335,952,000) for November, and £74,132,000 ($296,528,000) for December, 1938.

It is the export trade which gives Britain valuable American dollars and other foreign exchange for the prosecution of the war. Until the conflict broke out in September, export figures for the first eight months of the year had increased £6,700,000 ($26,800,000). For the entire year Britain's exports were down £31,900,000 ($127,600,000), a drop of 25 per cent on 1938.

British contraband control authorities disclosed today that one American cargo vessel, the name of which was not given, was under detention yesterday at a control base within the forbidden combat zone around the British Isles defined by President Roosevelt. Details of the ship's suspected cargo were not available. The vessel was brought in five days ago.

Pleading that "it might be helpful to the enemy," a spokesman for the ministry of economic warfare refused to give further information today about the case of the United States liner Manhattan, which was detained overnight on January 6 by the contraband control at Gibraltar.

Million Tons Seized

Last week the British contraband haul amounted to 3,364 tons. Coupled with additional seizures by the French navy, the Allies are now believed to have taken more than one million tons of goods destined for Germany since the outbreak of the war.

In his statement to Commons today Cross insisted that the blockade was not aimed against neutrals.

"We use every endeavor to smooth the path of neutral trade," he argued, subject always to the overriding consideration to our need, to exercise our belligerent rights to the full. It is in no sense our desire to build a wall against any neutral state. We are anxious to put nothing in the way of the freedom of the neutrals to import what they need from overseas for their legitimate home consumption."

Cross asserted that the Reich was now reduced to the same economic straits in which she found herself in 1916.

Zinc Bathtubs in Demand

"Germany," he declared, "has not the same resources now that she had 25 years ago. Her gold resources and currency and stocks of raw materials are far smaller now.

"Conditions of life in Germany are strained and rationing already extends to clothing and soap. The inhabitants of Germany are now shivering for lack of coal . . . There are signs of an abnormal desire to convert currency into goods from fear of inflation. There has been a rush to buy quantities of such goods as zinc bathtubs, because these are not rationed. A 'black market' in food is growing up in a number of centers."

In the industrial sphere, Cross added, Germany's difficulties were serious in regard to the supply of certain materials.

"There are shortages of petroleum, iron, copper, wool, oils and fats, and many other commodities," he said. "The requirements of the export trade are very naturally given priority over the home market. It is, therefore, in this export field that we shall find the best test of Germany's industrial discomfort. . . .

Cars Have No Tires

"Germany is exporting motor cars and bicycles without tires to neighboring neutrals . . .

"Rubber manufacture in Austria has slowed down through lack of raw materials and in the basic industries there is frequently a shortage of materials. Practically all Germany's supply of raw cotton and 85 per cent of her wool obtained normally from overseas and the present textile situation in Germany is such that rationing has had to be introduced for clothing of all kinds."

In conclusion Cross said Britain looked forward to the day when "we shall so strangle German economic life that she will no longer be able to sustain her war effort."

In the House of Lords, Viscount Cecil, of Chelwood urged that the minister directing the economic aspects of the war be given cabinet ranking, which Cross does not have. The appointment of former War Secretary Leslie Hore-Belisha to such a post has been suggested in lobby talk.

The government was believed to be taking steps to find a place for Hore-Belisha in the war cabinet.

Broader Scope

The proposed ministry, it was explained, would have a broader scope than the present ministry of economic warfare headed by Cross. The present ministry's tasks are confined principally to contraband control.

Also revived was talk of the appointment of a defense minister in charge of the entire army, navy and air force. First Lord of the Admiralty Winston Churchill has been mentioned for the post.

Capt. Losey Sent to Finland To Study Subzero Warfare

CAPT. ROBERT M. LOSEY

Capt. Robert M. Losey, Army flier and weather expert for the Air Corps here, yesterday was assigned to duty in Finland as air attache, to study the effect of subzero conditions on military operations.

In a series of orders, the War Department withdrew Maj. Frank B. Haynes, who was due for relief, from the military attache's post at Helsinki, and named Maj. George E. Huthsteiner, now assigned at Riga, Latvia, to take over the military post in Finland as well.

Losey, who will nominally be assistant to Huthsteiner, but will be the only American Army officer in Finland, will sail for his new post soon after conferences with military intelligence officials here.

Not since the 1917 campaign in Archangel has the world seen battles fought in such cold weather as 50 below zero temperatures, that now prevail in the Baltic.

The Army officer lives here at 2222 I street northwest. His wife, he said, would not accompany him to Helsinki.

we are going to confine ourselves to that passport case. We are here to try facts. We will show the use of false names, false birthdays, and that this bulk of false material was presented to assure the safe conduct granted American citizens abroad."

Cahill went on to outline the specific crime charged—that Browder in obtaining a passport in 1934 under his own name answered "none" to the question as to whether he had had such a document previously, when in reality he had obtained three under other names, according to the prosecutor.

Battle emphasized in his defense opening that Browder was not accused in the indictment of anything more than having entered this country on a passport obtained in 1934 "bearing his own name."

He, too, reminded the jurors that they were trying simply a "specific issue."

Battle's unsuccessful attacks upon the indictment had been particularly directed against allowing that phase of it mentioning Dozenberg, the recanting Communist, to stand.

Dozenberg, former Washington, D. C., resident, a mysterious man of middle age who is said by the Government to have been for years an agent of the Soviet secret police, has been called as a Government witness.

The selection of the jury, including one woman, required an hour and a half. The job was done with care to see that none who entered the box had any anti-Communist feeling.

The day's only witness, Charles Siegel, of the United States State Department, identified various passport transactions.

Navy to Press Plan to Speed Ship Orders

Seeks Authority to Place Contracts for Four Years at Once

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

In a move to speed up warship construction, the Navy will ask Congress to scrap existing procedure of presenting annual shipbuilding programs for vote and let orders be placed immediately for all ships to be laid down during the next four years.

Rear Admiral Samuel M. Robinson, coordinator of naval shipbuilding, said that if the pending 25 per cent expansion bill were approved by Congress and blanket authority to contract for ships granted, the greatest shipbuilding order in history would be placed by the Navy this spring.

About 185 ships, costing approximately $1,930,000,000, would be contracted for with private shipbuilders or allocated to navy yards, Admiral Robinson stated. Keels of the ships would be laid during the next four years as shipways become available.

$30,000,000 to Be Asked

The naval official said a supplemental budget estimate totaling about $30,000,000 would be asked by the Navy later this session to permit 20 additional ships to be laid down next year, a total of 44 including those for which funds have already been requested.

In the budget now before Congress, $369,000,000 is proposed to carry on construction of ships already under way and to lay down 24 new ships. The additional $30,000,000 would provide nine destroyers, three submarines and eight auxiliaries.

The Navy's plan for speeding up construction was revealed by Admiral Robinson after he finished testifying before the House Naval Committee on the new authorization bill. While the exact procedure was not disclosed, some members of Congress thought that the method of granting contractual authority used in aircraft purchases might be contemplated.

Aimed to Avoid Lags

Under the proposed scheme, officials would be able to plan accurately for several years ahead and avoid construction lags, it was said. Under the annual contract basis, facilities are often idle, waiting for new construction to be started.

Admiral Robinson testified that the 77 to 79 combat ships in the bill would cost about $1,090,000,000, while the entire program, exclusive of battleships but including replacements, would total about $1,750,000,000.

Revealed for the first time were the numbers of ships of each type which the Navy plans to build under the bill. They were three aircraft carriers of 25,000 tons each, costing about $46,000,000 each; 11 cruisers, averaging 17,400 tons at an average cost of $34,600,000; 35 destroyers of 2,000 and 1,600 tons, costing an average of $8,300,000, and 30 submarines of 1,500 tons, costing about $6,000,000 each.

Mannerheim Vow Fight to Last Man

uable. He must fight one against 50.

"More purely and more faithfully than the men, the women have kept their hearts vigilant and maintained undying the flame aroused by the atrocities of our centuries-old enemies.

"They are carrying out all of the men's work except fighting. In my last bulletins I cited, in army orders, the bravery of the three 'Lottas' killed by Soviet aerial bombers on the Northern Front."

Praising the Russian soldier for his personal bravery, but showing contempt for Russian leadership, the Finnish commander in chief went on:

"I know the Russian soldier. I esteem him. He is hard and courageous, particularly when he is fighting a defensive war.

"The Russian knows how to die on the spot rather than surrender, particularly when he is menaced by he knows not what tortures if he is captured—praticularly when his own machine guns are trained on his back.

"One of my officers just back from Lapland informs me that a Soviet patrol fought to the last man. It was 43 degrees below zero (Centigrade) and when our soldiers attempted to take the Russians' rifles, their dead fingers snapped off like glass.

"Yes, the Soviet soldier is hard, and if his leadership . . ." Mannerheim did not finish the sentence, but his implication was clear.

He Is Also Legion

"But the Russian's importance lies in his numbers. A great mass inevitably constitutes a crushing force," he continued.

"Yet through foresight, determination and boundless courage, our men have halted the first wave of the invader's savage attack. We have held out for seven weeks—1 against 50—along a 600-mile land front and on an even greater sea front."

At this point the grizzled veteran of four wars made a renewed appeal for aid from outside sources, indicating that much more was needed.

The assistance given by France has been useful," he said, "but continued help is necessary.

"More is needed than mere expressions of international indignation against Russia's aggression."

Four Witnesses to Be Heard Today by Jury Investigating Foreign Agents' Activities

At least four witnesses will be called today before the special Federal grand jury here investigating espionage and propagandists.

Justice Peyton Gordon impaneled the grand jury in the District Court yesterday, appointing Arthur Seilmer Lord, 48, as foreman. Lord, a real estate salesman, lives at 3904 Eighteenth street northwest.

Conducting the investigation are Henry G. O'Donnell and Floyd M. Rett, special assistants to the Attorney General.

O'Donnell said today's four witnesses are from out of town but he declined to reveal their names.

Rett and O'Donnell have established offices in the Police Court Building and placed Miss Pauline Willoughby in charge.

Allan Baker, police officer assigned to the staff of District Attorney David A. Pine, yesterday instructed the jurors. The jurors chose Victor Cahill, 41, realty broker of 3601 Connecticut avenue, as assistant foreman. Named as secretary to the grand jury was Mrs. Frances Brett Bastian, 44-year-old housewife of 4130 Garrison street northwest

Italy 'Faces Necessity and Duty of Picking Up Arms at Any Moment,' Says Fascist Secretary

By the Associated Press

Rome, Jan. 17.—The new secretary of the Fascist Party, Ettore Muti, told Italians today that "Italy may face the necessity and duty at any moment of picking up arms."

Muti did not indicate whom Italy might have to fight and this left unchanged the general impression in foreign circles that she would remain out of the war as long as possible. However, one passage of his speech was interpreted as a rebuff to British and French gestures of conciliation, such as frequent press commendations of Italy's remaining on the sidelines. He said:

"It is absurd and dangerous to derive too much satisfaction from the recent demonstrations of international sympathy which are without justification or foundation and not even in harmony with the true sentiment of the Italian people, which has learned not to forget the history which it has lived dramatically, especially in these recent times."

Muti declared there was no change in Premier Mussolini's "anti-democratic, anti-Bolshevik, anti-bourgeois" policy in words which authoritative Fascists interpreted as meaning Italy would follow her own course independently of other powers.

Some attributed rejection of "international sympathy" to the Italian belief that Britain and France "would not hesitate to accept the Soviets as collaborators in formation of "a better world" if that could be made to coincide with British-French aims and dominance." This view was expressed in La Tribuna by Umberto Guglielmotti. Italy is bitterly anti-Soviet.

The newspaper Avvenire quoted Soviet radio stations as saying Italy was "World Enemy No. 1" and defying Italy to halt the march of Soviet armies.

The newspaper said the radio's statement was occasioned by "the success of Rome's plans" to combat bolshevism in the Balkans and "concrete aid which is being sent from Rome by land and sea to Finland."

German cities by air the German morale will be badly affected.

Seven of the Germans are Jewish refugees. The eighth, Attilio Bowinkel, was born in Italy, but is a Reich citizen because of his father's nationality.

The others were Seigmund Kuflik, of Prague; Erwin Weil, of Prague; Siegfried Sternkirk, of Trieste; Albert Schrekinker, Hugo Bleiberg and Dr. Kurt Hortner, all of Vienna.

The Saturnia was about 200 miles west of the Azores when the submarine Pascal signaled for her to stop. The submarine's first officer came aboard, examined the manifest, which had the names of several hundred refugees from Germany. He finally handed back the papers with the eight names checked off, apparently at random.

Bowinkel said the submarine commander and his crew of 71 treated them with courtesy and consideration.

The food, all canned, even to the bread, was good, the men said. They lost track of time and of the days, which were marked by several encounters with other ships, one a German tanker that was unsuccessfully chased. The others were the Maria, an Italian freighter, and an unnamed Greek freighter.

"We do not know why we were chosen among the more than 300 refugees on board the Saturnia," Bowinkel said. "Except that the first officer of the submarine had orders to take as many Germans between the ages of 18 and 52 as could be accommodated on his craft."

Coal Shortage Soon to Be Over, Reich Announces

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Berlin Jan. 17.—The coal shortage in Berlin soon will be over, according to an official announcement tonight. It said special facilities had been allotted for urban distribution and extra trainloads of coal were coming into the city.

The announcement was given to representatives of the foreign press but has not appeared in German newspapers.

The Nazi press issued encouraging statements from time to time to the effect that the situation would be relieved soon.

But it was months ago that the shortage—and the cold weather—began. The people have been saying, "certainly the problem is purely temporary. Undoubtedly it will be solved completely by the end of the winter."

Philadelphia, Jan. 17 (AP).—The number of newspapers of all classifications in the United States increased by 86 last year, but there were fewer daily newspapers published during the year, N. W. Ayer & Son, Inc., reported today.

The company's directory of newspapers and periodicals listed 13,281 dailies, weeklies, semiweeklies and triweeklies in publication at the end of 1939 as compared with 13,195 in 1938. There were 2,015 dailies as compared with 2,056 in 1938.

Senate Plans Quiz After Pact With Japan Dies

Treaty Expires Jan. 26; Hull Will Be Called to Hearing Starting Jan. 31

By the Associated Press

Chairman Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, said yesterday the Senate Foreign Relations Committee would take up the question of relations between the United States and Japan at its first meeting on January 31, five days after the present commercial treaty with Japan expires January 26.

Secretary Hull probably will be asked to report on the progress of negotiations on a possible new trade treaty, Pittman said.

Two proposals to embargo exports to Japan, as well as a resolution to invoke the neutrality act in connection with the Sino-Japanese war, will also be before the committee.

Restricted Exports Foreseen

Pittman himself has proposed that the President be given power to restrict exports because of alleged Japanese violation of American rights in China. Senator Schwellenbach (Democrat), of Washington, based a similar proposal on the allegation that Japan had violated its pledge for respect of the territorial integrity of China.

Senator Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa, who introduced a resolution yesterday calling on Congress to set in motion the machinery to place the neutrality act in operation in the Far East conflict, predicted today the committee would restrict exports to Japan.

Japan has brushed aside scores of claims of Americans for injuries to themselves or their properties in China. She argues that since the damages occurred during military operations, international law and American precedents clear her of liability.

Hundreds of Claims

Japan is engaged in extensive discussions with American officials in Tokyo and China striving to settle some hundreds of outstanding claims. Many of the largest claims are among those being disallowed, officials here learn.

The most valuable American properties damaged were those bombed or shelled during the attack on Shanghai. Among the claims is one for the several hundred thousand dollars by the International Telephone and Telegraph Co.

Allies Weigh Buying 8,000 Planes in U. S.

Roosevelt, Officials Of Treasury, Army And Navy Confer

By the Associated Press

British and French proposals to triple their present orders for American-made war planes were reported to have been discussed at a conference yesterday by President Roosevelt, Secretary Morgenthau and officials of the Army, Navy and other departments.

British and French officials have notified this Government they contemplate ordering for speedy delivery 8,000 or more planes and an even greater number of aircraft motors, reliable sources said.

Such purchases would call for a further expansion of an aircraft industry already working overtime on Army, Navy and foreign contracts and would raise numerous problems of taxation, coordination and financing.

Orderly Expansion Sought

Officials have indicated strongly, however, that a further expansion of manufacturing facilities, if orderly, would be welcomed as an aid to the national defense.

Provided difficulties can be ironed out, some manufacturers have expressed confidence the vastly increased orders could be completed in 18 months or less without delaying requirements of the expanding Army and Navy air services.

Supplying the engines was reported to be the "bottleneck" of the problem. They take longer to make than the planes. Material expansion of existing plants promises to involve foreign financing, which would raise tax complexities.

Nazis Make 2,000 Monthly

Despite a substantial expansion of their own output, Britain and France are understood by official experts to trail Germany materially in air strength. The Nazis have stepped up their production to more than 2,000 planes a month, according to reports accepted as reliable in official circles. This compares with possibly 1,500 monthly for the Allies.

Field Marshal Goering is credited also with some 9,000 first-line warplanes ready for action. British and French strength is believed to be less.

Sailors' Union Asks Unemployment Funds

Unemployment compensation for seafaring workers now exempted from social security benefits, was demanded yesterday by the National Maritime Union (C. I. O.) in a resolution presented to the Federal Security Administration.

President Roosevelt was quoted as saying he saw no reason why the unemployment compensation program should not be extended to seamen.

Gandhi Foresees Anarchy Unless Freedom Is Guaranteed

By International News Service

Poona, India, Jan. 17.—India has become impatient and unless there is some immediate guarantee of independence an outbreak of violence threatening "anarchy and red ruin" is almost inevitable, according to a written statement by Mohandas K. Gandhi.

The statement of Gandhi, who is seeking to free India from the British yoke without violence, says:

"The constituent assembly alone can produce a constitution truly and fully representing the will of the people.

"The assembly, if it comes into being as the result of an honorable settlement between us and the British people, will reflect fairly truly the best minds of India.

"The success of the experiment at the present stage of India's history depends upon the intention of the British statesmen to part with power without engaging India in a deadly, unorganized rebellion. . . .

"I know for certain that, if I cannot discover a method of non-violent action to the satisfaction of the All Indian National Congress, nothing on earth can prevent an outbreak of violence resulting for the time being in anarchy and red ruin.

"I hold that it is the duty of all communities and Englishmen to prevent such catastrophe."

Violence would begin in India apparently as a "fight between the communalists," Hindu and Moslem religious sectarians, Gandhi forecasts. Then, inevitably, it would engulf the British.

Army Revolt Reported in North China

Declared Localized So Far, With Chiang Seeking Settlement

By the Associated Press

London, Jan. 17—Reuters (British) News Agency said tonight that travelers reaching Shanghai from the southern part of Shansi Province had reported the breaking out of a revolt among troops of the Chinese General, Yen Hsi-shan.

Reuters quoted the travelers as saying that Gen. Yen's "old" army of 200,000 was "at sword's points" with his "new' army of 60,000 communist peasant volunteers in the north central province.

The revolt was said to be thus far localized, with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek attempting to bring about a peaceful settlement.

Some professed to see danger that the Chinese (communist) Eighth Army of Gen. Chu Teh might intervene in behalf of the "new" army and Generalissimo Chiang in behalf of the "old."

Port Bombarded

Hongkong, Jan. 17 (AP).—Japanese warships off the coast of Chekiang Province were reported today to have bombarded the Chenhai forts guarding the entrance to Ningpo, one of the principal treaty ports still in Chinese hands. Damage was said to be slight.

Wang Regime Seen Near

Shanghai, Jan. 17 (AP). -Prediction that a "new central government of China" would be formed by February 1 "under the leadership of the Japanese-favored Wang Ching-Wei, former Chinese premier, was made here today by Wang's followers.

A conference is to be held soon in Japanese-occupied Tsingtao to complete plans for "formation of a new political council which will organize a new government," they said. Wang a year ago was ousted from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's government after he advocated peace with Japan.

and concentration sites yesterday and shot down one Russian plane, the communique reported.

Russia Claims 11 Planes

Moscow, Jan. 17 (AP).—A Soviet Army communique tonight said 11 Finnish planes were downed in a fight with Russian aircraft.

Communiques from Tass, the official Soviet news agency, denied three Finnish war reports which it ascribed to a German news agency, an important German newspaper and the British Labor Party organ, the Daily Herald.

One communique, which Tass relayed from the headquarters of the Leningrad military area, challenged "German Trans-Ocean news agency reports" that Finns had found the frozen body of the Red army's Forty-fourth Division commander. A previous Soviet communique denied Finnish claims of the virtual annihilation of the Forty-fourth Division.

Tonight's communique said the Trans-Ocean report "does not correspond to the facts" and contended the commander, Gen. Vinogradoff, "is now in the area of the Forty-fourth Division."

In another communique, Tass described as a "fabrication" a report it said was carried in a December issue of the German newspaper, Frankfurter Zeitung, to the effect that return of the Petsamo Arctic region was one of the most important demands presented to Finland by the Soviet government in futile Moscow negotiations.

(In his review of Soviet-Finnish negotiations before the Russian Parliament on October 31 Premier Molotoff said the Finns agreed to Soviet proposals for the exchange of parts of the Rybachi and Sredni peninsulars, north of the Petsamo district, but that they had objected to other proposed territorial changes.

"Red army aviation has not bombarded and does not bombard the city of Helsinki, still less the working class districts of that city," the communique asserted.

Mrs. Whitney, who arrived yesterday, blamed a columnist for the divorce rumors.

release funds now reserved for that purpose in Finland and divert these to purchase nearby needed military equipment.

Jones reported that of the $10,000,000 credit already set up by the Export-Import Bank, $3,000,000 has been actually committed to the Finnish American Trading Corporation in New York for dollar exchange to be used exclusively for purchases in the United States. Terms were five years, with installment payments, and obligations guaranteed by the Finnish government. Jones said $500,000 of this has actually been disbursed, and another $2,500,000 about to move.

The Federal Loan Administrator said the Export-Import Bank now has loans outstanding of all kinds in various countries of $85,243,237 and undisbursed commitments of $59,095,994. He reported a net $2,344,776 "profit" for the bank in 1939, testifying that dividends on preferred stock for 1938 were 3 per cent, with funds on hand to pay dividends accrued to date.

Stranger Gives $20,000

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—An elderly white-haired man visited Minister G. A. Gripenberg at the Finnish Legation today and gave him £5,000 (about $20,000) to help Finland. He left without disclosing his identity.

The committee called Secretary Hull next Wednesday for testimony on the likely effect of a loan on neutrality policy. Members debated whether to throw open the next meeting to the public, with Chairman Wagner favoring open hearings. It was finally decided to hear Hull first in executive session.

Only one committee member spoke in defense of the President's loan plan—Senator Clark (Democrat), of Idaho. Clark stressed the integrity of the Finns, as evidenced by their debt payments, and favored prompt action.

Vice President Garner was said to have stated his opposition to a direct Governmental loan to Finland at Monday's White House legislative conference. He has taken no emphatic stand for or against the nonmilitary credit plan, it was said.

A majority of the Senate was noncommittal on either plan.

Also before the Banking Committee was a bill for a $60,000,000 loan by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, and a bill by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah authorizing a $25,000,000 RFC loan for Finnish purchases of commodities "grown produced or manufactured" in the United States.

Senator Brown said he would try to work out a compromise between the President's proposals and his own direct loan bill and have it ready for comment by Secretary Hull Wednesday.

Finnish diplomats have declared privately that their present pressing need is for military equipment speedily supplied, and not for food.

Two Democratic Senators who opposed the President on arms embargo repeal—Senators Wheeler, of Montana, and Gillette, of Iowa—supported the White House proposal. Wheeler said he would vote for a nonmilitary loan but wanted it "clearly understood that sets no precedent for anything else."

Chairman Bloom of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, favored a $50,000,000 loan authorized by Congress with provision that it not be used "in violation of our neutrality policy."

Stardust Peppers, Wit Salts The Meals at Sardi's Cafe

By Gladwin Hill

Associated Press Staff Writer

(This is the first of three articles on the favorite restaurants of New York celebrities.)

New York, Jan. 17.—Over a table at Sardi's, a rising young Broadwayite named Billy Rose wrote his early song hits . . . at the next table the late and beloved Jack Donohue wrote the famous "Letters of a Hoofer to His Ma" . . .

At Sardi's, Texas Guinan ordered roast beef and coffee—the coffee for herself and the roast beef for her dog . . . here comes Katharine Cornell, intent on getting one of her favorite garlic-garnished dishes . . . Robert (believe it or not) Ripley is downing his third straight chicken tamale . . . and that racket upstairs is Gus Edwards, imitating Sardi's parrot.

For Sardi's restaurant, a hop and a skip off Broadway, is a "celebrity hangout."

It is one of "the" spots in a not-too-widely-known circuit of professional gathering places that have come to be an important cog in the New York machine.

An unsuspectedly large part of the city's affairs is now transacted not in offices but over the luncheon and dinner tables and around the bars of a dozen spots far off the tourist track.

It's Blue Plate Society

Cafe society gets the fame, but it's the "hangouts" and their habitues—what might be called "Blue Plate Society"—that make the wheels go around.

While theatrical novices languish in producers' waiting rooms, the veterans know that "the two greatest casting offices in town"—the unofficial headquarters of producers, managers and playwrights—are the twin eateries, the Tavern, on one side of Times Square, and Sardi's, on the other.

Vincent Sardi started with a hole-in-the-wall spaghetti emporium near the Lambs Club, and under the beneficent influence of the late boom, blossomed out in more sumptuous quarters across the square—where he was confronted with the pressing problem of getting a clientele.

Mindful, possibly, that theatrical people are susceptible to flattery, his first move was to cover the walls of his place with 50 small picture frames, empty, and hire a young Russian immigrant artist named Alex Gard with an extraordinary gift for caricature, to loiter around sketching the patrons.

The stars pell-melled to get their pictures into the empty frames, and when they were filled up Sadri simply added more, until now Gard has consumed tons of ink, the walls are completely covered with pictures, and—and Sari's is a "hangout."

Sardi's has no entertainment, but it has a stellar attraction in the world's most famous hat-check girl, read-headed Renee Carroll, who is so adroit at wangling tips that she now owns the lucrative coatroom concession and has written a book about her experiences.

Besides tips, she wangled a snakewood cane from Playwright Ben Hect, and a 10-gallon hat from Cowboy Actor Buck Jones, and shamed Maurice Chevalier into a big tip by telling him "I paid $1 to see your last picture"—although she admits that through the generosity of press agents she's seen every movie and play on Broadway in ten years, without paying a cent. And she once borrowed Ripley's $16,000 Isotta-Fraschini to deliver a 40-cent sandwich.

"Sardi's may be the place where celebrities gather," she says, "but I get more slugs and buttons in my tip box than I can use in a year's mending. The most highly paid performers and theatrical executives slip me slugs that I wouldn't even try on my molars to see whether they're real or not."

Cuffs Accepted

Despite such regrettable defections, however, Sardi's and two other leading theatrical rendezvous stand, amid all the hurly-burly, back-biting and chiselling of Broadway, as beautiful monuments to the smooth operation of the Golden Rule.

All three owe a good part of their success to their old-time policy of providing members of the profession with viands on credit when they don't have the money.

Leon and Eddie's, a rip-roaring Fifty-second street night club, despite being a magnet of the tourist trade, remains a great celebrity haunt because back in the speakeasy days many of the not-yet-celebrities were financially accommodated, under two unique conditions: There was no liquor on the cuff, and the house kept no record of debts—it was the honor system.

Arnold Reuben started at the age of 5 peddling vegetables on the street; founded his first delicatessen on $22 in nickels, and got his toehold in success when Actress Marjorie Rambeau happened in in an expansive mood and was so pleased with his stock that she bought $100 worth at one whack, and told a lot of theatrical friends about the place.

During the big actors' strike of 1919, Reuben fed them on the cuff, and down the years has always had a meal and/or money for those who lacked, thereby gathering a loyal clientele that has followed him through half a dozen moves around town.

His present establishment, off Fifth avenue a mile from Times Square, might be right on the square as far as its clientele is concerned; it is not unusual to see there at one time such a group as Adolphe Menjou, Bert Lahr, Jackie Coogan, Mary Pickford and Ed Wynn, Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor.

Sabotage Hinted In duPont Blast

dows crashed in. The frightened pupils were sent home for the day.

Several store fronts in the general neighborhood were blown in.

Of the building where the explosion occurred—a one-story, 40-feet square affair—Paul C. Kaiser, plant manager, said:

"There's nothing left but a hole in the ground."

The only trace found of the men in the plant was a rubber heel.

The damage would have been considerably more widespread, explosive experts explained, except for the practice of piling earth barricades high around each individual building, which "cushioned" the concussion.

The buildings are widely separated specifically to prevent any widespread damage in case of accidents, and only a very few are employed at the same time in any single building.

Had Previous Explosions

The building in which the explosion took place was known as neutralizing building No. 4, in which, it was explained, raw nitroglycerin is mixed with a neutralizing chemical and wood pulp which makes it into blasting powder, far less dangerous to handle than the raw nitroglycerin itself.

More than 20 persons have been killed in previous blasts at the plants at Gibbstown, where explosives, acids and dyes are manufactured. The most serious occurred in January, May and October of 1916, when in three explosions a total of 18 were killed.

Brussels Hears Rumors of Nazi Invasion Today

Holland Extends State Of Emergency to Area With Naval Base

By the United Press

Brussels, Jan. 17.—New rumors of "imminent developments" in Belgium's relations with her belligerent neighbors spread tonight, including unofficial assertions that a German attack had been scheduled for today or tomorrow.

These quarters said emergency military measures taken by Belgium and Holland last week-end were based upon diplomatic and military information of a probable Nazi blow.

The state of emergency proclaimed in parts of The Netherlands November 1 was extended late tonight by royal decree to sections of the Dutch coast in the provinces of northern and southern Holland.

The decree applies to the municipality of Callantsoog in north Holland, which is in the neighborhood of the naval base at Denhelder.

Belgium continued to take military precautions along the frontier with Germany.

Residents of frontier villages, especially those near mined works, were warned to dress wamly day and night in order to be ready to evacuate if warning sirens and bells were sounded.

Sick persons were advised to leave immediately. In the Town of Verviers the public lighting system was ordered shut off nightly at 8 o'clock.

Cudahy Minimizes Alarm

Brussels, Jan. 17 (AP).—John Cudahy, new United States Ambassador to Belgium, delivered a message from President Roosevelt to Ying Leopold today. He said he could not disclose the nature of the message, delivered in an hour's audience, in which he also presented his credentials.

"After talking to a number of people, it seems to me there is no cause for any immediate alarm in Belgium," he declared following the audience.

Gen. Henri Denis, Belgium's defense minister, said that mobilization steps which Belgium took over the week-end would be maintained "for some time." These steps were just short of complete mobilization.

Dutch Press Assails Nazis

Copyright by New York Times

Amsterdam, Jan. 17.—The reason which the Germans have advanced for torpedoing the Netherlands motor ship Arendskerk, that the ship was carrying contraband to Capetown, has been emphatically denied by the ship's owners.

The Netherlands press rather conspicuously refrains from commenting on the disaster, but the general feeling is adequately expressed by a leading article in the Amsterdam Telegraaf tonight, which ardently condemns the methods of German sea warfare.

"The Arendskerk's destruction," the paper says, "is one of those feats of brutal force that does not add to the glory of the German navy. We regard the German attempt to isolate Britain as abortive.

"Does Berlin believe in earnest that Germany can starve out South Africa or is the destruction of shipping tonnage her only aim? We do not know, but we know every nation with searfaring traditions turns away its face from what has been done by the German navy in recent months."

Barnes was walking to a meeting of Urell camp, United Spanish War Veterans, when attacked. He was not seriously injured.

Coe Glade Stars In Carmen At National

Presentation Gayest Of San Carlo Company Season to Date

By Richard L. Coe.

Fortuna Gallo presents the San Carlo Opera Company in Bizet's "Carmen" in the National Theater Wednesday night. The cast:

Carmen	Coe Glade
Don Jose	Sydney Raynor
Escamillo	Mario Valle
Micaela	Leola Turner
Remendado	Francesco Curci
Le Dancaire	Richard Wentworth
Zuniga	Harold Kravitt
Morales	Francis Scott
Frasquita	Myra Manning
Mercedes	Charlotte Browning

Presper Merimee's "Carmen" as well as Georfes Bizet's rhythmic charmer appeared last night on the stage of the National Theater in the person of Coe Glade. It was the second performance in French of the day and the largest audience of the San Carlo Company's season to date witnessed the story of the gypsy.

Miss Glade's interpretation of the title role was one of the most praiseworthy and interesting features of the evening. Ludovic Halevy and M. Meilhac, who adapted their libretto from Merimee's celebrated short story, made her a more gentle creature than she had appeared in the original.

Miss Glade's interpretation indicates a return to the earlier unamiable conception. Hers is an evil, selfish Carmen, no flighty coquette. She smokes more frequently. She whistles tauntingly. She flicks her castenets bitterly. Hers was the finest performance of the evening.

Certain other deviations from the version which predominates today were similarly interesting. The lovely intermezzo to the third act which Bizet adapted from his L'Arlesienne suite was omitted, a logical departure, for it is not musically in the frame of the climaxing story. The fourth act, before the Plaza del Torres, was lengthened considerably by the inclusion of a group of ballets. It was a showmanly move for the corps de ballet, with Lydia Arlova and Lucien Prideaux in the leading roles.

Sydney Raynor was the vocally persuasive Don Jose and Mario Valle brought down the house—as have all Escamillos before him—with his Toreador Song. Leola Turner won her audience with that show-piece of all soprani, "Je dis, que rien ne m'epouvante."

Carlo Peroni's faithful conducting and the well-drilled chorus are evident reasons for the success of this opera company.

"Faust" was the matinee performance of the San Carlo Opera Company at the National.

Leola Turner was the Marguerite of the Gounod opera and Dimitri Onofrei sang the ageing philosopher. Harold Kravitt scored a personal triumph as the Mephistopheles and the other principal roles were sung by Ivan Petroff, Charlotte Bruno, Fausto Bozza and Myra Manning, the Marthe. Peroni conducted.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Wednesday night in Constitution Hall with Guiomar Novaes as piano soloist. Program: Suite (Handel-Harty), Piano Concerto in E flat major K. V. 271 (Mozart), "Momo Precoce" for piano and orchestra (Villa-Lobos), Suite from "Zhar Ptitza" (Stravinski).

Appearing last evening as soloist with the National Symphony Orchestra in Constitution Hall, Guiomar Novaes, the Brazilian pianist, participated in the first North American performance of "Momo Precoce," a fantasy by her distinguished fellow-countryman, Heitor Villa-Lobos. In addition to assisting Dr. Hans Kindler in increasing the number of the orchestra's premieres, she gave a delightful reading of the solo part in Mozart's youthful E flat major concerto. Mme. Novaes has always been an admired artist in Washington and she was cordially received by the auditors, who recalled her repeatedly after each work.

So little of the music of Villa-Lobos has been heard in this country that his important place among contemporary composers is not fully realized by the public. He is one of the most independent and original writers of our day, and his creative talent is so unpredictable in its direction that his manner of writing cannot be characterized as a style, in the sense that Debussy had a style. Largely self-taught in harmony and intrumentation, he blazes new paths wherever his imagination leads him.

"Momo Precoce," which may be translated as "Youthful Momus," is a scintillant and exotic fantasia elaborated from a suite for solo piano. The subject is the Carnival of Children, a popular festival in Brazil, and the simple themes are in keeping with the juvenile merry-making. But around these short and naive motives he has woven an orchestral texture of remarkable interest. Structurally the work is a series of small tone-poems connected by piano cadenzas, and emotionally it is surcharged with humor. The instrumental color of the music is iridescent with constantly shifting tints, and the ingenuity of scoring keeps the listener intent upon novel effects.

Except for several visits in Paris, where "Momo Precoce" was composed in 1929, Villa-Lobos spent all his life in Brazil. He does not mind mystification about himself, and very little is known about his antecedents. Works of reference place the year of his birth anywhere from 1884 to 1892, but his friend, Burle Marx, who ought to know, says that it is 1881. From his father he learned to play the violoncello, and that was practically the extent of his musical education. His favorite instrument is the saxophone which he likes so much that he has been known to substitute it for a missing bassoon when conducting a Beethoven symphony.

His musical enthusiasms range from Bach to the native music of Brazil. In five suites, called "Bachianas Brasileiras," he has brought these two together, combning, for example, a fugue subject with a Brazilian rhythm. He is a composer who writes from an inner necessity and no sooner has one work been completed than he begins another. Marx estimates that he has written at least 1,300 compositions.

Dr. Kindler began the concert with Sir Herbert Hamilton Harty's suite of a Polonaise, Arietta and Passacaglia selected from different works by Handel. For his final number he directed a brillian performance of the suite from Stravinski's "Fire Bird" ballet.

Bar Group Lauds Pine On Record

District Attorney Convicts 96 Pct. Of Cases in Quarter

A record of 96 per cent convictions for the last quarter of 1939 yesterday brought praise of District Attorney David A. Pine by the bar association committee on relations with the prosecutor's office.

Chairman Paul Cromelin submitted the report, which said little activity was required of the committee because of the "highly satisfactory condition" of the business of the district attorney's office.

The report said:

"There have not come to the attention of the committee any complaints or charges of any character against the office and no investigations of any sort involving said office which would warrant any resulting work on the part of the committee."

The report pointed out that 629 criminal cases were pending in the District Court on January 1, 1938, 316 on January 1, 1939, and only 186 on January 1, 1940. On January 15, 1940, this total had been reduced to 121.

Since September, 1939, the report said, more than 60 per cent of all cases have been disposed of within three weeks of indictment and about 68 per cent have been disposed of in four weeks after indictment.

The report concluded that "it is believed by the committee that the condition of business of the District attorney's office, in respect of the return of indictments, the handling and final disposition of criminal cases, is better than at any time in recent years.

"The committee is of the opinion that such a report as this must be very pleasing to our bar association, and therefore recommends that with the acceptance of this report the bar association extend to Mr. Pine and his official staff the appreciation and congratulations of the bar association on a splendid year's record."

Members of the committee, besides Cromelin, are William E. Leahy, Julian I. Richards, E. Hilton Jackson, U. S. Commissioner Needham Turnage, Michael M. Doyle, John M. Littlepage, George D. Horning, jr., Frank F. Nesbit, Alfred Goldstein, William H. Collins and Kahl K. Sprigg.

In debate, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, declared the National Resources Planning Board and Office of Government Reports are "a menace to the people and to Constitutional government."

The Council of Personnel Administration would save the Government millions of dollars, the President recently said. Headed by former Representative Davenport, of New York, the council, which includes the personnel chiefs of the major agencies and departments, meets regularly to discuss standardization and improvement of personnel methods in the Government.

Among the appropriations tentatively approved by the House in the independent offices bill are: Civil Aeronautics Authority, $27,900,000; National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, $8,000,000; Civil Service Commission, $97,266,000; Federal Communications Commission, $2,116,000; Federal Power Commission, $2,480,000; Federal Trade Commission, $2,300,000; Federal Works Agency, $187,113,000; General Accounting Office, $5,306,000, and Interstate Commerce Commission, $9,058,000.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

tion of "one or two beds in surgery."

"If the King of England applied for admission tonight I don't know what we'd do with him," said the admitting officer.

He made it clear, nevertheless, as did all other hospitals surveyed, that no emergency cases had been or would be rejected.

At George Washington University Hospital it was estimated that at least ten applicants for rooms had to be turned down yesterday because of lack of space.

Emergency reported "not a vacant room," with reservations being rejected daily. That hospital pointed out, however, that it has not been forced to "double up" or adopt other emergency measures to accommodate more patients.

Even Casualty Hospital, which specializes in surgical cases, had fewer than 10 of its 121 beds empty last night. Children's Hospital was three-fourths filled and Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat had only one or two ward beds available.

Gallinger Municipal Hospital had to take beds out of its storeroom to care for the rush. Last night its walls sheltered approximately 960 patients, with congestion most acute in the obstetrical ward.

The Health Security Administration, clearing house for hospital admission of charity and part-pay cases, said that while the bed problem was serious it was having no difficulty obtaining accommodations for persons requiring immediate hospitalization.

Sibley reported capacity patronage, with many waiting for admission. Georgetown had the same story. Garfield said that, with the exception of a few beds in the maternity department, it was filled to capacity.

People who want to stay out of hospitals should go to bed at the first signs of a cold or fever and follow doctor's orders, advised Health Officer Ruhland. The present wave of pneumonia and flu is to be expected at this time of year, he said.

Kay Kyser Orchestra To Play Birthday Ball

'Kollege of Musical Knowledge' for Mayflower; 'Lincoln' Celebrities Begin Arriving Tomorrow; This, That and the Other About the Theater

KAY KYSER and his "Kollege of Musical Knowledge" is the latest of the nationally known instrumental groups to signify its intention to be present in Washington to lend rhythmic humor and spirited music to the President's birthday celebrations on January 30. The professorial Maestro Kyser yesterday wired his acceptance of the entertainment committee's invitation to Chairman Andrew R. Kelley.

BELL

The Kyser orchestra at present enjoys a two-fold reputation among amusement-seekers of the Capital. It has proved itself one of the most potent stage attractions ever to play a local theater, packing the Earle Theater on its last engagement with a howling, hand-clapping mob of jitterbugs that did everything but tear down the house in their tumultuous approval of the Kyser antics and his conduct of that fabulous "kollege" of his. Since then, the band has gone on to further prominence as the nucleus of "That's Right, You're Wrong," an RKO-Radio film production in which it was demonstrated how to utilize a popular orchestra in pictures when a popular orchestra could not be utilized in pictures, if you get the idea. Furthermore, the Kyser type of entertainment is immensely popular with the loudspeaker dialists, who abjure the theater in favor of the fireside radio.

The present expectation seems to be that Kyser and his instrumentalists, vocalists and comedians will dispense their wares in the ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel the big night of January 30, that being one of the major stops on the circuit of seven hotels that will be "played" by all of the visiting stars of stage, screen and radio during their rounds of the "spots" in which the drive for funds to combat infantile paralysis will be concentrated.

Speaking of visiting stars and celebrities, the list compiled by the RKO executives of those who will be present for the world premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," at RKO-Keith's next Monday night, January 22, to date includes Raymond Massey, star of the stage play who also appears in the title role of the picture; Robert E. Sherwood, author of the Pulitzer Prize play; Ruth Gordon, who plays Mary Todd Lincoln in the film; Mary Howard, the Ann Rutledge; Producers Max Gordon and Harry Goetz, Director John Cromwell, S. Barrett McCormick, director of advertising and publicity for RKO-Radio, and President Stewart W. McClelland, of Lincoln Memorial University, at Harrogate, Tenn. They will begin arriving tomorrow. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt will head the list of local official, social and diplomatic leaders who have signified their intention to be present at the premiere performance, sponsored by the newspaper Women's Club of Washington for its endowed bed in Children's Hospital and fellowship fund.

Those attending the Earle Theater during the week beginning tomorrow will encounter an old friend in "A Child Is Born," the principal screen attraction of the new bill. As the picture unfolded at yesterday afternoon's preview screening, vivid memories were brought back of the story's original film production in 1932, under the title of "Life Begins." The principal roles in the earlier manifestation were played by Loretta Young, Eric Linden and Aline MacMahon. These parts now are interpreted by Geraldine Fitzgerald, who made so profound an impression in "Wuthering Heights" and "Dark Victory;" Jeffrey Lynn, making rapid strides as an actor of serious purpose, and Gale Page, cast as the nurse in charge of the maternity ward in a great metropolitan hospital.

The purpose of the picture is to present an emotional, pathetic, comic and sometimes tragic cross-section of metropolitan motherhood and the reaction of contrasted "types" of womanhood to the miracle they are about to experience. Although laid almost entirely within the walls of the hospital, "A Child Is Born" is less clinical than it is a study of human nature under circumstances which, at best, are harrowing.

The reunion of "Red" Skelton, headlining next week's stage bill at the Earle, and Production Manager Harry Anger, who gave "Red" his start on the stage, will be celebrated by a press luncheon today at the Raleigh Hotel. If "Red" is in form—and I have never seen him when he wasn't—there should be too much laughing for very much gourmandizing. Excellent for the waistline.

Today is the day when the costumes worn by Scarlett O'Hara, Rhett Butler, Melanie, Aunt Pittypat, Ashley Wilkes, India Wilkes, Bonnie Blue, Carreen, Belle Watling, Suellen and Emmy Slattery, in the Technicolor production of "Gone With the Wind," will be on exhibition on the second floor of Lansburgh's department store. In conjunction with the display of all these costumes, Miss Patricia Uline Hill, one of Washington's popular debutantes, will model the originals worn by Vivien Leigh, in the role of Scarlett. This, I believe, is scheduled for 2:30 p. m. Miss Hill's consent to appear in Scarlett O'Hara's gowns was given with the understanding that her compensation would be devoted to the Crippled Children's Fund.

Frank La Falce, director of advertising and publicity for the Warner Theaters in the Washington territory, has been advised by that high-strung Southern gentleman, Division Manager Sam Galanty, of Columbia Pictures, that he has been awarded a prize of $300 for his campaign on Howard Hawks' production of "Only Angels Have Wings"—one of only 11 awards made for the entire United States. Following his own generous precedent, Mr. La Falce will share his check with members of his department. Along with Frank Orth, "conglomerations" is what I always say.

Laughton Refuses To Play Johnson

Squelching helpful friends and fans who have been urging the character upon him for two years, Charles Laughton has turned thumbs down—once and, he hopes, for all—on the role of Dr. Samuel Johnson, picturesque literary lion of eighteenth century London.

The subject came up for final decision when he was discussing future plans with Erich Pommer, his partner in Mayflower Pictures, Ltd., an English production unit whose "Partners of the Night" will be released in this country shortly.

"I positively will not play that man!" Laughton bellowed. "So far as I can discover, he never did anything but sit on his fat rump and make nasty remarks about other people. Let's think of a character who wasn't in a rut."

Americanization

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Jan. 17.

Lawyers, seamen, aviators, newspapermen—no group was ever satisfied that a motion picture, based on its particular calling, did justice to that profession.

HOPPER

They forget to remember that while pictures strive to be educational and factual in order to be entertaining they must be given some poetic license. What brought this on was a doctor friend of mine who saw "A Child Is Born" and who complained afterwards about a number of inaccuracies in the picture. Some of his points were well taken. "We've spent a great deal of time and effort to educate mothers-to-be that babies can be delivered more safely in hospitals than in homes," the doctor explained, "yet in one scene of that picture they showed a whole gang of kids visiting their mother in a ward, romp on top of her bed and have a wonderful time. No hospital would permit minors to visit the obstetrical ward for fear that they might bring in some contagious children's disease and upset the mother, too." The doctor's objection isn't merely a matter of personal opinion. "The thing I'm afraid of," he insisted, "is that we've enough trouble now enforcing the rule 'No Children Permitted to Visit.' It'll put bad ideas into the heads of future patients."

Mitch Leisen tells of the high school girl asking for a job. "I'm not a very good student" she said, "failed in English so I think I'd make a great actress in Hollywood." Guess she's been reading and believing those Sam Goldwynisms!

With so many producers going overboard on new talent, it's a pleasure to see how intelligently Darryl Zanuck is handling Doris Bowdon who's playing Rose of Sharon in "Grapes of Wrath." Incidentally since Zanuck returned from Sun Valley, he's so enthusiastic you'd think he was their press agent.

Zorina's name, before she appeared on Russian Ballet was Brigitta Hartwig. How'd you like to see that on a marquee? Alex Korda will return to Hollywood soon—meanwhile Merle Oberon is living in a new Old English home—with calling cards reading "Mrs. Alexander Korda."

It cost Maurice Evans $10,000 to bring his own version of Hamlet to the City of the Angels for a four-day visit. Object—a motion picture contract. Which makes his one of the most expensive auditions on record . . . Leo Carrillo's personal successes in "San Francisco" was so great he's already been cast in "Twenty Mule Team" with Wally Beery, Fox wants him to play Tony Pastor in "Lillian Russell," and Warners want him for "Torrid Zone!" . . . Got a squint at the Warner call sheet for Elsa Maxwell's short which gave me a snicker: "Exterior—Elsa Maxwell—Upper deck. If raining Interior—Elsa Maxwell—Luxurious Quarters."

Hollywood will bring the war closer to our backyard when they make "Waterloo Bridge." For cameraman George Folsey is working out a lighting system which will permit him to reproduce a London blackout street scene by the use of black lights. Don't ask me to explain the process—all I know is that M-G-M promises an eerie effect. It will give Vivien Leigh a shudder I imagine, for but for the grace of David Selznick she'd be in a blackout home in England and not starring in one at M-G-M.

Ethel Waters, 'Lincoln' Top Theater Week

'Mamba's Daughters,' Picturized Prize Play Open Next Monday

RKO-Keith's

"ABE LINCOLN IN ILLINOIS." The world premiere of the motion picture production of Robert E. Sherwood's Pulitzer prize play will be held on Monday evening at 8:30 under the auspices of the Newspaper Women's Club of Washington. Raymond Massey plays his original stage role of the thoughtful, moody man whom the final scene shows bidding his friends farewell from the train that is to take him to Washington. Gene Lockhart, Ruth Gordon, Mary Howard, Harvey Stephens, Minor Watson, Dorothy Tree and Alan Baxter are in the cast. Seats for the morning and afternoon performances at 11 a. m., 1:10, 3:20 and 5:30 p. m. are not reserved. Those for the single evening performance at 8:45 p. m. are reserved and now on sale at the box office.

Palace

"OF MICE AND MEN." John Steinbeck's prize-winning play, adapted from his novel of the same name, reaches the screen with Burgess Meredith and Lon Chaney, jr., in the leading roles of George and Lennie. The story tells of two migratory workers in California who yearn for a ranch of their own. The bond between them is strong, and George, the smaller of the two, guards the child-like Lennie, whose brute strength and towering size make him a tragically misunderstood figure. The wife of the owners' son, played by Betty Field, puts a snare in their "best laid plans." The supporting cast features Charles Bickford, Roman Bohnen, Bob Steele, Noah Beery, jr., Granville Bates and Leigh Whipper. Opens tomorrow morning.

Earle

"A CHILD IS BORN." Mary McDougal Axelson's story "Life Begins" returns to the screen in a new version which stars Geraldine Fitzgerald, who scored so handsomely in "Dark Victory" and "Wuthering Heights." The scene is the maternity ward of a great hospital and its theme is the adventure of motherhood. Jeffrey Lynn, Gale Page, Gladys George, Spring Byington, Gloria Holden, Nanette Fabares, John Litel, Johnny Downs and Eve Arden are in the cast. "Red" Skelton headlines the stage bill, bringing with him his comedy and his assistant, Edna Stillwell. Others on the stage revue are the Samuel Brothers and Harriet Hayes, dancers; Four Squires, instrumentalists; Flo Mayo, aerialist, and the popular Roxyettes. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"DISPUTED PASSAGE." Dorothy Lamour, Akim Tamiroff and John Howard have the leading roles in this film version of the Lloyd C. Douglas novel. The story concerns an American orphan, brought up by foster parents in her native China, who seeks help for her adopted land in the Far Eastern conflict. The conflict in the medical profession between love and duty climaxes the picture. William Collier, sr., Gordon Jones and Judith Barrett are featured. Maj. Bowes' Fifth Anniversary Revue occupies the Capitol stage, with Ted Claire as master of ceremonies. Bellringers of over 1,000 broadcasts form the company. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"THE GREAT VICTOR HERBERT." This film cavalcade of Herbert melodies continues at the Metropolitan, where it reopened Tuesday after a week at the Earle. "Kiss Me Again" and the "March of the Toys" are but two of the songs in the film. Walter Connolly, Allan Jones, Mary Martin, Susanne Foster and Judith Barrett are in the cast.

Columbia

"ANOTHER THIN MAN." William Powell and Myrna Loy again play the witty detective, Nick and his daffy wife, Nora, returning to F street after an engagement at the Palace. Virginia Grey, Otto Kruger, C. Aubrey Smith, Ruth Hussey and Nat Pendleton have the central roles in this comedy-mystery of a Long Island murder case. Opens tomorrow morning.

Little

"NAUGHTY MARIETTA." Jeanette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy return in this Victor Herbert operetta for a sixth engagement at the Ninth street cinema. "The Ski Chase" continues from last week's bill, with Hanns Schneider and the comics of "Slalom" making merry in the leading glides and jumps.

Trans-Lux

"INFORMATION PLEASE." The second in the screen releases of the popular radio quiz series is the featured short subject at the newsreel theater for the coming week. Gene Tunney is the guest guesser. Harriet Parsons' "Screen Snapshots" depicts the novel parties of Hollywood and "American Royal" was filmed at the Kansas City Horse Show. "A Boy, A Gun and Birds" is the cartoon. Opens tomorrow morning.

Civic Theater

Gayety

"TOP HAT." Georgia Sothern brings her own revue to the burlesque house, opening her week's engagement on Sunday afternoon. Manny King, Al Weber and Charles Schultz are the featured comedians. Margie White, dancer; Maxine Breazelle, display artiste; Jerry Lane, tenor; Frank Masters, juvenile; Thomas McKeone and Palmer and Forresta, dancers, are some of the principals.

Atlas

KA-NI LANE and his Sunset Islanders are the headline attraction of the variety bill opening at the Northeast theater on Sunday afternoon. The Islanders is a group of eight entertainers who present songs and dances. Alexianne and Boys, a miniature revue, is also featured on the Atlas stage. The screen attraction will be the "Dead End" Kids in "Call a Messenger."

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Jan. 17 (DNS).—Well, one thing is certain. My old friend, George Bernard Shaw approves of the new contract Gabriel Pascal has just signed with United Artists for the release of Shaw movies. G. B., who is always frank and modest, today cabled Charlie Chaplin saying: "Congratulations to United Artists on having captured Gabriel Pascal, the only man alive except yourself who knows as much about making pictures as I do."

LOUELLA PARSONS

Pascal's first for United Artists is "Major Barbara," starring Wendy Hiller and Robert Morley. Then will follow "The Doctor's Dilemma," "The Devil's Disciple" or "Caesar and Cleopatra." The selection to be made by the 80-year-old pink-cheeked playwright. I am surprised that Shaw has consented to let Pascal film the second movie in Hollywood, for between us he doesn't think much of my home town.

If your memory's good, perhaps you remember an item I wrote to the effect that Janet Gaynor owned a story called "Forever," by Mildred Cram, and was eager to star in it. Well, since then, much has happened. The most interesting of all is that Janet and Adrian are expecting the stork and consequently it will be a long time before the petite little Gaynor will make a picture. So she sold the rights to this story to Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer for Norma Shearer. "Forever" has the quality of "Smilin' Through" and M-G-M will try to persuade Fredric March to play again opposite her. Norma is now looking at "The World We Make," the Sidney Kingsley play and it will be a toss-up which she'll make first.

No movie actor could have received more of a hand than Howard Benedict, of RKO, when he took a bow with our act in Baltimore, his home town. Well, Baltimoreans will be interested to hear that Howard's first picture for RKO as a producer will be "Curtain Call." "It's supposed to be secret, but this is a new streamlined version of K. Hepburn's old hit, "Morning Glory," only instead of an actress seeking success it is a young authoress. Barbara Read, Helen Vinson, John Archer and Alan Mowbray are in the cast and Frank Woodruff, formerly a radio director, will megaphone.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Charlie Correll (Andy of Amos 'n' Andy) baby is due any minute; Lynn Barbi remains very ill with the flu; Arline Judge's brother, Jack Judge, was married to Frances Kayes five minutes after she was divored from Henry Isaacs; dynamic Elsa Maxwell leaves the last of the week for a lecture tour. Elsa isn't happy unless she is doing something and that, I find, is the way most of us who have worked all our lives, feel; Hedy Lamarr and Gene Markey choo-chooing East with the Darryl Zanucks and Joseph Schenck. They left on the Super Chief; Leo Carrillo, I was interested to hear, expects to take "Lombardi Ltd." his former stage play, on the road. Bet he will make a big success; Frances and Sam Goldwn are back from New York, where Sam took bows on "Wuthering Heights" and talked with his lawyer on business.

Anita Louise, who is appearing with Ray Bolger and a galaxy of stars, broke all records at Hartford. She goes into the Chicago Theater next week and I hope the patrons of that grand theater are as kind to her as they were to us; Lola Lane and Dick Prucell, a Hollywood brown derby duo; Wayne Morris looking too, too happy with his bride and mother-in-law, Mrs. Ruby Schinasi, at the same place; Perc Westmore at the station saying adieu to his bride, Gloria Dickson, who leaves on a personal appearance tour; Mack Sennett and Laura Rogers, niece of the late Will Rogers, an interesting twosome; Johnny Weissmuller swimming again—for the first time since he returned to the Coast—after a bad cold; Anthony Quinn is suffering from an ankle sprain, sustained in a skiing accident. Mrs. Milton Bren is also suffering with a bad leg injury, recevied at Sun Valley during the New Year's celebration.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Jan. 17.

PEACE: Friday afternoon Myron C. Taylor and Sumner Welles went to the White House to lunch with the President and confer about Taylor's peace mission to the Vatican. When they arrived they noticed that a fourth setting had been prepared. "Some one else?" asked Taylor. "I thought this would be a private talk" . . . "I had a luncheon date with a young man who's going West tomorrow," Roosevelt explained, "and he refused to break it" . . . And so the statesmen discussed their plans for bringing peace to the world while the fourth guest, who refused to permit the President to break a date, lunched with them. He was Buzzie Dall, the President's grandson.

ART: Eddie Dowling lectured last week at Erwin Piscator's drama class at the New School for Social Research. "One thing you must remember," Dowling advised, "and that is to look upon the theater as an art and not as a means of making money. True artists then shall ye be" . . . "But what about 'Sally, Irene & Mary'?" a heckler asked. . . . "It's true I only made a million dollars out of that," Dowling replied, "but I sold that to Hollywood only four times—while Hollywood made 35 different versions of 'The Three Musketeers.'"

CHANGE: Walter Wanger's script cost for the movie adaptation of Vincent Sheean's "Personal History" will be near $150,000 . . . The screen story will be so different from the book that Wanger said: "Vincent Sheean ought to be no more surprised at this than he was at the Stalin-Hitler pact" . . . "Have you really changed the story that much?" the producer was asked . . . "Yes," he declared. "Actually it's more Gallagher than Sheean."

TRAGEDY: Ferenc Molnar, the Hungarian playwright, met Michael Todd, the Broadway producer, on board the Rex. "I have a new play, a tragedy," Molnar confided, "but I don't know how a tragedy would go, in these times" . . . "Look, if it's a good play, even a tragedy, you can open it on July 4 and it'll be a hit," Todd assured. "But if a show isn't good, it won't go—even on New Year's eve" . . . "Then I will offer it, my little tragedy," said Molnar, "but, frankly, not on July 4."

PREDICTION: Dr. George Gallup, conductor of the famous Gallup polls, is writing a book for Simon & Schuster called "Making Democracy Work" . . . Last week he came to the publishers' office and lectured the salesmen about his book . . . After explaining how his polls work he invited the salesmen to ask him questions . . . "Well, how do you think your book will sell?" Dr. Gallup was asked . . . "That is one subject," he answered, "which the Galllup poll will not undertake to predict."

The guest of honor arrived a bit late, escorting a lady, whom he introduced to the elegant assemblage. It had taken Porter a long time to find such a lady, and the guests all acknowledged their introduction to her with great formality—even though she wore a long, gray and real beard, exactly like Woolley's.

Metropolitan

Sixteen years after his death, Victor Herbert's name is still magic. A photoplay that is essentially a parade of his melodies, "The Great Victor Herbert," was so well-attended at the Earle last week, that after only a few days' lay-off it returned Tuesday for a run at the Metropolitan Theater.

Despite its title, "The Great Victor Herbert" is no biography of the composer. Misleading as that title is, it does give a hint of the music the soundtrack contains. Because several of the Hollywood studios own the rights to different Herbert musicals, Paramount had a problem of the first water on its hands when it began its cavalcade.

The tunes that were finally cleared include "The March of the Toys," from "Babes in Toyland;" "A Kiss in the Dark," from "Orange Blossoms;" "I'm Falling in Love With Someone" and "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life" from "Naughty Marietta," and "Kiss Me Again" from "Mlle. Modiste." There are 22 others.

Walter Connolly plays the rotund conductor-composer and a more natural choice would be difficult to imagine. Allan Jones and two feminine newcomers, Mary Martin and Susanna Foster, contribute the more important vocal selections.

The story is a completely unimportant one of backstage intrigue which serves to link the many musical numbers into a semblance of unity. Written by Russel Crouse, co-author of the Washington-bound New York comedy hit, "Life With Father," and Robert Lively, it allows loopholes for slight touches of comedy and for a supporting cast that includes Lee Bowman, Judith Barrett, Jerome Cowan and John Garrick.

D. C. Druggists Among Most Ethical in U. S.

Survey Shows None Of 103 Stores Would Prescribe for Syphilis

Washington's druggists are among the most ethical in the country, on the basis of a venereal disease "remedy" survey recently completed, Ray H. Everett, executive director of the D. C. Social Hygiene Society, said yesterday.

Coming on the heels of a national investigation, which showed that an increasing number of drug store clerks are selling syphilis and gonorrhea nostrums, the local study revealed;

Only one Washington drug store in seven makes over-the-counter sales for treatment of gonorrhea. Fifteen of the 10 pharmacies visited were ready to accommodate, though not one would prescribe for syphilis.

Only one of the 1 offered to sell sulfanilamide, a powerful drug used in treatment of gonorrhea, without a doctor's prescription. Of the remaining 14, half of them said they had a "remedy" which was superior, and the others said they must have a prescription for sulfanilamide.

Well Distributed

According to Everett, the 103 drug stores canvassed by the young man investigator who told a story about a "friend" who had a mysterious ailment, represent between one-fifth and one-fourth of the total number in the District.

The stores were well distributed over the Capital, he declared, and represent a dependable cross-section of general practices here. Some of the stores are in fashionable areas, others in poor neighborhoods. Several are operated by and for colored persons.

Both chain and independent pharmacies were included in the survey.

Warmed on Sulfanilamide

One druggist was so concerned by the "customer's" inquiry about sulfanilmide that he not only refused to sell it without a prescription, but followed the young man to the door, warning him not to buy any of the tablets if some other pharmacy were willing to sell them without a physician's prescription.

Sulfanilamide has proved effective in treatment of gonorrhea, but it is too potent and dangerous for self-medication, according to physicians.

The great majority of the drug stores visited, said Everett, urged the camouflaged investigator to have his "sick friend" go to a private doctor of a clinic.

Results of the Washington investigation are in marked contrast with those of a national survey, reported Tuesday by the United States Public Health Service, indicating that six druggists out of ten make counter prescriptions for venereal diseases. The study coverd 1,151 shops in 35 cities—Washington not included.

D. C. Supersleuth Proposed To Track Down Murderers

A combination Sherlock Holmes, Philo Vance and Hercule Poirot would be sought by the Commissioners to track down murderers, if the latest Seal plan receives the green light in Congress.

This official, whose title would be Chief Medical Examiner, would replace the present coroner, under the revised reorganization plan for the District

"He shall be a doctor of medicine and a skilled pathologist with not less than two years of actual experience as a pathologist,' the proposed bill states.

Here are some of the proposed duties:

As soon as any person in the District dies from criminal violence, or by a casualty, or by suicide, or unexpectedly when in apparent health, or when unattended by a physician, or in any suspicious or unusual manner, the police shall notify immediately the office of the chief medical examiner of the known facts, giving the time, place, manner and circumstances of such death.

The examiner then will fully investigate.

He would take possession of all property of value found on the dead person and such portable objects which, in his opinion, might be useful in establishing the cause of death.

It would be the duty of any citizen who might become aware of the death of any person from criminal violence to report forthwith to the chief medical examiner or to police.

Just where the local police would step into the picture is not explained in the plan.

Orphaned Agencies

Economy was only one of the motives which prompted the House Appropriations Committee to strike funds for the National Resources Planning Board and the Office of Government Reports from the independent offices appropriation bill. Even more important, the committee could find no "legislative history" authorizing the existence of these agencies.

Of course, the committee could find no statute creating these adjuncts of the White House. They were set up by executive order. That fact had, heretofore, been overlooked because appropriations for these boards were made through relief bills. They operated on an emergency basis, as part of the machinery incidental to the relief and public works programs.

Under authority of the reorganization act, however, the National Resources Committee and the Federal Employment Stabilization Office were metamorphosed into the National Resources Planning Board and transferred to the executive office. Appropriations for the new agency were then requested along with funds for the Government's numerous independent offices. The President tried to transform this and other emergency boards created by himself into permanent governmental establishments.

There is an element of naivete in the inability of the committee to find any legislative history for these boards. In the early days of the New Deal, Congress blithely gave the President authority to create these and many other new agencies. Their history is not obscure. It is only the attempt to transfer them from a temporary to a permanent status that lacks the sanction of law.

President Roosevelt recognizes the propriety of the House committee's action. He has announced his intention to seek legislation giving the NRPB and the OGR a permanent standing. That will give Congress an opportunity to analyze the functions and purposes of both organizations and to determine whether they are essential to the complicated operations of the Federal Government. When they have passed this legislative scrutiny, it will be time enough to decide how much money they should be permitted to spend.

Quiet, Please!

The first qualification of a philosopher is the ability to detach himself from immediate and ephemeral concerns. Thus when Socrates remained calmly oblivious to the recriminations of Xantippe, that exasperated lady heaved a vessel at his head. The philosopher, we are told, ducked a bare instant too late to escape the contents of the vessel; nevertheless, he was able to pass off the incident with the scientific observation that it is usual for rain to follow thunder.

Again, when the Roman military entered Syracuse after a three years' siege and began the business of butchering the inhabitants, they found the celebrated mathematician, Archimedes, in his house absorbed in the contemplation of some geometric figures he had drawn in the sand on his floor. As one of the soldiers advanced toward him, sword in hand, Archimedes looked up and remonstrated.

"Be careful there, will you, Old Man?" he said. "Can't you see you're messing up my figures?" The soldier was so astounded that he almost forgot why he was there. But presently he pulled himself together and ran the philosopher through.

Another instance is that of Immanuel Kant, who, while the rest of the inhabitants of Koenigsburg were plunged into the most fearful jitters by the echo of cannonading at Friedland, went quietly on writing his famous Critique. Nor did he pause even the next day when the French entered the city. And there is also the case of the Marquis de Condorcet, who sat in his Parisian garret writing of the inevitability of human progress, while his Jacobin enemies were hunting for him in the streets.

Such is the stuff of which the true philosopher is made, and we are happy to report that the breed is not yet extinct. For instance, you could think of few places in the world seemingly less adapted to quiet and orderly thinking than was Shanghai toward the end of the past summer. Nevertheless, amid all the havoc and uproar, Mr. John Benjamin Penniston sat placidly finishing a monograph on "A New Theory of Polar Bores," which appears to involve a brand-new explanation of the physical universe.

Copies of Mr. Penniston's treatise have now arrived in the United States and we have been reading one of them with great awe and respect. If we have not yet been quite able to make out precisely what is meant by a polar bore, it is only because all the noise and distraction in this office prevents us from concentrating on the matter.

The Crux Of The Issue

President Roosevelt's denial that he inspired the move to oust Dr. Ruhland should in turn inspire the District Commissioners to shake themselves free from whatever pressure was brought to bear upon them in this case.

By yielding to some influence which appears to have come from outside of their own board, the Commissioners had brought suspicion upon the White House. Their blunder will not be fully corrected until the notorious section 209 of the District reorganization bill has been eliminated and the mystery of its origin has been cleared up. Considering the President's vigorous repudiation of section 209 it can easily be discarded. A satisfactory explanation of the episode may be quite a different matter.

Washington citizens were much relieved to learn that the President will not stand behind this particular political conspiracy. They would have been much more pleased if the President had taken advantage of his opportunity on Tuesday to throw his influence behind a constructive reorganization plan for the Capital City.

The President was indignant because the scheme to oust Dr. Ruhland was attributed to him. He should have been still more indignant because some group has attempted to play ducks and drakes with public health in the disfranchised Capital. The Ruhland episode pointedly illustrates the disgraceful manner in which the helpless District is used by politicans to serve their own purposes.

Mr. Roosevelt says he favors giving the Commissioners power to hire the best health officer available. They already have such power. Indeed, they selected Dr. Ruhland to head the local Health Department only because he was singled out by a special committee of the District Medical Society as the most competent public health administrator available in the country. There is no need for greater authority for the Commissioners in this particular field.

What is urgently needed is legislative support for the program which the Health Department is trying to carry out. The per capita outlay for public health in Washington is pitifully small. It falls far short of the minimum that would be required to carry out the recommendations of the United States Public Health Service. And it seems doubtful whether satisfactory adjustments can be made until the District acquires a responsible local government which can tax and spend for the public welfare, within the limits of general policy fixed by Congress.

Here is the crux of the problem. The District has little control over its health program because Congress, which is more interested in other aspects of the Capital than in its health, holds the local purse strings. Since the President is keenly interested in avoiding unnecessary loss of life, he could most effectively use his influence to bring about the enactment of a District charter under which local officials could allocate local funds for local functions.

Talk of a compromise between the bill submitted by the Commissioners and that sponsored by Representative Kennedy is being heard. The Commissioners will now probably be delighted to yield on section 209. In return, they could reasonably accept the Kennedy plan of a local government competent to act for itself, with only general guidance and supervision from Congress.

Hurdle For Dewey

The candidacy of Frank E. Gannett for the Republican Presidential nomination appears to be significant chiefly as a countermove against Thomas E. Dewey. With the aid of Representative James W. Wadsworth and tacit support from various G. O. P. leaders in the rural counties of central and western New York, Mr. Gannett expects to share with Mr. Dewey the large bloc of New York votes in the Republican National Convention.

Mr. Gannett has no place among the nine leaders favored for the Republican nomination in the Gallup poll. Yet he is well known in New York State as a publisher and as an implacable foe of the New Deal. He took a prominent part in the successful fight to prevent enlargement of the Supreme Court as well as in the struggle over reorganization of the Government's executive agencies.

If the anti-Dewey Republicans in New York rally behind Mr. Gannett, he will be the first hurdle in the path by which the young district attorney hopes to attain the G. O. P. nomination. Mr. Dewey has the support of the Republican State Executive Committee. But if he should lose a considerable number of the votes of his home State, his chance of capturing the nomination would be notably weakened, despite his striking popularity to date.

The Wangling Wang

For over a year now all Chinese opposition to the continuance of the war against Japan has centered around the person of Wang Ching-wei.

Wang's attempt to get China to lay down her arms, and to throw herself on the tender mercies of the island empire, began while he was still a member of the central Chinese government. His efforts in that direction got nowhere at that time. Wang then openly broke with the Chungking regime and on December 29, 1938, issued a pronunciamento urging China to accept the peace proposals of the then Japanese premier, Prince Konoye. Since then, from one point or another in Japanese occupied territory, this arch-rival of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek has rung the changes on the necessity and desirability of Sino-Japanese peace and "cooperation."

It is not surprising, therefore, that during these many months Wang has been the darling of the Tokyo government and the Japanese army. They regard this clever lawyer and prominent politician as a potentially valuable ally, one who may save Japan from the necessity of having to continue a war of which the cost is increasingly onerous. And at recurrent intervals during recent months the Japanese have let it be known that the establishment of a new central Chinese government, with Wang Ching-wei at its head, is to be expected.

That regime has not yet been erected, however, and the delay is significant. It suggests that a regime under Wang's leadership would command so little popular Chinese support as to be ignored by the powers. An additional factor may also be that Wang has insisted on certain concessions which the Japanese militarists have refused to make.

In Wang Ching-wei's telegram to Chiang Kai-shek this week there are indications that concessions which the former deems necessary have now been made by the Japanese. Chiang's rival speaks of the "mutual understanding" he has reached with Japanese leaders after "many frank, open-minded talks with them," and adds that as a result of these talks "China will secure terms which not only will not lead to national extinction but will preserve her independence and freedom." Japan, he goes on to say, does not wish to retain troops "outside her own territory longer than necessary."

Many Chinese, however, have longer memories than Wang appears to have. They can recall earlier promises made by Japan to withdraw troops from conquered Chinese territory. Such promises were made with respect to Manchuria. Far from being fulfilled, they were followed by the creation of the separate state of Manchukuo under Japanese auspices and control.

It is not likely that Wang expected the Chinese government either to believe him or to act on his plea. His current telegram is more likely designed to rally the war weariness in China, to place Chiang Kai-shek in a difficult position and to afford Wang himself with a pretext to set up a rival regime of his own.

Matters Of Opinion

In the belief that the views of the public are strongly influenced by current books, the Saturday Review of Literature has taken a poll of the opinions of leading American authors on various questions. Public opinion on the same questions had already been measured through the Gallup polls. More than 200 authors took time to fill out the questionnaires, and their answers, too, have been tabulated by the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The results, as published in the current number of the Saturday Review, seem to indicate that if the authors do influence popular judgments the influence falls far short of domination. They also suggest that our authors take a rather gloomier view of the world than do the rest of us.

For example, 77 per cent of the authors believe the war will last at least two years and 28 per cent of them believe it will last five years or longer. But 49 per cent of the rank and file believe that the war will not last more than one year.

On the other hand, only one-tenth of the writers agree with the 47 per cent of the public who consider that our most urgent problem is to stay out of the war. Maybe this is because 69 per cent of them, as against only 54 per cent of the public, think we shall not become involved in it anyway.

Perhaps the simple explanation of these divergencies is that public opinion has not caught up with that of the authors questioned. If writers are to influence public opinion they must be in advance rather than abreast of it, as Rousseau and Montesquieu were in advance of the French Revolution. It is equally possible, however, that our writers may be behind rather than in advance of the public. Anyhow, the tabulation of the poll is worth preserving for reexamination a year or two hence.

Advice To The President

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If I were one of those personal advisers to the President, I would try to surprise him one morning in the following manner.

Mr. President, allow me the privilege to give you a great idea. Let us do a remarkable feat this year. Something that the people will never forget. You know—the budget—it has to be balanced some time. This is election year and we cannot afford to miss a triumphant send-off. We have a whole lot of things to do quickly.

Mr. President, doubtless, how to balance the budget is our tremendous problem. The United States is a family country. You are the head. Why don't you do it like a family man? The head of a family can scarcely take a chance to be extravagant.

If he wastes his money instead of bringing it home to his wife to buy the baby's milk and pay for the different bills, where will his family be? If the American family circle continues to go deeper in debt, the chances are that some day democracy will assume a new name. We want democracy to live on a sound basis.

Mr. President, it might be a good idea to reveal your plans for 1940. It behooves you to convince the American people that you have been leading them to the right direction all along. I think one way to accomplish this is to draw a blue print showing them exactly where, how and for what purposes the Administration has been spending and using the money from the Federal Treasury for excellent ends. Show them every item of expenditures, as well as profit, if there is any.

This way you will awaken the interest and gain the confidence of the people. After that the balancing of the budget will be easy. Just show the people how to follow and think things through and they will come across with money and enthusiasm. It cannot be achieved simply by soaking the rich and levying taxes in misleading different names.

Doctor's Bills

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not a doctor, a doctor's son or relative or an employe of a doctor, but merely an average hard-working fellow like you. I should like to call the attention of the public to a grave injustice on their part to the doctors as a whole.

Last January I went to the hospital for an operation on the base of my spine. During the next nine months I had five such operations by the same surgeon. It was necessary that I stay in bed most of that time. However, I was able to be up once in a while, and I thought I would try to help him out a bit around his office.

To my amazement and disappointment, I found that his files, dating back only a few years, showed several thousand dollars owed him (and considered practically uncollectable) by persons holding good Government jobs and by persons who could have paid him over a period of a few years, if only a few dollars at a time. Many of these people, I found from actual contact with them, have no intention of paying these just and reasonable bills.

How can people blame doctors for trying to organize—how can they blame them for sending bill collectors? The best specialists or the average doctor are all about the most human and reasonable group one could want to find and they will do almost anything and will give a man the longest time to clear up a bill of any creditor a man could have. Why should they be treated so shamefully? G. M. JOHNSON.

Incredible; But It Happened

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Fantastic" seems to be the adjective most commonly applied to the pernicious "Christian Front" conspiracy. "A crazy dream" is the phrase in one editorial. And Mr. LaGuardia "pooh-poohs" it derisively.

All of which reminds me of a couple of incidents. Some years ago I was sitting in Vienna in an open-air restaurant in the shadow of the Stefanskirche, and I happened to mention the Cafe Central, not far away. It set my friend to remembering a story that had been told him by the distinguished correspondent, M. V. Fodor.

Just before the World War, Fodor had been talking to an eminent official of the Austro-Hungarian Empire and, in referring to Russia, had ventured the opinion that the empire of the Tsars was headed for calamitous overthrow, in the not-distant future. The Austrian official roared with incredulity and amusement. His ample tummy shook with laughter. "And who, pray, is going to overthrow Russia?" he asked—"Herr Bronstein, of the Cafe Central?"

He was referring to a well-known and generally ridiculed character among the hangers-on of that usually crowded eating place—a shabby, impecunious, hot-tempered but hopelessly cloud-gazing individual, who was always gassing about what would happen when "comes de revolution." "Herr Bronstein of the Cafe Central, indeed!" Yes, verily, it was to laugh! (But Herr Bronstein of the Cafe Central happened to be the man now known to history as Leon Trotzky.)

Some years later I was in Berlin, standing in front of the art gallery by the Brandenburger Thor. It was the anniversary of the establishment of the Weimar Republic. A vast celebration was taking place. For hours a great parade had been pouring by. Tremendous shouts of applause for the Republic were ringing through the air. Sonorous songs in praise of it rose from endless thousands of German throats.

The loyal troops of the Republic were steadily pounding the pavement of Unter den Linden. Then suddenly, near where I stood, a scowling man raised in his hand a broken brick and hurled it at the flag of the German Republic in the parade. On his coat lapel, I noticed, he wore a little swastika. Instantly, burly policeman grabbed him and hustled him unceremoniously away. The people around me laughed. "A Hitlerite," they said—"You know: Hitler, that ridiculous beer-hall-putsch fellow, who was always making fantastic plots in Munich—after he got his start by gesticulating and screaming before six or eight cranks in some cellar down there."

Ah, yes, Hitler. Quite ridiculous! The drums of the republic went on beating out their thunderous march on the broad Unter den Linden, and the shouts roared all around me. (And look at "the beer-hall fellow" now—called by some very cool observers the most extraordinary conqueror since the rise of Mohammed.)

Mayor LaGuardia, I would say, is wrong. J. Edgar Hoover is right. The pernicious so-called "Christian Front" should be rigorously dealt with—should be scotched before it becomes any more dangerous than it is. F. L. P.

Safety Zone Policy

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many columnists and observers have pointed out the difficulty of enforcing the 16,000,000-mile safety zone proclaimed in the Declaration of Panama, the dangerous friction with belligerent efforts at enforcement may create, and the fact that they have no foundation in international law. Partisans of the zones, on the other hand, have stressed its undoubted advantage as a step forward in hemisphere solidarity.

But little attention has been given to one important aspect of this zone, its implications upon the future naval power of the United States. This side of the picture indicates that if the zone policy is carried out so successfully as to create a precedent in international relations, the effectiveness of our Navy in a future war may be seriously undermined.

We have, unfortunately, to keep in mind the contingency that we may at some future date be drawn into war with Japan. In such a conflict a very important mission of our Navy would be long-range action against Japanese commerce. This might be undertaken in areas far from the Pacific, such as the Mediterranean and waters off the Cape of Good Hope and Gibraltar, where a few cruisers could intercept Japanese trade with Europe.

But the European powers, including Britain, might then see profit for themselves in taking advantage of the precedent we are now establishing and declare a 300-mile safety zone around all territories flying their flags. Such action on their part then would provide a safe traffic lane for Japanese commerce with Europe, preclude any American action against this commerce and so increase seriously the cost in men, ships and money of an American victory.

Since our naval power is the primary element in our defense, it does not seem sensible to disregard this aspect of the safety zone policy.

LIVINGSTON HARTLEY.
Washington, Jan. 16.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have not been in accord with England's adjustments of all of the problems presented at Versailles, nor with all English diplomacy since, but England's answer to the Panama assumption of a 300-mile jurisdiction and regulation over the high seas is delivered with devastating, irresistible force.

At the time of the Panama Conference many Americans had a feeling of humiliation that commercialism had involved the United States in such a patent fiction, which could only lead to supine inactivity or war with friendly nations in defense of their necessary and inextinguishable rights.

A state of war always seems a favorable period to those whose interests are opposed by fundamental principles, but a state of war is also a period when the preservation of established principles makes its strongest appeal to soundly constituted people and nations.

Our South American trade does not justify or require the 300-mile zone in the oceans.

You Guess

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What are such organizations as the Lincoln Brigade, Popular Front, Browder's Communists, youth, church and college groups doing for the Finnish cause? You recall that many of these very organizations were intervening to preserve democracy in Spain.

After all, they did say that they were interested in preserving democracy. Where are the posters with Browder's picture prominently displayed and the words, "Bread for Spanish Children"? Why don't Browder and the rest of those who follow him distribute posters with the words; "Bread for Finnish Children"? L. X. MAGNIFICO.

The Post Impressionist

"One Touch Of Nature"

According to the current garden magazines, there is nothing like a terrarium for bringing spring into January, and I am beginning to agree with them. A terrarium, the experts explain, is a throwback to Victorian days; a miniature greenhouse made by putting a glass dome over any growing things you might have at hand.

I am inordinately proud of mine, which is only a few days old and sprouting like magic. Under glass, the tall green spears are no longer common paper white narcissus, but something exotically rare and lovely. The little clumps of begonia are dwarf shrubs, and the lily-of-the-valley pips, just beginning to show, hold a glamorous mystery of their own.

I am glad that the dome is high and clear, showing my tiny garden in its miraculous unfolding; but my conscience twinges when I look its way. For the glass once belonged to Dr. MacKenzie, and I am not sure that he would approve the use of his microscope cover as a terrarium. Yet, he might have been pleased, since he looked upon growing plants with the deep reverence of a true nature lover. He was a complex soul; very learned, and also very wise.

Of course his real name was not MacKenzie, but a Scot is a Scot, no matter the color of his tartan. The last we heard of him directly was a post card from Japan, with a brightly colored trio of solemn faced geisha girls sitting before a screen.

Only a few months later we learned of his death. We could picture him packing his few belongings for the last time, preparing to go home to die. He must have known that it was time to quit his earthly travels and set out for a new and strange country.

I shall never forget my first glimpse of the doctor. It was a fine spring evening, and I had a date with my future husband. It was not quite dark when Donald came in, accompanied by what appeared to be his shadow at noon—a little old man who could have walked under his outstretched arm without disturbing one scanty hair.

Dr. MacKenzie took to my parents at once, but he eyed me skeptically. Later, he paid me the dubious compliment of saying that he considered me good material; and although he steadfastly accompanied Donald a-courting, I never emerged from the yard-goods stage in his estimation.

He set sail and departed for ports unknown before we were married, doubtless grieving for his lost comrade. To him, women were admirable and necessary in their way, created by a wise providence to mind the house while the men went adventuring. But a female had no part in the glowing plans he had made for my promised lord.

He had been a ship's doctor in his day, sailing the seven seas with a box of pills in one hand and a surgeon's scalpel in the other, ministering to the sick and injured when it was necessary. "Helping Nature," he called it. The little doctor was a great believer in Nature, looking upon her as a mother, to be loved and obeyed; a stern disciplinarian, exacting unfailing obedience to her commands.

His job, he said, was merely that of an outsider who attempted to reconcile parent and children after a lapse of filial respect. And a mother, he usually added, was always ready to meet a penitent halfway.

He was also a stanch believer in freedom of choice. People must reach their own decisions in their own way, he was fond of observing, or they would go through life blaming others for their mistakes. But he turned his back upon his own doctrine where my husband was concerned, using every atom of his wiry strength in a futile attempt to influence him to study medicine. It was during that period that he gave his young friend the microscope and a well thumbed copy of Osler's "Principle and Practice of Medicine."

He was full of honest convictions, and stuck by them consistently where a weaker soul might have floundered and fallen. Being a traveler by nature and choice, it must have caused him no end of inconvenience when he found it necessary, according to the dictates of his conscience, to boycott the railroads. Fortunately the bus companies were just coming into being; else he would have walked overland, or taken taxis from city to city.

Each time he came to Washington—and he was like a homing bird in the spring, for he loved the city in May—he seemed smaller and more shriveled than when we had last seen him. We did not know his age, but he was full of ripe memories which placed him well over four score years.

However, he was not one to mourn for the old days. New Washington, with its parks and libraries and public buildings, was a source of wonder and delight to him. I shall never forget his face when he made his first visit to the Folger Library, or the time we took him over a new road through the park.

Remembering Dr. MacKenzie, I believe he would rather like the terrarium, especially if he could see the children peering through the glass, eyes round with wonder at each new leaf. Nature is the mother of Science, he used to say. They can use the microscope later, after they learn to use their eyes.

Fair Enough

Susceptible Youth

I WANT to emphasize a point in the case of those monstrous Russians and foreignized Americans who deliberately debauched American girls and boys in the furtherance of the Muscovite conspiracy against the United States and assigned the morally infected victims of their vicious example to the task of contaminating others by mingling with them in the American Students Union and the American Youth Congress.

The point is that these older Communists took the initiative. The young people did not seek them out. On the contrary, the elders cultivate relations with susceptible girls and boys, the majority of them between 16 and 20 years, and this work of corruption was an activity of the Russian government directed from Moscow.

Benjamin Gitlow, the former general secretary of the party in the United States, writes in his book, "I Confess," that the adult party leaders set the young Communists an example of loose morals, and that the orgies and debaucheries of the young ones were never seriously discussed or considered. As long as they could be used in the service of the conspiracy, profligate sex relations among them could be ignored. And, even now that he has backslid, Gitlow asks us to believe that he regrets that state of affairs as much for its reflection on the Communist movement as for its consequences to the victims. Possibly, if it had not tended to discredit the movement in the eyes of the American people, he would have deplored it less.

Saninism Was Another Word For Immorality

HE LEAVES no doubt that the adult conspirators imposed on the inexperience and adventuresomeness of the young ones. "The older party leaders courted the support of the youth by going out of their way to play up to them," says Gitlow. And, again, "They (the youth) became most malleable morally as well as politically in the caucuses of the most unscrupulous of the party leaders," and saninism, a party word for immorality, was rampant among them. The youth were taught to regard chastity as a bourgeois and therefore shameful condition, and these admissions come from a man who has the naive gall to grieve because young offenders in American prisons are thrown into association with abandoned men.

Although Gitlow makes frequent pious and longing references to idealism, his confession seems to me to have been prompted more by a desire to discredit the party for revenge than by moral or idealistic regret. He was a mature man at the time, but he gives no evidence that he possessed the active human decency to correct matters. Moreover, he was an important leader, and therefore responsible for conditions which were suffered to continue because it was thought that interference might hamper the movement.

When one comrade threatened to demand an investigation of immorality among the Communist youth the subject was dropped because, Gitlow says, the charges were true. And even that threat to demand an investigation was not prompted by any decent regard for morals. On the contrary, it was made to silence embarrassing discussion of the dissolute conduct of the elders.

Licentious Elders Lured U. S. Youth

THIS WAS the youth group which was given a mission to penetrate groups of American students and young workers and whose success in this corrupt work was hailed by various Communist leaders, including the same Otto Kuusinen, the Finnish traitor, whom Stalin recently appointed head of his puppet government of Finland. This political Fagin may have been ballyhooing his own work, but he reported that the American Communist youth had transformed the American Youth Congress into a great united front of radical young people. Disguised as enemies of war and fascism, these moral Typhoid Marys wangled a welcome into the circles of normal American youth to spread the contamination which they had caught from association with the older agents of the Moscow government.

It may be admitted that some of the young adventurers were corrupted at the drop of a hat, but these dissipated and licentious elders, acting under Moscow's orders, whistled them in off the street and dropped the hat. Indeed, ex-Comrade Gitlow gives us a picture of a low political dive in which the floor was littered with hats dropped in advance. From this angle it is difficult to read the initials in the hats; but even if there is none containing the letters "B. G." that doesn't absolve ex-Comrade Benjamin Gitlow.

Roosevelt's Restraint

By Mark Sullivan

In Difficult Position On Finn Aid

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT, when he wrote Congress about a loan to Finland, was in a difficult position. If it was partly of his own making—though only partly so, that probably does not ease the distaste he has for being a "straddlebug"—a variety of insect for which, in another connection, he has expressed strong disesteem. The following paragraph, it is safe to say, is the most extraordinary Mr. Roosevelt ever wrote in a message to Congress. He must have made a wry face as the words reluctantly crawled from his pen:

"The facts in regard to Finland are just as fully in the possession of every member of the Congress as they are in the executive branch of the Government. There is no hidden information; and the matter of credits to that republic is wholly within the jurisdiction of Congress."

In other words, Mr. Roosevelt says to Congress: "It's up to you; you know as much about it as I do; I don't want to influence you; it's up to you."

Peculiar Restraint For President Roosevelt

THAT'S A LONG WAY from the President Roosevelt who sent messages to Congress on matters of domestic legislation; who sent the bill for changing the courts written out to the last comma, without consulting a single member of Congress in advance; who again and again put pressure on Congress; who sent his associates to talk to individual members, persuade them or exert sterner pressure; who personally went into the States of Democratic Senators and asked voters to defeat them because they had not fully supported his measures in Congress; who exerted such power over Congress that some of his bills were passed before more than a few members had read them; whose attitude about many measures sent to Congress was such that they came to be called "must" legislation.

Another sentence in Mr. Roosevelt's message about Finland must have given him a sour taste as he wrote it: "There is without doubt in the United States a great desire for some action to assist Finland to finance the purchase of agricultural surpluses and manufactured products, not including implements of war."

Six of those words are what "Al" Smith would call "boloney." It is not to purchase "agricultural surpluses," or ordinary "manufactured products" that Finland wants and needs that loan. When Mr. Roosevelt suggests limiting the loan to such purchases, he is trying to make the idea more palatable to farmers and manufacturers and labor, and also to pacifists. What Finland desperately needs a loan for, and must have if she is to survive, is precisely the thing Mr. Roosevelt feels obliged to exclude. What Finland must have is "implements of war," especially defense planes, to drive off the Russian bombing planes that are brutally attacking her cities and killing her people.

Others Are Free To Be More Frank

MR. ROOSEVELT'S restraint, strange to him, is due to his consciousness of pacifists among the people and isolationists in Congress. Any President would have to be wary about them. Mr. Roosevelt especially so, because, during nearly two years before actual war broke out in Europe, he made an impression of being restlessly eager to be more aggressive about conditions both in Europe and in China. Since actual war broke, September 1, he has avoided making that impression. The caution of his message about Finland is part of his avoiding.

If a President must be under inhibitions, because of critics in Congress and also because of a quite proper sense of responsibility, others are free to be frank. The facts about Finland, and the probabilities so strong as to have the force of facts, are a thing which America must look in the face.

Every competent military expert in the world would say, I am confident, that Finland cannot permanently resist Russia unless she has help. "Help" means military help. That Finland has resisted so far is a miracle of gallantry. She is a nation of 3½ million people; Russia a sprawling octopus of 170,000,000. Finland, unless helped from outside, must be crushed by sheer weight of numbers. Russia will take her over, will sovietize her; will suppress her culture, destroy her institutions, including her churches and her democratic and representative form of government. Finland will be one more small nation gone into the maw of dictatorship and force. With Finland gone, can Sweden and Norway long survive? Holland and Belgium are already under the guns.

Totalitarian Tide Moves Toward Us

WHAT IS THAT to us? Most Americans, one hopes, would be ashamed to ask the question, even on sentimental grounds. But more is involved than sentiment, regret for small peoples crushed. The drive of the totalitarian system, the onward push of dictatorship, of rule by force and conquest by force, will have come that much farther west, that much nearer us.

America must ask itself, plainly, whether we can indefinitely ignore this. The type of society and government we practice and cherish is being steadily driven backward. On the continent of Europe there remains practically only a narrow and diminishing fringe, mainly small nations, on the western edge of the continent. That is the present, accomplished fact. The other present fact is that the totalitarian tide has nowhere been turned back. It is still in motion, westward, toward us.

Fisher Defends 'Mushroom' Building in District Suburbs

By the Associated Press

Dr. Ernest Fisher, economic adviser of the Federal Housing Administration, yesterday defended construction of new homes and apartment houses in suburban Virginia and Maryland as in line with the National Capital's growing population.

In testimony before the House Appropriations subcommittee published yesterday, Dr. Fisher was questioned by Representative Woodum (Democrat), Virginia, on the justification for houses and apartments in suburban Virginia and Maryland "going up like mushrooms."

"There is going to be a lot of vacant property here soon, or there is a terrific increase in population," Woodrum said.

"The increase in population has been constant, with the exception of two years, as far as we can estimate for many years past," Dr. Fisher said.

No Perceptible Increase

Since 1934, he said, there has been no perceptible increase in the number of vacancies, except in the very high-priced apartments. In the highest-priced apartments, he said, vacancies are in the neighborhood of 10 to 12 per cent.

"Of course, the apartment house situation is easily accounted for," Woodrum injected, "by the fact that the Government has taken over almost every apartment building in Washington and made an office building out of it."

Woodrum asked about the $10,000, $15,000 and $18,000 houses being somebody is going to have a headache because of that situation."

Projects Listed

"About a year and a half ago," Dr. Fisher said, "we came to the conclusion that if there was any weakness in the market for houses it was in that sector. We have been very severe in insuring mortgages in those ranges. The smaller houses and apartment houses have been occupied without any perceptible increase in the vacancies in the old places."

A breakdown of Federal Housing Administration's underwritten projects showed the following in suburban Virginia and Maryland, with number of family units and valuation:

Colonial Village, Inc., Arlington County, Va., 274 units, $1,128,600; Colonial Village, extended, 484, $1,860,800; Colonial Village, addition, 237, $905,500; Falkland Properties, Inc., Silver Spring, Md., 181, $1,100,000; Falkland Addition, 303, $1,618,000; Buckingham Community, Arlington, 1,402, $6,748,500; Parkbelt Homes, Greenbelt, Md., 10, $48,750; Arlington Village, Arlington, 655, $3,018,000; Westover, Inc., Arlington, 153, $537,000; Mount Vernon Development Corporation, Arlington; 57, $208,300; Auburn Gardens, Inc., Alexandria, Va., 180, $691,500.

Leaderless Japan

By K. K. Kawakami

No Ito To Show The Way Now

Special Correspondence of The Post

JAPAN'S difficulty today is her lack of leadership. Her statesmen are of the same stature. So are her party politicians. So also are her military and naval leaders. There is no statesman, no politician, no army man, no naval leader who can provide the much-needed leadership.

We hear so often about Prince Konoye. At every cabinet crisis he is mentioned as a possible premier. But his chief asset is the blue blood running in his family for a thousand years. Blue blood is no guarantee for leadership. More often it produces a good golfer or a dilettante.

The army likes to have Konoye in the chair of premier, largely because he seems to know how to get on with it. Many Japanese think Konoye a follower rather than a leader. His famous pronunciamento, made in the summer of 1938 while he was prime minister, to the effect that the Japanese government would never deal with Chiang Kai-shek shows a lack of foresight and statesmanship, and is going to plague Japan in the years to come. If Japan is willing to deal with Wang Ching-wei on such terms as have been reported by the press, why could she not deal with Chiang Kai-shek long ago?

Any Japanese lives in a fool's paradise who deludes himself with the fantastic idea that Wang Ching-wei, for all the nice things he has been saying about Japan, is more trustworthy than Chiang Kai-shek or any other Chinese.

THE 90-year-old Prince Saionji emerges from his oracular seclusion at every cabinet crisis and offers his advice as to whom the Emperor might choose for the next premier. This as often as not proves to be a good service, neutralizing the usual bitterness of rivalry among political partisans.

Saionji is wise and shrewd, but he never was a leader even in his younger days. What Japan needs is a vigorous leadership which is capable of forestalling the recurrence of crises, and not a wise adviser whose function is to tell how to patch up a crisis when a crisis is already upon the nation.

WITH SAIONJI'S blessing Admiral Yonai has assumed the reins of government. I should be surprised if his cabinet lasts more than half a year. Certainly it will fall if it fails to obtain a new treaty with America within a reasonable time. Yonai is a sincere man and has a good deal of courage and tenacity, but he is not a man who towers head and shoulders above his colleagues.

Given a generous army, willing to forget the past and ready to cooperate with Yonai, the new cabinet may weather the storm, but there is no guaranty such will be the case. It must be remembered that Yonai was the main pillar of the group which last spring defeated the scheme of railroading Japan into a military alliance with the Axis powers.

That scheme was sponsored by most of the army men if not by the army itself. The army may not be sulking in its tent like Achilles, especially in view of the recent development in Europe, but it is but human if it fails to see eye to eye with Yonai. The fate of the new cabinet, then, depends to no small extent upon Yonai's ability to conciliate his military colleagues. This task has been made harder as Gen. Hata, army minister in the retiring cabinet, was, up to the very eve of Yonai's appointment, given the impression that he would be chosen for the premiership.

THE NEW JAPAN, in its earlier days, had Okubo and Kido, Ito and Yamagata, Kodama and Katsura—men whose word carried weight, who were not afraid of stepping upon other fellows' toes, whose forceful leadership was recognized by all, whether military or civilian. For all their faults and foibles, they were real leaders. Above all of them was the crowning leadership of Emperor Meiji himself, who was truly a great ruler.

Today Japan has no such man. Is this because Japan has become "democratic" or has felt the leveling influence of democracy? If so she had better go back to the less democratic and more heroic days of the Meiji era.

As we think of the great Ito, we recall the great influence which he exerted upon the army in order to open Manchuria after the Russo-Japanese war of 1904-'05. For several months after the peace of Portsmouth, Japan, upon the ground of military necessity, maintained a closed-door policy in Manchuria. This evoked a storm of protests from third powers, particularly Britain and America. The press of America and Europe, which had been friendly to Japan while the war was on, became violently hostile.

ITO, then resident general in Korea, deeply concerned with this sudden change of world opinion, could not sit with folded arms. He made a hurried trip to Tokyo, and with Emperor Meiji's permission called a great conference inviting all cabinet members, military leaders, and elder statesmen. At this historic gathering Ito spoke 2 hours urging the abolition of military administration in Manchuria and its opening to the trade of third powers. He argued that the possible loss from this reversal of policy would be more than compensated by the tangible and intangible benefit which was certain to result from it.

That speech, fired with a fervent desire to serve the nation, was the greatest Ito ever made. As a consequence Manchuria was soon opened to other powers. Ito's only regret was that America soon thereafter launched projects which were calculated to undermine the Japanese position in Manchuria.

To counteract this American move he agreed to meet a Russian statesman at Harbin in the hope of arriving at some understanding with Russia. When he alighted from his train at the Harbin Station he was shot by a Korean and died instantly, carrying to his grave his ungratified complaint vis-a-vis America.

These circumstances surrounding the opening of Manchuria 35 years ago are recalled at this time when the opening of the Yangtze is being debated in Tokyo and between Tokyo and Washington. Will Premier Yonai repeat Ito's unhappy experience if he makes the concession demanded by America on the Yangtze? Not likely. The New Deal is not practicing dollar diplomacy in China as America did in the closing years of Ito's life. Conceding that the open door question on the Yangtze, where war is still going on, is more complicated than the similar question in Manchuria after the Russian war was over, Japan, if she only had a forceful leadership, would not permit that question to jeopardize her relations with the third powers.

Army to Show Newest Wings at Bolling Field

The Army will unveil its latest warplanes and aerial equipment at a special showing tomorrow and Saturday at Bolling Field.

Newest and fastest pursuit planes, capable of speeds above 400 miles an hour, will be on view, alongside earlier models which will not fly half that fast. Huge bombers which can carry tons of explosives for thousands of miles likewise will be exhibited together with all types of planes, instruments and accessories.

The Air Corps plans to show Congress and the public what it has accomplished in recent years by comparing the oldest planes in service with the newest. Tomorrow only Congressmen and especially invited guests will be present. Saturday afternoon the exhibit will be open to the public.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Finnish Credit And American Involvement

THE PRESIDENT has assured Congress that an extension of credit to Finland "at this time does not in any way constitute or threaten any so-called involvement in European wars" and, since Congress alone can make credit available, Congress must decide whether it agrees with the President's assurances. It is plain that what the President and the great majority in Congress are considering is involvement in a practical and substantial sense as participants in the European wars, and not whether the United States should or could be impartial and indifferent towards Finland's struggle for existence.

The leaders of both parties and the great mass of the people everywhere have already taken a position of active sympathy for, and open support of, Finland's cause. They were pleased, and no objection was, I believe, heard, when the President accepted the interest payment on the Finnish debt with the understanding that it would somehow be returned to the Finns. There has been no demand from the responsible leaders of Congress that the neutrality act be put into effect against Finland. There has been a widespread agitation for the rupture of diplomatic relations with Soviet Russia. There has been no objection to the informal embargo against Russian military supplies. There has been no objection to the action facilitating the Finnish purchase of the Brewster airplanes. There was no noticeable popular opposition to, but on the contrary general approval of, the first credit of ten millions extended by the Export-Import Bank. And throughout the country, in all the churches, with the open support of Governors, Mayors and public officials, Mr. Hoover has been raising money for the Finnish people and denouncing in unqualified terms the criminal character of Stalin's aggression.

Does Neutrality Mean Being Indifferent

SO, IF TO BE NEUTRAL means to be impartial and indifferent, then neither the people nor the Government have been neutral. If an additional credit is to be refused to Finland on the ground that it would infringe a technical and impartial neutrality, then the actions of the past six weeks need to be undone lest by our own confession Soviet Russia be given a claim for damages.

Actually, of course, the American people are not taking any such doctrinaire view of the European wars. They are not concerned with the shadows but with the substance, and what they have decided upon as their policy is not neutrality in the technical sense but non-participation as belligerents. The whole policy of this Government, as settled in the special session of Congress, has as its primary object to keep the country from being drawn into the fighting in Europe, and as a means to that end, to do whatever can be done to keep the war from spreading. The Pittman Act is not based on the principles of technical neutrality. For it renounces neutral rights that the United States has twice gone to war to uphold. The Pittman Act is a practical device for staying out of the war, just that and no more, and our entire experience under the act indicates that the device is effective.

U. S. Credit to Finns Viewed Desirable

SO WHEN Congress considers the extension of an additional credit to Finland, the question is not whether such a credit is technically unneutral but whether it does anything substantial to commit the country to participation in the European wars. My own conviction is that in so far as a credit has any bearing on the chances of American involvement, it will tend to reduce the chances.

Everyone will agree, I think, that Soviet Russia is incapable of taking military action against the United States, and that the subversive propagandist action of Soviet Russia in the United States will not be increased if we help the Finns to buy what they need, or abated if we show that we are afraid to help them. The Communist conspiracy against American institutions will be what it is, and will have to be dealt with, whether or not we extend a small credit to Finland.

The important consideration is whether the Russo-Finnish war will become merged with the war between the Allies and Hitler. It is clear that the real hesitation about helping the Finns arises from the fear that if these two wars become a general European war, then the United States may find it difficult to confine its financial assistance to Finland alone. I agree that this may be difficult, but I submit that the only sure way to avoid the difficulty is to prevent it from arising.

Finns Keep War From Spreading

IF THE FINNS are able to hold their line, there is an excellent chance that the two wars will not be merged on a common battlefield in Scandinavia. The cause of the Finns is the cause of the northern neutrals, and if the cork can be kept in the bottleneck of Finland, the chances of restricting and localizing the whole war will be greatly improved. If, on the other hand, the Russians break through and the war extends all over Scandinavia, the result may well be an irreparable tragedy. For it is not easy to imagine how the war can be brought to a decent conclusion and Europe reconstructed if these most highly civilized neutrals are bolshevized and nazified.

If it is possible to prevent this catastrophe by extending a credit to Finland, we shall be penny wise and pound foolish not to make that much of an investment in so gallant and so victorious a defense of what we profess to hold most dear.

We should not, I think, shut our eyes to the terrible catastrophe which now threatens the Nordic peoples because we have fixed our eyes on some remote and theoretical implication in the future. Why must a deed which is in itself wise and good be left undone because other circumstances can be imagined when it would not be wise to do such a deed? Must we take the attitude that we cannot trust ourselves, that we dare not drink a glass of beer today because we are weak characters and will, therefore, be drinking a quart of whisky tomorrow?

Certainly we should know what we are doing. Certainly we should keep cool and sober in this grim and dangerous world. But we should not lose confidence in ourselves. We have enough sense and judgment to cross a bridge when we come to it. If we haven't that much sense, then we are not so self-governing as we think we are.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Memory

The thought of you enfolds me like a cloak
Of ruddy warmth that baffles wintry weather,
It can subdue all weeping and invoke
The dear illusion that we are together,
There is no room for sorrow in my mind,
It is so filled with you, and gladness for you;
Only my body grieves—and it is blind—
Groping for old caresses to adore you.

Surely your mind must catch, out there, in space,
This thought of you so vibrant with devotion,
If it can warm me, it must have the grace
To warm you, too! Cannot a great emotion
Possess its own antenna there, as here?
I know the answer—O my very dear!

'Duck Census' Begins; Count One to Square Yard of Water

Post Staff Photos from Goodyear Blimp Enterprise by Goodwin.

THE DEPARTMENT of Agriculture's sixth annual migratory waterfowl inventory expedition, Washington section, returned to its base here yesterday with some news for duck hunters that would be mighty exciting except that the season closed 19 days ago.

The news is that an awful lot of ducks still maintain legal residences in the 65-mile stretch of the Potomac River from Washington to Morgantown, Md.

Just how many ducks that is will remain a carefully guarded expedition secret until estimates of its three counters can be averaged and until returns come in from other sections. From unofficial sources it was learned, however, that in some of the larger flocks there were as many as 20,000 birds.

Another clew to the size of the duck swarms handiest to Capital hunters was provided by R. C. McClanahan, acting chief of the department's section on distribution and migration of birds, who said that coot, more numerous than all other kinds of waterfowl seen except black duck, were counted in the "thousands."

The expedition left Washington in the Goodyear Blimp Enterprise at 10 a. m. It returned about four hours later, with at least one of its members making himself a memorandum to include among standard items of bird-inventory equipment, long woolen underwear. Temperatures in the blimp cabin ranged from 15 to 20 above, not very cold for January but enough, after a couple of hours, to suggest Arctic comparisons.

McClanahan and the other experts, W. E. Crouch, chief of the division of game management, and A. L. Nelson, associate biologist of the Biological Survey, work with field glasses and notebooks. They compute the approximate number of ducks in a flying flock by counting the number in a small area or block and then by estimating the number of blocks in the flock.

If ducks are on the water, they estimate the number of square yards covered by the duck "raft," then subtract one-third to allow for "tapering"—presence of fewer ducks—at the edges of the raft. The method was devised after study of aerial photographs of duck flocks on water which showed, among other things, that each duck has about a square yard of water to himself.

Mary Haworth's Mail

With His Parents Unsympathetic to His Love, Boy Faces Alternatives of Elopement or Affair

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a high school boy, 17 years old. I am deeply in love with a girl a year older than myself. I know it sounds silly for one of my age to claim that I know what love is, but I am sure this is the real thing. I am quite mature for my age and have been around older people most of my life. This girl is now going to a girls' school in Virginia. Her parents are very strict and old fashioned and disapprove of our going together. Mine seem to think I am too young to take it so seriously.

During the Thanksgiving holidays, we allowed our feelings to run away with us. It rather took the glow off of it, for both of us, and she was dreadfully worried. Now, however, it appears that our fears were groundless. Nevertheless, I feel that I should make it up to her. I still want to marry her, but of course I can't without any money.

Perhaps we should just skip it and pretend it never happened. But if I remain at home it will be impossible to keep from seeing her a good deal and there might be a repetition. She wants us to elope, but I know our parents would not help us any and I haven't quite got the nerve to try to support a wife without even a high school education. (I will graduate in June.)

Can you help me, Miss Haworth? I want some advice so badly and my parents are unsympathetic toward me. I love the girl, but I don't want to be married, and neither do I want another "affair." D. R. B.

Self Understanding Gives Emotional Mastery

DEAR D. R. B.: There is some question as to whether you really are as "mature for your age" as you think yourself to be. Rather, the peculiar intensity of your emotional interest in the girl, which you profess yourself powerless to keep under acceptable social control, gives evidence of that instability of character which we associate with psychological immaturity.

No doubt you would resent and reject the suggestion that your current urgent attraction to the girl is a form of "puppy love." And it is unfortunate that this disrespectful term was coined to describe youth's first significant emotional experience. But your present age, plus the confused and contradictory nature of your impulses and intentions in this romance, strongly suggests that the whole experience is more a phenomenon of adolescence than a case of frustrated "real love."

This view of the situation does not, of course, lessen the seriousness of your problem in the least. As I see it, "deliverance from temptation," (either to elope or to lapse reluctantly into a series of furtive transgressions), must come through intelligent understanding of the pressures that are besetting you from within and without. It is a case of, "know the truth and the truth shall make you free."

In order to obtain the self knowledge and emotional poise that will enable you to direct your actions wisely, it seems necessary for you to have competent psychological counsel, such as might be obtained, for instance, from Dr. Paul Ewerhardt, director of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road, northwest, telephone Adams 1033. Dr. Ewerhardt is an outstanding authority in the field of adolescent psychology, and I have already talked with him briefly concerning your problem.

However, it is the invariable policy of all reputable exponents of adolescent psychology to cooperate with parents in giving needed assistance to a minor-age boy or girl—so you must face the fact that you cannot obtain such special instruction clandestinely. You have labeled your parents "unsympathetic." But I am sure their attitude amounts, really, to lack of understanding. They just don't know how desperately you are troubled.

Therefore, you must find the words with which to convince them that you are sitting on top of an emotional volcano at this time—which many erupt to wreck your whole life. You might even tell them that you have gone so far as to ask this columnist's suggestions; that you are determined to talk with a professional counselor; and that they must oblige you by "following through" on that course of action. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

D. C. Debutante To 'Play' Scarlett At Style Show

ANOTHER popular Washington debutante has entered the modeling field, a profession that seems to be luring many members of the younger social set. Miss Patricia Uline Hill, daughter of Mrs. Uline Hill of this city has been selected as the Washington girl who most closely resembles the beauteous Scarlett O'Hara, as played by Vivien Leigh in the film "Gone With The Wind." To substantiate this resemblance and to better display the handsome film heroine gowns, Miss Hill will model a number of authentic costumes today at 2:30 in the Lansburgh store. The 19-year-old King-Smith student's black hair, strongly arched brows and slender waistline will bear out authoress Margaret Mitchell's book descriptioin of the original Scarlett.

Miss Hill's consent to "play" Scarlett O'Hara for a day will serve as her contribution to the Crippled Children's Fund as well as coinciding with Lansburgh's second floor showing of the entire group of original costumes worn by Rhett Butler, Ashley Wilkes, Melanie and other characters in the film. Since the film costumes will be on display locally for this one day, they will hold particular interest for costume design student since movie designer Walter Plunkett's costume research of the Civil War period was accurate and exhausting. Everyone who has read the book will be interested in comparing visual costume notes with Miss Mitchell's detailed descriptions of "the green sprigged muslin" and the "black silk mourning dress."

A Costume for Every Sports Need

Your Figure, Madame!

It's Third Stage of Reducing That Tests the Will Power

When 'Weight Plateau' Is Reached, Loss Of Pounds Is Slow; Results Will Be Obtained Eventually if Program Is Followed

By Ida Jean Kain

THE addition of weight is simple—pleasantly simple! It is the subtraction of the pounds that is complicated. Probably the reason is the general lack of experience in taking weight off! But, anyway, when you know what to expect on your weight program, it doesn't seem nearly as hard to stick to the straight and narrow path of the reducer.

To begin with, you lose water. That is the reason the initial weight loss is often amazingly rapid. And, as you can see, the more water you have to lose, the more weight you will lose! It is not unusual for a reducer to chalk off from 4 to 5 pounds during the first week of reducing.

But once this soft watery fat is removed, you begin to deal with the more solid tissue, and particularly the fat which has been deposited on the abdomen, since this is one of the prime parking places for adipose tissue.

Don't Let Muscles Sag

As you may have gathered, the main purpose of the muscular girdle is not to give you a streamlined figure, but to hold the important abdominal organs in their proper position. When weight is gained in this area, these organs are partially supported by the fat. Then when the fat is removed, the muscles must be strong enough to support the organs. Otherwise, the organs will sag as weight is removed. This is both unhealthful and unlovely.

It is the third stage in reducing that is hard—and the point at which many a reducer decides to call the whole thing off! After the initial fat and the abdominal girth have been lost, you reach a weight plateau. You lose little, if any, weight. All you can do is keep on dieting. You will finally lose the fat which has interlarded the muscles. This is the hardest of all to lose.

The going is not even as smooth as pictured! There are a few reducers who fail to lose weight for the first week of two of their diets! And there are even cases on record of gains despite a calorie deficit!

But this aggravating behavior on the part of the scales is caused by just one thing: storage of water as the fat is lost. (This has nothing to do with the water you drink.) If this should happen to you, don't be discouraged. Keep right on with your low-calorie diets. Eventually the water balance will be adjusted to normal and suddenly the scales will drop several pounds.

Loss Bound to Vary

On the average, you should expect to lose around two pounds a week on a 1,000 to 1,200-calorie diet. That does not mean an exact, unvarying loss of two pounds a week. You might lose several pounds one week, none the next! But if you stay on your diet and exercise daily you can gradually trim down both weight and measurements to perfection.

Suits Insure Against Cold Of the South

By Marshall Adams

The Post Food Editor.

EVEN if your sports enthusiasms extend no further than practicing a "Beer Barrel Polka" at home, there are active sports togs to suit that and every other whim. Every sport from duck shooting to aquaplaning was considered a sports-minded local shop when it presented a style showing for the vacationer last week.

Marshall Adams

Both the practical and the glamorous side of sportswear were revealed in this promenade, as well as the even more vital consideration of comfort. For instance, an approved hunting costume was shown for the Washington woman who has heretofore blissfully traveled to Sea Island or Aiken for a bit of shooting only to find that the cool breezes left her shivering in her Southern cottons. This utilitarian costume for combating Georgia or Carolina temperatures combined a warm, but lightweight, camelshair coat and matching skirt with a workmanlike, though jaunty felt, an ascot and a wool sweater—all camouflaged in neutral colorings for "tracking down the prey."

For the usual Florida sunning, everything from the functional lastex swim suit to the petticoated and pinafored cotton beach dress was proposed. Apron fronts and poke bonnets stressed the demure and sugary type of beachcomber for the year 1940. Bicycling, golfing and hiking costumes for the South fostered mantailored slacks and shirts rather than last year's favored culottes. A young "Cosmopolite" suit, tailored by Huxley, was introduced for the sportswoman who has a one-tracked mind on budgets and wardrobe restrictions as well as on favorite colors and fabrics.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

The Male Animal New Comedy, Lifts Level Of N. Y. Theater Season

New York, Jan. 17.

THE 1940 theatrical year began with an unusual play, one which will join "Life with Father" and "The Man Who Came to Dinner" as the fun sensations of the season. The newcomer bears the provocative title "The Male Animal," and it was written by that weird humorist from Chillicothe, Ohio, James Thurber, who doubles in strange cartoons, and by Elliot Nugent, who began his career in the theater as a juvenile actor and has wound up as a director of motion pictures.

Alice Hughes

This play is delightfully goofy. Nugent plays a dreamy professor in a Midwestern college, and a delightful actresss named Ruth Matteson performs vividly as his wife. But it seems to me the finest work is done by a young girl, a comparative newcomer named Gene Tierney, whose second season in the theater this is. Judged by her work in "The Male Animal," her future looks bright, and the eyes of the Nation will do well to focus on this youngster.

The season so far has not been sensationally successful, but this comedy lifts the level of theatergoers' pleasure. It furnishes a whole evening of laughs, which we need so much in these more or less dolorous days.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN:

The historic mammy singer, Al Jolson, is in our town and proposes to star in a new musical show to be called "On the Line." His role will be that of a jazz bandleader somewhat resembling Artie Shaw. Another of the leads, in the company will be Martha Raye, which certainly rounds out an interesting duo.

Across the river in New Jersey lives a woman named Mrs. Grazia Abbate. A few days ago, celebrating her hundredth birthday, she performed a lively jig, completing the fete by kissing each of the 130 relatives gathered at the fiesta. All in all, Mrs. Abbate had herself quite a time at her centenary, but I wonder how many of us would care to reach that peak?

A remarkable birthday has just been celebrated at New Rochelle, N. Y., by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who for many years has been a militant fighter for women's rights. Mrs. Catt is now 81 years old, and in honor of her natal day she received the degree of Doctor of Laws from the Moravian College for Women at Bethlehem, Pa. Dr. Edwin Heath delivered the honorary sheepskin in person. Mrs. Catt chose the occasion to comment on the forward strides taken by women's schools since she was a young student, and certainly no one can deny that.

OUR little Mayor LaGuardia has a pet campaign which is driving the historic pushcart markets from our streets. He now plans to build, on the West Side, a nine-block indoor market, and it will cost a mere $4,000,000.

The Gentler Sex

By MALVINA LINDSAY

Lesson in Thrift

EDITOR, THE GENTLER SEX: Upon reading your column on women's penchant for saying those adorable boxes that Christmas presents come in, I started the New Year by resolutely throwing all of mine away. I did surrender temporarily to the temptation to keep one beautiful red box with decorations of holly, Christmas trees, small chubby children carrying packages, etc. But I also threw this one away two hours later.

Now I find that I need two of these boxes—one to put some nuts in that I received for Christmas (I even dumped the nuts out of the box they came in in order to throw away the box), and one to put my hair curlers in, as they have been lying around much too long in a dog-eared paper bag. What do you suggest? Sincerely yours, (MISS) F. W. S.

(Editor's Note—The problem presented by F. W. S. has been referred to Miss LaJeanne DeSpain, this column's expert on style, cosmetology, antiques, politics, badminton, husband hunting, international relations, guppey raising and the Personality Glamorous. Her solution follows.)

By (Miss) LaJeanne DeSpain

The serious dilemma in which Miss F. W. S. now finds herself should be a warning to all women. Always remember, gentle readers, that a box saved is the poorhouse spurned.

Now if there is one thing that I want to emphasize in my little lessons on the Personality Glamorous it is that men prefer women who save things. Nothing irritates a man so much as not being able to find his newspaper of yesterday, his Saturday Evening Post of the week before last, or his tennis shoes of ten years ago.

Many women today are recklessly risking the loss of their husbands' love by carelessly throwing away old pipes, old pipe cleaners, old shoe horns, old letters, old pamphlets, old copies of the National Geographic, old volumes of "Burke's Speech on Conciliation," old high school annuals, old college pennants, old suitcases, old bathrobes, old shirts, old pieces of string and all sorts of old things that are dear to the masculine heart.

Now the truly clever—and glamorous—woman saves everything and makes use of it. Take for instance, paper sacks. I am sorry to report that I notice a growing tendency on the part of women to destory paper sacks. My friends, it is waste like that that has caused many a Hollywood divorce!

Fun With Paper Sacks

Moreover, there are a great many fascinating uses to which paper sacks may be put. Here is one suggestion: Cut them in shreds with a vegetable shredder and shape them into a Hawaiian skirt. Then when guests come, entertain them with a Hula dance of your own improvising. Just imagine how your men guests especially will respond to such an original little hostess touch!

I also find that too many women are throwing away string. Girls, no man wants to marry a woman who throws away string! Moreover, string also may be used in many fascinating ways. Here is one suggestion:

At your next party pair the men and women guests together by drawing names from a hat or by some similar original device. Then provide the couples with your left-over string and have them make designs with the string on their fingers. Who can tell what happy romances may be fostered by couples working together this way to produce Jacob's ladders, cat's cradles, etc.? Or, another delightful use for left-over string at parties is to stage a contest of untying knots.

Coat Hanger Collection

I also understand that many women are discarding wire coat hangers. Ladies, this is serious! Think of all the fascinating things that can be done with coat hangers! If nothing else, start a collection of coat hangers. This will give you increased poise and self-assurance among other women, when you point out that you, too, are a collector. It will make you more appealing to men when they learn that you have such an unusual hobby.

Now to get to the problem of the unfortunate Miss F. W. S. She has made a serious mistake in throwing away all her beautiful boxes. But her situation is not without hope.

My advice to you, F. W. S., in your present emergency, is to cultivate your sex appeal. Meet as many men as possible and be as fascinating as possible. Then new boxes may begin to come in.

Both Valentine's Day and Easter are approaching. If you cultivate your men friends properly, you should shortly have a fresh supply of beautiful new boxes—candy and flower boxes, glove, stocking, handkerchief and jewel boxes—or who knows, perhaps even hat boxes, coat boxes, piano boxes!

And this time a word of warning. Save your boxes! Remember—the woman who has plenty of good boxes usually has plenty to put into them!

Good Utensils Speed Up Cooking

Nothing speeds up mealtime preparation so much as spick-and-span cooking utensils. With every pot and pan clean and shining, cooking seems more like recreation than ever before.

The new cooking utensils do their work so well it's a joy to keep them clean and in good working order. Tight-fitting lids keep flavors and heat from escaping. Handles shaped to fit the hand are stubbornly resistant to heat. Flat bottoms and straight sides utilize every bit of heat on all kinds of ranges, while smooth, seamless joinings do away with food-catching rims and make washing an easy detail.

Mrs. Charles Edison Entertains For 25 at F Street Club Luncheon

Guests Talk of Many Things at Party; Navy Secretary's Wife Receives Informally, Assisted by Mrs. George Barnett

By Hope Ridings Miller

ENTERTAINING AT HER SECOND luncheon this week, Mrs. Charles Edison, wife of the Secretary of the Navy, was hostess to 25 guests yesterday at the 1925 F Street Club.

The party had everything. A red velvet carpet of welcome stretched from the street to the door of the club; William, the famous footman, was on duty; and a popular hostess and a number of distinguished guests helped to make the luncheon one of the red-letter events of the week.

HOPE R. MILLER

Receiving informally in the drawing room of the club, Mrs. Edison wore a tailored black frock beneath a short Persian lamb jacket, a matching pill-box turban and a wide muff of the same fur.

Assistant hostess, appointed after she arrived, was Mrs. George Barnett, whose black ensemble was set off with a three-strand pearl necklace, a violet corsage and a smart black hat with the veil tied perkily under her chin.

The long table in the dining room was arranged at a diagonal and decked with three huge bouquets of pink roses, snapdragons, Japanese iris, buddleia and mimosa.

Guests arriving at 1 o'clock came on from committee meetings all over town. Listening to their round of talk over tomato juice and sherry before luncheon, one would think practically everybody in town is working day and night for one "cause" or another.

Mrs. Cary Langhorne and Lady Lewis, both of whom looked like fashion plates in their black outfits, were among those coming on from the Thrift Shop committee meeting at the Sulgrave Club. They were full of plans for the annual Thrift Shop dance (to be called a Leap Year Ball) on March 6, and were heartily in agreement that no matter what is done for European war victims, charity should begin at home.

Women With Causes Dominate Scene

Mrs. John Allan Dougherty said most of her time these days is devoted to plans for celebrations in connection with the President's Birthday Ball. Mrs. Albert Niblack was bemoaning the fact that the luncheon of the American Friends of France scheduled for next Monday would conflict with a luncheon following Mrs. Lawrence Townsend's musical; and Mrs. Barnett said she was spending virtually every waking moment working out a campaign for a committee on urgent relief for France.

Finnish relief was, and is, a major concern of Mrs. Emil Hurja, another of yesterday's guests, and practically everybody in the company seemed to be making plans to attend the premiere of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" on Monday evening when proceeds will go to Children's Hospital.

But lest you think the party took much too serious a turn, I'll have to tell you that relief projects and programs seemed to be shelved by the time the guests sat down to luncheon, and table talk revolved around lighter subjects.

Political Prophecies Accent Table Talk

I heard somebody away down the table wondering "if Roosevelt really will run;" and somebody else saying she had it from a friend who had it straight from the White House that "such a thought has never seriously entered his head."

One guest said she was sure the Republicans would pick Taft to head the ticket "because everybody is so worn out with vivid personalities." The line of talk took on an international turn when somebody wondered "what the British really think of us" about something (I didn't catch just what); and somebody else quietly observed that "what the English think of us seems slightly less important now than what we think of them."

Mrs. Donald Richberg, who was among the guests, said that she and her husband planned to be off to Phoenix, February 1 for a three-week stay. Mrs. Watler B. Woodson observed that she really should have had breakfast with Mrs. Edison yesterday in order to make "a complete set" of the day's meals. She and Admiral Woodson entertained at dinner last night in honor of Secretary and Mrs. Edison, the party for 12 taking place at the Woodson home on Woodley road.

Mrs. Jesse Jones Is Among Guests

Always a popular addition to any party is Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, who was a sort of unofficial assistant hostess at the luncheon and who was smartly turned out in a tailored black frock worn with a bright red velvet turban. Mrs. Jesse Jones, whose purple frock and matching hat was set off with a gardenia corsage, sat to the right of the hostess, and Mrs. Harry P. Huse, wearing a becoming blue frock and a brown turban, was to her left.

Mrs. David Sellers, whose trim black outfit was accented with white touches, and Mrs. Albert Niblack kept up a lively conversation throughout the luncheon. At the opposite end of the table were Mrs. Walter Trent and Mrs. Chester Nimitz, the latter of whom may start a new hair style. Her coiffure featured a black bow tied around her blond locks, which flowed down her back, little-girl fashion.

Others there included Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Henry Williams, Mrs. J. Fred Essary, Miss Minnie Mae Fleming, whose smart blue beret was perched jauntily over her auburn hair; Miss Ruth Jones, Mrs. John Towers, Miss Evelyn Peyton Gordon and Mrs. R. S. Riggs.

Mrs. Edison will leave for New York today for a brief stay. She expects to return late tomorrow.

Prof. A. T. Deibert Plans Tea Today

Prof. Alan T. Deibert, adviser to students from foreign countries in the George Washington University, will give a tea this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock at International House on the campus.

Hostesses will be Mme. Feer, wife of the Counselor of the Legation of Switzerland; Mrs. William Crane Johnstone, jr., wife of the dean of the junior council; Mrs. Albert Barrows, Mrs. Clifton Lee and Miss Dorothy Glogavac representing Yugoslavia.

Mrs. Land Subs As Hostess

Instead of calling off the dinner because she was ill, Mrs. Thomas Holcomb called in Mrs. Emory S. Land to serve as hostess, and the party planned for last evening in honor of the Minister of Denmark and Mme. de Kauffmann went off on schedule at the Marine Barracks quarters of the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Holcomb.

Guests included Rear Admiral and Mrs. Leigh Noyes, Read Admiral John D. Wainwright, Rear Admiral Land, Capt. and Mrs. Edgar Woods, Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mr. and Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Miss Lydia Loring and Clarence Hewes, who will leave today for a stay of six weeks in New Orleans and Palm Beach.

Still another guest was Miss Carolyn Nash, who spends much time in Paris and recently returned from there by clipper.

Play Thrills Junior League

Chills, thrills and mystery invaded the Junior League yesterday. Paul Keyes, as Lord Lebanon, and John Hurley, as Chief Inspector Tanner of Scotland Yard, presented a scene from Edgar Wallace's "Criminal at Large," the Washington Civic Theater's current production at the Wardman Park.

The occasion was a luncheon given by the Junior League for a number of newcomers who have transferred their membership to this league. The guests included Miss Helen de Limur, San Francisco; Mrs. Raymond Lyons, Honolulu; Mrs. James Polk, El Paso; Mrs. Edward Kohlsaat, Chicago; Mrs. Schuyler Pyne, Portland, Oreg.; Miss Silvine Clagett, Baltimore, and Mrs. W. Meade Fletcher, jr., New York City.

Day Tuttle, director of the Civic Theater, discussed the work. Miss Elinor Lord and Alan Schneider were also present from the Civic Theater.

Among other guests were Mr. T. J. Abernethy, Mrs. P. Landon Banfield, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., Mrs. Beale Bloomer, Mrs. H. Lee Boatwright, Miss Barbara Bolling, Mrs. G. Howland Chase, Mrs. Dallas Dort, Miss Juliet Dulany, Mrs. Charles D. Prince Otto's Brother Mixes With New Dealers And Braintrusters on Short Visit to Capital

THE ARCHDUKE Felix Hapsburg-Lorraine dodged tea parties to hobnob with New Dealers and brain-trusters on his visit to Washington this week. After a stay at the home of Countess Szechenyi on Massachusetts avenue, he dashed off again yesterday afternoon without so much as sampling a paper-thin sandwich or meeting a local glamour girl.

The archduke, younger brother of Prince Otto, heir to the non-existent Hapsburg throne, is in this country on—guess what'—a lecture tour. Though only 22, he is speaking all over the country on the weighty problam of the future of central Europe after the war. And in perfect English, too.

AT A LUNCHEON given for him yesterday by David Shenker, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, the archduke, who is one of eight brothers and sisters, met Norman Davis, chairman of the Red Cross, and several brain-trusters. On Tuesday evening he was taken in tow by Sherlock Davis, of the SEC, who gathered in Mrs. Shaw Parker, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Robert Coe, John Stonborough and one or two others for supper and some drinks.

The archduke's romantic family now makes its headquarters in a Belgian chateau after fleeing from Spain when the revolution broke out there three years ago. Prince Otto has switched to Paris since the outbreak of war to be nearer the center of things, but his mother, the Empress Zita, remains in Belgium.

The titled visitor, very wide-eyed and intelligent, asked hundreds of questions about what's going on now in the New Deal.

MRS. SIDNEY LEE and Mrs. Edward May, here for the winter, are, in addition to being two very attractive newcomers, the only women who've ever crossed darkest Africa, from Cairo to Capetown, in high heels. On this trip, from which they only recently returned, they dispensed, even while going through steaming jungles, with the usual mosquito netting and sun helmet equipment.

The two made the entire trip all on their own, by motor, plane and boat. They spent their most adventurous night sitting up in a blind erected in a tree at the edge of a clearing in the jungle. When the moon came out they saw a herd of rhinoceros trample out of the underbrush and gather at the clearing. They motored across the Sudan Desert, along a route which could only have been covered by foot until three years ago, in a temperature of 118 sweltering degrees.

Mrs. Lee is the sister of the very beautiful Mrs. Warren Barbour, wife of the Senator from New Jersey. She got the idea of the African tour when she met many explorers while working on the magazine published by the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

BACHELOR NOTES: George Williams will give a cocktail party on Saturday for Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hill, recent newcomers to the Capital. He is with the British embassy and she is the daughter of John Alden Carpenter, the famous composer . . . Washington, which can ill afford to lose any bachelors, will part with a popular one when Hendrick Bos, of the Netherlands Legation, leaves shortly for Chang Kai-Shek's capital in the wilds of China, where he has been ordered for duty . . . Another popular bachelor, Bob Coulter, has gone to New York for three months on business for the Home Loan Bank Board.

THE CURRENT 'FLU outbreak can really be considered serious when it begins to play havoc with carefully planned dinner parties. One hostess had so many of her guests drop out that she finally ended up with a completely different set from the group of 20 she originally invited.

The Cromwells To Be Honored at Tea Tomorrow

A number of prominent women will serve as hostesses at the tea to be given tomorrow afternoon by the English-Speaking Union in honor of the newly appointed U. S. Minister to Canada and Mrs. James Cromwell.

Among those who will assist are Lady Chalkley, Mrs. Harold Haig Sims, Mrs. Rudolph Stanley-Brown, Mrs. William S. Corby, Mrs. Wallace Dempsey, Mrs. Gilbert Hitchcock, Mrs. Harry P. Huse, Mrs. Hennen Jennings, Mrs. Frank Royer Keefer, Mrs. James Alexander Lyon.

Also, Mrs. William Pearson, Mrs. Carlos del Mar, Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. Walter G. Peter, Mrs. Effingham Townsend, Mrs. Metcalfe Walling, Mrs. James Oliver Murdock, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Miss Bertha Noyes, Mrs. George Rublee, Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Samuel West Russell and Miss Mabel Turner.

Mrs. Watson Gives Party for Countess

Honoring the Countess of Gainsborough and her daughter Lady Maureen Noel, Mrs. Kenneth Watson entertained yesterday afternoon at a small reception at her home on Massachusetts avenue.

The Countess of Gainsborough and her daughter, who recently arrived in Washington, are staying at the Wardman Park Hotel and will be in this country indefinitely. Her home Exton Park in Rutland, has been put at the disposal of the British government to house refugees for the duration of the war.

Among the guests yesterday were Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman, Lady Leslie, Mlle. Yolande de Mauduit, Commercial Counselor of the Brazilian Embassy Paulo G. Hasslocher, the Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy Hugo Gouthier, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mrs. Scudder Doeg, Mr. and Mrs. Churchill Candee, Representative Charles O. Andrews, Charles Mason Remey, Mr. and Mrs. Harold de Veau, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurd, Meade Patrick, Keith Schwinley, James Parks, Wolcott Waggaman and Eugene O'Dunne.

Mrs. Duncan E. Cameron will entertain today at luncheon at the 1925 F Street Club in honor of the countess.

Col. and Mrs. E. B. Clark Fete Gen. Hutcheson

Col. and Mrs. Edward B. Clark gave a dinner Tuesday evening at the Army and Navy Club for Maj. Gen. Grote Hutcheson, U. S. A., retired, of Saratoga, Calif., who was a West Point classmate of Col. Clark.

Guests were Mrs. David C. Shanks, wife of another of Gen. Hutcheson's classmates, and Mrs. Harry Taylor, widow of still another classmate; Rear Admiral C. H. T. Lowndes, Col. and Mrs. Edward G. Lowry, Mrs. William Aspinwall, and Maj. Edwin Sibert, son of another of Gen. Hutcheson's classmates.

C. Kenkel, and John Magruder. She was assisted by Laurin B. Askew 3d, who is a student in the Foreign Service School of Georgetown University.

Mrs. Pasvolsky Gives Luncheon for Mrs. L. F. Bachrach

Mme. Zadeikis, wife of the Minister of Lithuania, was ranking guest at a luncheon given yesterday by Mrs. Leo Pasvolsky at the Cosmos Club. The party was in honor of Mrs. Louis Fabian Bachrach, of West Newton, Mass., who is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach at their home in Bethesda. The visitor, who arrived here a few days ago from White Sulphur Springs, will return to her Massachusetts home tomorrow.

Others at yesterday's luncheon were Mme. Naoumoff, wife of the Bulgarian Minister, and her sister-in-law, Mlle. Vena A. Naoumoff; Mrs. Walter A. Riddell, wife of the Canadian Counselor; Mrs. Felix Morley, Mrs. Marian Barre, Mrs. Charles Yost and Mrs. Walter K. Bachrach.

Irimescu Parties Will Be Given

Although the Rumanian Minister, Radu Irimescu, sailed yesterday on the steamship Rex for his homeland, the parties he and Mme. Irimescu had planned for this week and the next will go off on schedule. Mme. Irmescu, who recently returned from a Southern vacation, is remaining at the legation while her husband is away. Eugen Teodorescu is Charge d'Affaires.

There will be a dinner at the legation this evening and a luncheon on Friday. Invitations have been issued for a dinner Tuesday.

1925 F Street Club's Dance Series Closes

Popularity of Wednesday Programs May Bring More Affairs in Spring; Several Parties Are Held Before Event

The final dance in a series of three subscription parties held on Wednesday evenings at the 1925 F Street Club took place last evening and was so successful the committee departed with tentative plans for more dances in the club garden in the spring.

Though dinner came with the dance, several members of Capital society asked friends in for a drink earlier. All went to the club in a body. Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hinton entertained a group which included Commander and Mrs. Anthony Coleby of the British Embassy, Miss Mary Louise Marsh, stunning in blue crepe with a corselette effect of black taffeta; Miss Stellita Stapleton, Mrs. Emmons Smith, Jose de Lasa, of the Cuban Embassy; Griffith Warfield, Tinsley Garnett and Pendleton Hogan. Mrs. Hinton wore a frock of white net with a sequin bodice, particularly becoming with her black hair.

Another merry party gathered at the home of Mrs. Sutherland Mayo for drinks before the dance. The hostess, who leaves today for a stay in New York, wore a frock of palest blue, made with a bouffant skirt and black beading which started on the bodice and continued down the front of the skirt. Her guests included Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Exnicios, prime organizers with several other friends of the dances, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, who, now that Mrs. John Gross is no longer in town, might be called "The Spirit of the 1925 F Street Club;" Mr. and Mrs. Chase Donaldson, Mrs. Hugh O'Donnell, in black trimmed with coq feathers; Mrs. William T. Mann, Frederick Roy, Robert Coe, John Foster and Roberto Mendoza.

Mrs. Emery Smith had some friends in at her home, later taking them along to the club. Among those invited were Mrs. Noyes Lewis, Eddie Gardiner, Benjamin Plunket, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Mrs. George T. Pettingill and others.

Also at the dance were Dr. and Mrs. Robert Moran, Col. Francis Harrington, Mrs. Pearsons Rust, Merritt Swift, Dr. Henry Gwynne, Mrs. Francis Whitten, Charles Gaines and Robert Buell, of the State Department, who also had friends in for drinks before the party.

Dancing was on the sun porch. As usual with the Wednesday night series, it was "small and early."

Mrs. Roosevelt Says We Can't Draw Away

Peace Must Be Universal to Be Enduring, Says First Lady Before General Club Federation Board

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Pointing out that there was no assurance of peace for anyone in the world unless there were peace everywhere, Mrs. Roosevelt yesterday urged members of the General Federation of Women's Clubs to try in their contacts with other women to make it plain that "we can't draw away and say 'let the rest of the world go hang.'"

The First Lady received the General Federation Board at tea at the White House yesterday afternoon, preceding the meeting at the Mayflower Hotel last night where Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, addressed it.

Answering a question from Mrs. Frederic Beggs, chairman of international relations, as to what contributions the club women could make in the present international situation, Mrs. Roosevelt said those who studied the question should make it plain to others that this country could not withdraw itself from the rest of the world in an age when everything in modern invention tended to draw the world closer together.

She answered other questions on the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy; the menace of feeblemindedness in America; folk lore and music and the administration of funds derived from the President's Birthday Balls. She also called attention to the recently acquired Lincoln portrait that replaces the one which formerly hung over the mantel in the dining room.

Women Take Buses To White House

The club women went from the hotel, where their sessions are being held, to the White House in three chartered buses. They assembled in the East Ballroom and from there moved through the green room and the blue room to the red room, where Mrs. Roosevelt greeted them. She wore a green velvet gown with a narrow frill of rhinestone-studded lace at the neck and wrists.

Mrs. Saidie Orr Dunbar, federation president, wore a black gown, with turquoise clips, and a black hat trimmed with a turquoise feather.

Tea was served in the State dining room, with Mrs. James Helm and Miss Malvina Thompson presiding at the table.

The Federal Security administrator, in his address last night, declared a nation's preparation against economic insecurity is an impregnable defense against threats of political insecurity. He advocated a policy affording such protection as true economy and genuine thrift.

Comparing the need for national economy with the need for home economy, he said: "We don't think it good economy to allow the swamps to breed mosquitoes to carry malaria and yellow fever; to allow young people to wander aimlessly over the country looking for jobs that do not exist, begging or stealing their food, and drifting into lives of crime and indigence. "We actually believe that we save money by preserving life and health. It is cheaper to spend for CCC camps than it is to enlarge our jails and penitentiaries.

"We take it as sound economy to make the necessary expenditures to fix the roof of a house, to paint the barn and the garage, to repair the furniture, and in other ways conserve our material possessions in the home. We are now coming to believe that it is also sound economy to conserve our soil, our forests, and our natural resources.

"A hundred years ago people saw no harm in destroying a million dollars worth of property to make a thousand dollars worth of profit. There was plenty more beyond the frontier. It was cheaper to waste materials and save money than to spend and save materials. But America has now grown up and we know that a policy of replacement, replenishment, and conservation is necessary to our national wealth for future generations.

"There is one more item of national thrift that cannot be ignored," he said. "We must spend the necessary amounts to save for ourselves and our children the ideals of democracy. We do not hesitate to spend enough to make our country secure against military invasion. We are at last realizing that it is equally important to invest the amounts necessary for social security."

Piano Recital Is on Program

The program last night also included a piano recital by Norman Freudenheim, concert pianist and teacher.

Yesterday afternoon Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, first vice president and chairman of the Golden Jubilee Committee, announced plans for the celebration of the federation's fiftieth anniversary. The chief project is the raising of a $1,000,000 endowment fund for the organization, which now is $214,000 toward the goal. Three gold medals also will be presented to pioneer clubwomen as a national award and three similar ones will be given in each State as well as bronze medals by each club to its own pioneer. The medals are designed by Bryan Baker, of New York, after the statue of "The Pioneer Woman."

The federation's birthday will be observed on April 24 with a broadcast on which Mrs. Dunbar and Mrs. Whitehurst will speak and which will include a dramatization of the first federation meeting.

Today, following a club forum led by department forum, there will be a joint luncheon of the American Association of University Women, the American Home Economics Association and the Federation on Consumer Problems. Donald Montgomery, consumers' counsel for the Department of Agriculture, and H. W. Brightman, president of the National Consumer-Retail Council, will speak.

This afternoon at 2 o'clock, there will be a symposium on "What Kind of World Organization Can Best Serve the Cause of Peace and Insure a Democratic Way of Life?" Clarence Streit, author of "Union Now;" Miss Mary A. Dingman, and Warren Kelchner will be the speakers.

Tea Honors Fru Kjelsberg, Norse Leader

Judge Lucy Howorth Entertains at Her Apartment for Visitor

Fru Betzy Kjelsberg, honorary president of the National Council of Norway, was guest of honor at a tea given by Judge Lucy Somerville Howorth, president of the Business and Professional Women's Club of Washington, at her apartment in the Kennedy-Warren.

Fru Kjelsberg met Judge Howorth when she came here in 1919 to represent Norway at the International Conference of Working Women, called by President Woodrow Wilson. Judge Howorth, then doing industrial research for the Y. W. C. A., was assisting in arrangements for the session. Last summer Judge Howorth was in Norway to attend an international conference of business and professional women's clubs.

Fru Kjelsberg was founder of one of the first organizations for business and professional women in her country, a club in Drammens, Norway, started in 1894.

Questioned by some of the guests on the international situation, she had little to say except that Norway, always a peaceful and peace-loving country, hoped there would be assistance for Finland, and was praying for peace within its own borders. "But we remain constantly watchful," she said.

The hostess was assisted yesterday by Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, Mrs. Katherine Winston, Mrs. Marion Britt, Mrs. George Holmes, Miss Elizabeth Mann and Mrs. William M. Morell, who alternated at the tea table, and by Miss Earlene White, Judge Marion Stewart and Judge Laura Brown, of the Board of Veterans' Appeals, of which Judge Howorth is also a member, and Dr. Florence Armstrong.

Among the guests were Mrs. Jewel Swofford, Miss Mary Anderson, Judge Annabel Matthews, Miss Emma T. Hahn, Miss Nina Kinsella, Miss Laura Hanson, Mrs. Ruth Robinson Roach, of Kansas City, Mo.; Miss Vera Lundquist, Mrs. Stella LaRoux, Mrs. Ethel Ashman, Miss Margaret Ralston, Mrs. Grace Keller Cooper, Mrs. Laura Waters.

The Congressional Club will hold a reception in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt, from 3:30 to 5 at the clubrooms. The executive board will be in the receiving line with the First Lady.

Mrs. Richard Duncan, who is chairman of the hostess committee, and the members of her committee, will assist.

The United States Marine Band will play.

Mrs. Julia Bock Harwood, of Decatur, Ill., world traveler and lecturer, will speak for the regular Friday afternoon tea at the club tomorrow.

She is a former speech instructor, and studied at Oxford University and is listed in Who's Who in American Women, as well as the International Blue Book. "Globe Trotting" will be the subject of Mrs. Harwood's talk. Costumes will be modeled by Mrs. Fanchon Castro, Miss Virginia Gibson, Miss Mary Alice Arnold, Miss Dorothy Mayfield, Miss Gladys Kitchen, Miss Margaret Rich, Miss Dorothy Ramspeck and Miss Charlotte King.

The following will alternate at the tea table: Mrs. Will Rogers, of Oklahoma; Mrs. Jesse P. Wolcott, of Michigan; Mrs. J. Buell Snyder, of Pennsylvania, and Mrs. J. Hardin Peterson, of Florida.

Chevy Chase Club Assails County Heads

Women Demand Abolition of Place Of Aid Supervisor

The Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, meeting yesterday, passed a resolution protesting the failure of the Montgomery County commissioners to abolish the office of supervisor of county aid and releasing funds for relief allocated to the county but which must be administered by a State-controlled agency.

The resolution was presented by Mrs. Arthur T. Davenport, civics chairman. It pointed out that the State department of public welfare has $8,311 in funds allocated to Montgomery County for relief which is tied up because the commissioners have failed to act under authority given them by the Maryland State Legislature to abolish the office of supervisor of county aid and transfer this work to the board of public welfare.

The situation was investigated by the "Know Your Country" study group before the resolution was prepared for presentation to the club.

Mrs. Frederick Kerby, club president, presided at the meeting. The nominating committee was named. It will report in March on candidates for the office of treasurer and corresponding secretary. Mrs. Kenneth McRae is chairman, and has serving with her Mrs. Lloyd Sutton, Mrs. James Hayden, Mrs. Roy Palmer and Mrs. Robert Roudabush.

The guest speaker yesterday was F. C. Holloman, administrative assistant to the director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Mine Society Acts to Avert Bureau Politics

Resolution Urges Agency Be Kept Free Of Partisanship

An effort to prevent the Bureau of Mines from being "sabotaged by partisan politics" through the appointment of a "politician" as successor to John W. Finch, former director, has been launched by the Mining and Metallurgical Society of America, it was learned yesterday.

The society, although small, carries weight as the "elder statesmen" professional group of the American mining industry.

Action began in the form of a resolution passed at the society's annual meeting. Ratification is being sought from the group's members, who have been canvassed by mail.

Danger Scented

The letter from the society's secretary transmitting the resolution to the members says that certain persons in the society "who are in a position to know" believe that the bureau "is in great danger of being turned into a political agency."

The resolution and letter, however, do not protest the forced resignation of Finch, ousted two weeks ago by Secretary of Interior Ickes on grounds that he did not have enough "iron in his blood" to control a "bureaucratic clique" in the agency opposed to some of Ickes' policies.

Instead, the society merely called on its members to "use their influence in every direction possible to see that the new director . . . is an engineer of outstanding ability and integrity and not a politician."

Secretary Ickes, who has been vacationing away from Washington since shortly after the vacancy was announced, has so far given no indication of a possible successor. The position is filled by Presidential appointment, subject to Senate confirmation.

Most prominently mentioned to succeed Finch is Edward B. Swanson, associate director for production of the Interior Department's Petroleum Conservation division.

Swanson, 45, has been connected with the Government for about 20 years. He was formerly in the Bureau of Mines and was a member of the Board that administered the NRA petroleum code. A graduate of the University of Washington, Swanson, also holds a degree in economics from the Brookings Institute here.

Change in Policy

The mining society's resolution noted Finch was reported to have resigned "on account of disagreements which in no way reflect upon the professional integrity of the director, but do involve a change in regard to the policy of maintaining the present independence of the bureau."

It asked that the President, Ickes and the Senate be urged "to maintain the long-established and well-deserved confidence of the mining industry in the bureau by selecting a new director whose professional attainments and personal integrity will insure the continued support and respect of the members of the mining profession."

Meantime the issue which is reported to have brought to a head Finch's ouster, the coal mine inspection bill of Senator Neely (Democrat), of West Virginia, was brought to the fore on Capitil Hill yesterday.

Operators Oppose Bill

It had been reported that there was opposition to the legislation in the Mines Bureau, although it had received the indorsement of Ickes. The bill is opposed by some parts of the coal-mining industry.

Senators from coal-mining States yesterday predicted passage of the bill, which would entitle the Government to inspect coal mines without first having to secure the permission of the owners, as at present.

Neely prepared to call the measure before the Senate today. He said that the explosion at Bartley, W. Va., last week, costing the lives of 91 miners, showed the "crying necessity" for the legislation.

John L. Lewis, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, also asked for passage of the bill yesterday in letters sent to each Senator. He reminded them that he had asked support for the bill six months after 28 miners lost their lives in an explosion at Providence, Ky.

"Unfortunately," Lewis wrote, "Congress saw fit to take no action on the bill. As a result, mine workers have died whose lives could have been saved by the enactment of this legislation."

Moscow Editors Say They Erred on Rumanian Pact

Moscow, (Thursday), Jan. 18 (AP). The magazine Communist Internationale apologized in a new issue today for its article last month suggesting Rumania sign a pact with Soviet Russia similar to those signed by Estonia, Lavia and Lithuania.

On December 8, two days after the article appeared, the Russian foreign office made a statement that the article was not representative of Russian policy or of "the present state of Soviet-Rumanian relations."

"The editors of Communist Internationale consider it a mistake to have printed an article which contained a number of completely incorrect statements," said the apology printed today. "The editors have adopted necessary measures to avoid such mistakes in the future."

Futile Surveys of Inequalities Affecting U. S. Children Tax the Patience of Miss Roche

Attending the preliminary session of the White House Conference on Children in a Democracy last night at the Mayflower Hotel were (top, left to right) Secretary of Labor Perkins, conference chairman; Josephine Roche, vice chairman, who assailed the inequalities which affect the lives of American children, and Katherine F. Lenroot, executive secretary. Lower —Katherine Dummer Fisher, Homer Folks, report committee chairman, and Mrs. Saddie Orr Dunbar, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs

The "continuing and shocking and needless" inequalities which affect the lives of "an inexcusable number of American children" were assailed last night by Josephine Roche, chairman of the President's Intedepartmental Committee to Coordinate Health Activities in this country.

Speaking at a preliminary session of the White House conference on children in a democracy at the Mayflower Hotel, she declared that she —for one—was impatient with surveys which led to no improvement.

Studies made in preparation for the conference, which will begin its regular sessions this morning, reveal additional proof of "basic economic injustices" touching the lives of the country's children, she said.

Joins the Impatient.

"And I join with those impatient lay citizens who do not like to wait indefinitely," she declared, "to see anything done to correct faults which we know exist."

Inequalities exist in all fields, speakers at the meeting declared, but are probably more pronounced in education, housing, and health. Complete findings and recommendations for a child welfare program for the next decade will be discussed at the regular conference, which will last through Saturday.

Leaders in the fields studied were at the session last night for a "preview" arranged by Katharine F. Lenroot, head of the Children's Bureau. More than 500 delegates will attend the sessions opening today.

Death Rate Reduced

Dr. Henry F. Helmholz, vice chairman of the conference, declared that greatest improvements made during the decade since President Hoover called a children's conference had been in the field of child health.

"In fact, I would call the reduction in infant death rates the great medical advancement of the 1930's and the major event in pediatrics during the entire century," he declared.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, who is chairman of the conference, declared "the voice of the weakest and the youngest" should count for as much in a democracy as the voice of the strongest.

"The Government should only buttress and strengthen, not assume the whole burden," she said.

Reorganization Plan for Rail Line Outlined

ICC Makes Public Its Proposal for New Missouri Pacific Setup

By the Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission made public yesterday its reorganization plan for the vast Missouri Pacific Railroad system, which went into bankruptcy seven years ago. It included these major items:

The properties of all 26 debtor railroads in the Missouri Pacific system, along with three non-railroad properties, would be consolidated into a new company. The Missouri-Illinois Railroad Co. would be omitted.

Total capitalization of the new company would be $560,478,900, a reduction of nearly $111,000,000 from the system's present capitalization.

Equipment obligations totaling $13,715,000 would be left undisturbed.

The plan now must be submitted to the Federal District Court at St. Louis and if approved there, must be indorsed by two-thirds of those voting in each class of creditors. The ICC fixed January 1, 1940, as the effective date of the plan, even though a long time may elapse before its completion.

57 of Columbus Crew Sail for Home Via Italy

Copyright by New York Times

New York, Jan. 17.—Fifty-seven more members of the crew of the scuttled Columbus started for home today. Being old men, women and boys and therefore not subject to military seizure, they took the more conventional route to Germany and sailed on the Italian liner Rex.

Five hundred and twelve of their shipmates of military age left for Germany last Sunday, starting by way of California, Japan and Russia.

Seven are still here. One is Kurt Hinsch, second officer whose American wife took her struggle to free him to the courts.

The fate of the other six has not been determined. Two old men were too ill to sail today, and four others will stay here until the Department of Labor has decided their appeal to remain here, an appeal based on previous legal residence.

Slice of Heart Of Chicken Enters Its 28th Year

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—A segment of chicken heart which Dr. Alexis Carrel hopes to make immortal observed its twenty-eighth birthday today in a test tube in the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research.

The "perpetual" heart, a scientific achievement because it has almost tripled the life expectancy of the average chicken's ticker, has been kept alive by Dr. Carrel at the institute since January 17, 1912.

Physiologists believe the heart fragment, may live forever if adequately nourished.

Merle Thorpe's Police Dog Has Been Missing 7 Days

Lir Notable for His Good Manners; Reward Offered for Return

A well-mannered police dog, who hates to see cars chased or barked at, was pretty lonesome yesterday. He was spending his seventh day away from his home on the Rockville Pike, near Bethesda, Md.

The dog is Lir, owned by Mrs. Merle Thorpe, wife of the editor of Nation's Business. He is the only brother of the famous Buddy, the Seeing Eye dog who tours the country to help the blind.

Lir, whose name is pronounced "Leer," disappeared a week ago yesterday. He never has run away from home before, and Mrs. Thorpe feared he had been stolen.

Larger than the usual German shepherd, the missing pet is 3½ years old. When running, according to his mistress, he throws out the right hind leg in a distinctive manner.

He cocks his ears until the tips come together when his interest is drawn by any command or excitement. He will scuffle with any dog that tries to chase an automobile, Mrs. Thorpe said.

A "suitable reward" has been offered for the dog's return. Montgomery County police told Mrs. Thorpe several dogs recently missing in the neighborhood have been brought back to their homes after announcement of a reward.

Britain Reported Stopping U. S. Tobacco Imports

London, Jan. 17 (AP).—British tobacco manufacturers, responding to government decree, tonight were stated reliably to have stopped the importation of American tobacco.

They were reported to have enough in stock for a normal two-and-a-half-year demand, and likely to use Turkish or Balkan tobaccos to blend with these stocks.

Most of the tobacco imported by Britain is Virginia-grown. She took about $70,300,000 worth of American-grown tobacco in 1937.

Girl Says Rites Led to Seduction

Hollywood, Jan. 17 (U.P.).—A 17-year-old girl charged today in a suit for $1,000,000 that she had been seduced when she was 11 in rituals of a cult preaching that young girls should be taught the "truths of womanhood."

Irma Weber, the plaintiff, asserted that she was 'seduced, raped and assaulted" during the religious rites. The suit was filed against the reorganized Mazdaznan Temple Association of Associates of God, its officers, 20,000 members, and more specifically, Henry Sorge, her alleged betrayer.

The injured were taken to Waycross, Ga., hospitals. They included Samuel Johnson and Booker T. Washington, of Washington.

Freeman Asks Church Unity For Tolerance

Faiths Must Hang Together or They'll Hang Separately, He Tells Institute

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington, last night found a text in Ben Franklin for America's churches in facing a world of war and dictatorship.

Protestants, Catholics and Jews will hang separately if they don't hang together, Bishop Freeman told the closing session of the Institute of Human Relations at a dinner in the Willard Hotel.

"I am not advocating any concordat or any invasion of the distinct province of each faith," Dr. Freeman said, "but we must recognize there is no hope for religion without cooperation. We must recognize that we have lost our grip on the public mind, except in spots."

American Destiny Outlined

America may be destined to become "the reconciling nation" of the earth, the nation to bring order out of chaos, he continued, but first, within the United States, there must be a drawing together of religious bodies. The churches must speak together, and eloquently, on such issues as anti-Semitism, he said.

Joining Dr. Freeman in the panel discusion were spokesmen of the Catholic and Jewish faiths, of education, organized labor, the press and radio.

Dr. Everett R. Clinchy, national director of the institute, which is sponsored by the National Conferennce of Christians and Jews, asked whether the A. F. of L., C. I. O. and railway brotherhoods might not apply "this same technique of consultation for working toward their common objectives."

John Brophy, national director of the C. I. O., replied that "the division in the ranks of labor is more apparent than real. All workers and all men of good will are interested in labor unity."

Cites C. I. O. Position

The C. I. O. is already on record in favor of forming a Congress of American Labor, he said, while conceding that "certain questions of detail are the rub."

Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Post, told delegates, "It is not enough just to say that we are not going to quarrel about our religion." The conference must have a positive, constructive purpose, he said, referring to the annual campaign of the Washington Community Chest as an "inspiring example" of cooperation among religious and civic groups for specific objectives.

Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University, expressed fears "there are men in our midst already calculating the possibility of using anti-Semitism or anti-Negro prejudice as the force to coalesce a discontented mass."

Wants Freedom of Thought

The challenge to religion, he declared, is to give "at least the minimum of an economic body to the concept of the brotherhood of man.

He warned against "a disposition to restrict freedom of thought in American universities." If the "parties at interest" can invade universities and say what is to be taught, "we are on our way irrevocably toward dictatorship," he said.

American universities "should give the most painstaking study to the literature, proposals and techniques of communism and fascism," he suggested. "With a dispassionate examination of these theories, we might discover techniques that can be divorced from the systems and successfully adapted to our democracy."

Other participants in the panel were Edward M. Kirby, of the National Association of Broadcasters; Leo R. Sack, former Minister to Costa Rica; the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, head of the department of religious education, Catholic University, and Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, of the Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Dr. Frank Porter Graham, president of the University of North Carolina, presided.

U. S. Appears to Be on Eve Of Spiritual Rebirth, Says Editor

Felix Morley Cites Evidence of Regeneration Before Round Table of Institute of Human Relations, Calls Conference a Manifestation

America appears to be on the eve of a great spiritual regeneration, Felix Morley, editor of The Washington Post, said yesterday at a round table discussion at the Institute of Human Relations, sponsored by the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

"There is every evidence of this regeneration," Morley said. "The so-called Oxford movement is one manifestation of the ferment that is working in people's minds. This conference is another manifestation of the same groping toward an ideal toward a spiritual awakening."

Morley frankly told the delegates that, from the standpoint of publicity, it was unwise to place too much emphasis on the nature of the National Conference of Christians and Jews.

"It is not news that Christians and Jews are working together," he said, "and it should not be news. I think we should assume that such a getting together in this country is the normal thing. To make it seem remarkable is to emphasize a false issue.

News Is What Conference Does

"What is news is what this conference does."

A. Julian Brylawski, vice president of the Motion Picture Theater Owners of America, who spoke for the screen as Morley spoke for the press, told the round-table audience that Hollywood's greatest contribution to this country was tolerance.

He said:

"Those who have sat through and laughed and cried with the humble Jewish family in Fannie Hurst's 'Humoresque,' or that noble renunciation in a 'Symphony of Six Million,' can no longer be intolerant of the humble Jewish immigrants to our shores.

"What the 'Man of Iron' has done for the Irish peasant, 'The Good Earth' for the Chinese, 'Green Pastures' for the Negro, 'Mr. Chips' for the English and even 'All Quiet on the Western Front' for the German people, are perhaps our greatest lesson that we are all one—all sons of Adam and children of God."

Franklin Dunham, educational director of the National Broadcasting Co., told how organizations representing Protestants, Catholics and Jews have worked together in broadcasting religious programs over the NBC networks.

A Gallup poll, he said, had shown that 33 per cent of Americans with radios listen to these programs. Here, Dr. Dunham said, was a marvelous opportunity for a person to visit somebody else's church of the air and not feel embarrassment. He told the story of an Irish Catholic who listened in to the Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fosdick and afterward exclaimed in amazement that he had heard nothing he could disagree with.

Although there are some who think that perhaps the radio keeps many lazy people away from church, Dr. Dunham was confident that it had the contrary effect.

"There has never been one word of criticism of one's religious beliefs in these broadcasts," he said. "On the other hand, there have been no attacks on those who have no religious beliefs. This is all in the spirit of the Bill of Rights, which guarantees freedom of religion and protects those who have no religion at all."

The Rev. A. W. Gottschall, director of the Institute of Human Relations, presided at the conference.

"We've Got to Stay Out"

Dr. Daniel E. Poling, pastor of the Temple Baptist Church in Philadelphia, said that America can not stay neutral in world conflict, but warned that the United States must not become a combatant. He spoke at a luncheon meeting of the conference.

Between the words neutrality, and combatant, Dr. Poling drew a sharp distinction. As Americans we cannot be neutral, he said, when we see liquidation of minorities in Europe. As Christians, he declared, we cannot be neutral toward persecution of Jews.

Dr. Poling said, however, that he is "dead against our getting into war."

"We've got to stay out to have something to give to the nations after the war," he said. "It may well be that we shall presently represent the last reserve of democratic institutions."

Dr. J. M. T. Finney, of Baltimore, presided at the luncheon. Other speakers were Herbert L. Seamons, college secretary for the Conference of Christians and Jews, and Donald T. Sheean, of the Religious News Service.

Appliances Key to Power Rate, McClellan Tells Institute

Washington's electrical appliance dealers were told last night that they alone could bring about a reduction in power rates.

Dr. William McClellan, president of the Union Electric Co. of Missouri, denied that power companies could do anything more to cut rates and told the Electric Institute of Washington:

"The secret of low rates lies entirely in increased consumption. Only when you have placed more appliances in the hands of consumers and consumption grows can rates be cut."

Speaking at the Institute's annual dinner at the Raleigh Hotel, McClellan, former president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., urged the electrical industry to accept its responsibility to society.

"You've heard a great deal about the profit motive in business enterprise," he said. "It is the mainspring of competitive enterprise. But if the profit motive is made the main object of the electrical industry, we are going to get into worse difficulties than ever before.

"Regulation of electric utilities had to come; it had to be. Such a thing as power cannot be left in the hands of individuals, without some means of audit and regulation. Every dollar of cost placed into rates must be scrutinized carefully."

He said the cost of constructing distribution networks was so high that "rates cannot be reduced as long as the average householder has only a few lamps attached to the end of an expensive outlet." Increased sale of appliances, he claimed, would treble consumption and permit great rate reduction.

"I urge this," he said, "for the public good. Our profits will not increase. We may put a few more million dollars to work, but as you know we will only receive a fair and reasonable return upon it. We are necessarily and rightly limited."

Ward Stringham, president of the institute, presented a gavel to the outgoing president, A. G. Neal. Reports on the activities of 1939 were given by J. S. Bartlett, managing director; F. C. Schneider, secretary, and J. F. Myers, treasurer.

Guests included District officials and representatives of the Federal Power and Public Utilities Commissions.

3 Children Hurt In Traffic; Falls Injure Two

D. C. Man Injured on Way to Bedside of Mother, Ill in Ohio

Three children were injured, two seriously, as snow harassed District traffic yesterday and two women were injured when they slipped on icy sidewalks. A Washington man, speeding to the bedside of his mother, ill in Ohio, was hurst when his automobile crashed into a wrecked coal truck.

Half an inch of snow fell here yesterday and the mercury started a drop toward an expected low of 12 degrees early today. Washington's snow and frigid weather was part of a cold wave which swept the Nation from West to East.

Runs Against Auto

Jeffrey C. Daljoird, 5, of 2456 Twentieth street northwest, suffered a fractured skull when he ran into the side of an automobile at Twentieth and Biltmore streets northwest. At Emergency Hospital his condition was said to be serious.

Louise Stowe, 8, of 532 Eighth street southeast, received a fractured left leg and possible internal injuries when she was struck by an automobile near her home. Police said the car was driven by Benjamin R. McGee, 47, of 313 Ninth street southeast.

Dorothy M. Lee, 5, of 1422 W street southeast, suffered abrasions of the hands, face and body when she was struck by an automobile in the 1300 block of Good Hope road southeast. She was taken to a private physician by Frazier White, 31, of 910 Savannah street southeast, who, police said, was driving the automobile.

Falls Injure Two

Mrs. Ophelia Kerley, 60, of 211 Delaware avenue southwest, was treated at Emergency Hospital for injuries to the left hip after she fell on ice at Fourteenth and E streets northwest.

Also injured in a fall on the ice was Mrs. Rose McGowan, 50, of 1673 Columbia road northwest. She suffered a possible fracture of the right arm when she fell at Thirteenth and F streets northwest.

Ernest W. Krueger, 28, of 1927 K street northwest, was in a Cleveland, Ohio, hospital after his automobile struck an overturned coal truck south of that city, the Associated Press reported. He suffered a fractured thigh and lacerations. He was hurrying to the bedside of his mother, seriously ill at Cleveland.

Funds Sought For School to Aid Cripples

Board of Education Will Ask Money To Set Up Project At Allison Street

The Board of Education yesterday voted to ask the District Commissioners to include an item in the first deficiency bill for funds to convert the Allison Street Health School, now used by tubercular children, to a school for white crippled children.

This step marked one of the final stages in long and complicated negotiations to provide new facilities for these groups.

Gratz E. Dunkum, chairman of the board's finance committee, reported an estimate of $11,646.84 needed to alter the Allison building to meet the needs of crippled children. Part of the funds may be provided by reappropriating for these alterations the money which would have been used for the transportation of the tubercular children there for the second half of this session. The remainder will be requested as a deficiency appropriation.

Of the 17 items listed among the repairs and alterations, the largest were $3,100 for painting the building inside and out, $1,475 for a loading platform and ramp at entrance, $3,300 for construction of a driveway on rear of the present garden.

Toner to Be Discontinued

Crippled children now at the Langdon School will be transferred to the remodeled building. Children now at the Health School do not have active tuberculosis and may be shifted to regular schools without danger to their classmates. Likewise the Toner School for tubercular colored children will be discontinued at the opening of the new term on February 5 and these pupils will go into regular schools.

Among the personnel changes which the board made yesterday in line with the pupil shifts, Miss M. R. O'Brien was transferred from the position of teaching principal of the Health School to the same title at Polk School. Miss Bertha E. Taylor, who has been administrative principal of the Gage-Henry-Polk school group, will now hold that title in the Gage-Henry School.

Mrs. B. N. McDuffie was transferred from teaching principal of Toner School to that position in Wilson School. In turn, Miss E. A. Lyons, who has been administrative principal of Morgan-Wilson School, will now hold that position in Morgan School.

The increasing need for more teachers in senior high schools if they are to meet the accrediting standards of the Middle States Association was pointed out in a report from Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools.

Anacostia Senior High School has been placed on the accredited list of secondary schools for a period of two years, while it tries to meet requirements. The teacher load is heavier than standard and the library facilities are still inadequate, it was said.

New Teachers Desired

The report to the board stated that "every effort will be made to secure additional teachers not only for this school but for every other senior high school which will inevitably in due course of time reach the point where each school will be violating this standard of the Middle States Association."

The board took no further action on the proposal to provide an underpass or overpass from Powell Junior High School to the Johnson building to further protect pupils against traffic hazards. Dr. Ballou reported that Commissioner David McCoach estimated that $7,200 would be required for that construction. Dr. Ballou, however, said it did not seem necessary to act on the matter at present, and he suggested the likelihood that the Johnson building may not be needed eventually, due to reduction of the junior high school population in that area.

The board voted to protest against the renewals of a Class "A" liquor license at 4401 Fourteenth street northwest and of a Class "C" license at 412 Georgia avenue northwest.

The Board agreed to the participation of pupils in the ninth through the twelfth grades of divisions 1-9 in the National High School oratorical contest for 1940, sponsored by the Americanism Commission of the American Legion. The question of a supplementary contest for the colored schools, divisions 10-13, was left in the student activities committee of the board for the present. Col. West A. Hamilton, member of the committee, stated his belief that pupils in all divisions should have an opportunity to compete in the contest on an even basis.

16th Street Citizens Oppose Night Cut in Speed Limit

Members of the Sixteenth Street Highlands Citizens Association decided last night they do not want speed limits in the District reduced at night.

Specifically they opposed the proposal of Inspector William E. Holmes, of the Traffic Bureau, to cut speed in 25-miles-an-hour zones to 20-miles-an-hour at night. Such a change, the citizens declared would do little to promote traffic safety.

"If a driver is reckless driving at 25 miles an hour, asked W. E. Stoutameyer, president, "won't he be reckless at 20 miles an hour?"

The association went on record as opposing any reduction in the fire department personnel. Members expressed the opinion that the cost of a full personnel would be more than offset by lower fire insurance costs, which an adequate fire fighting staff would make possible.

Miss Mildred Green, who has been secretary of the association for the last four years, submitted her resignation because of the press of other duties. She is a public school principal. Her resignation was accepted "with regret," and Charles S. Hyer, 5330 Colorado avenue northwest, was elected to succeed her.

Southwest Citizens

An invitation to become better acquainted with recreation and social welfare agencies serving the Southwest section of the city was extended to members of the Southwest Citizens Association last night by speakers appearing before the group.

Harry L. Binswanger spoke in behalf of the No. 4 Police Boys Club. Miss Margaret Bell Merrill discussed activities at Barney Neighborhood House, and Miss Myrtle Cohen talked on her agency, the Juanita K. Nye Council House.

The meeting was the occasion for bestowing awards on Boys Club athletes. Buddy Vernon received a Boys Club award for boxing, and each member of the club 125-pound football team received a pin. Francis Hart, the coach, received a trophy for the team.

The association adopted a resolution, offered by the Rev. Harry V. Porter, that authorities be urged to speed corapletion of two new recreational areas in the section. One of these areas is the Hoover Playground at Second and N streets, the other the Southwest Recreation Center, to be in the new Jefferson High School.

The association commended Louis Mitchell, supervisor of the Hoover Playground, for his "splendid work" since assuming duties last fall. The group protested reported efforts to remove Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer.

Smith Seeks To Amend Hatch Law

Virginia Legislator Would Exempt Federal Workers In Local Elections

An amendment to the Hatch act to permit Government employes to participate in local elections in Washington suburbs was proposed yesterday in the House by Representative Smith (Democrat), of Virginia.

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, said he would go before the Senate Committee on Privileges today in support of his bills to bring District and certain State employes under the law barring political activities by Government workers and solicitation of political donations in national elections.

Senator Hatch said he did not believe that a public hearing would be necessary.

The New Mexico Senator said he had no objection to Smith's proposal in the interest of nearby Virginia and Maryland towns.

Smith's bill recites part of the Hatch act and adds the following provision:

"No provision of this act shall prohibit an employe of the Federal Government or any State government from (1) participating in local elections, either individually or as a member of a citizens' association or other civic organization, (2) sponsoring candidates, principles and improvements for local elections or determination at the polls, (3) seeking election to office in the local government."

Georgetown Bows to Maryland on Court, 28-27

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, JANUARY 18, 1940 X*

Western Maryland Defeats C. U., 27-23

Hoyas' Rally Near End Is Point Short

Martin's Miss From Foul Line Is Decisive; Mondorff Leads Terps With Seven Points

By Bill Burnett

One unmatchable point that loomed as large as 50 when the final seconds ticked away proved the undoing of Georgetown University's basketball forces last night as Maryland clung desperately to its lead and took a 28-27 victory.

A tie for first place in the scramble for District collegiate honors was the Terps' reward for victory, George Washington also having taken the measure of the hapless Hoyas.

It was Georgetown's fifth straight loss of the season, to a Terp team which has won seven of its nine games to date. A surprisingly small crowd of 2,000 fans saw the Hoyas barely edged out in a game they were supposed to lose by 10 points or more, yet if they had taken advantage of a reasonable share of their scoring chance the Hoyas would have been the victors by 10 points.

Martin Misses Decisive Shot

A slight little fellow, Don Martin, seeing his first action with the Hoya varsity, proved the "goat" in Georgetown's loss. With 15 seconds of the game left he might have tied up the score with a foul shot allowed him, but the high-bounding ball failed to drop. It was Martin, however, who brought Georgetown within firing range of the Terps when a few seconds earlier, he raced in from the bench and potted the longest field goal of the game.

It was a long succession of missed setups that beat G. U. In the first half alone Georgetown hurled at the basket 33 times and only four of the shots reached their mark. Maryland wasn't a great deal more accurate, although the Terps managed 7 good field goals out of 28 throws.

Maryland held a 17-to-13 lead at intermission. Bill Read started the second period scoring for Maryland with a foul shot, but young Buddy O'Grady countered with a neat snowbird. That was Georgetown's only scoring for almost half the period, and meanwhile Maryland soared into a 22-to-15 lead on the strength of successive points by Rea, Pershing, Mondorff and Charley Weidinger. With the score 27 to 18 in the Terps favor, Georgetown finally started the rally that put life into the dying game.

Lead Cut to 27-25

O'Grady, easily the star of Georgetown's attack, potted for a pair of points, Al. Lujack hung up his only three points of the game and George Pajak contributed two more points to cut Maryland's lead to 27-25. Weidinger's foul shot made a three-point difference, but then came Martin's beautiful toss from midcourt. To be followed by his failure from the foul line.

Though an inordinately large number of fouls were committed by both teams, lanky George Dewitt, of the Terps, was the only player waved out. His loss probably accounted somewhat for the Hoyas' mad rush at the end of the game.

Given the closest guarding of his cage career, Weidinger, usually a prolific scorer, was limited to a scant three points and the honors for the winners went to Mondorff, a converted backfield man, who ripped the cords for seven points. Georgetown's O'Grady, however, beat that by two points.

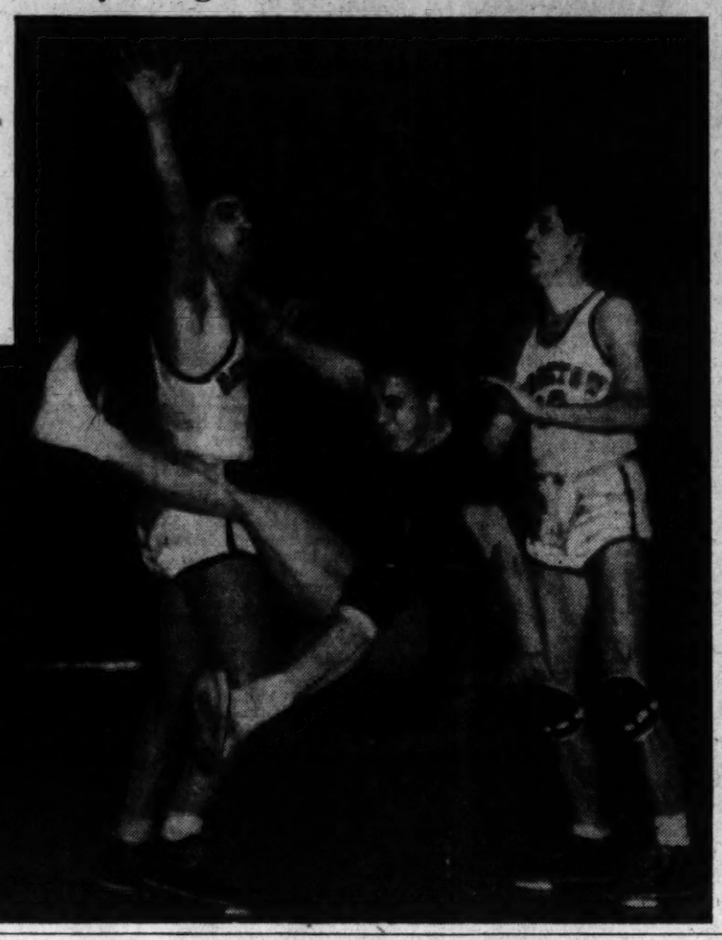
Terps' DuVall Puts Everything Into a Dive for the Ball



Mearle DuVall, Maryland forward, was caught in this exciting action shot last night as the Terps clung to a short lead to beat Georgetown, 28-27, at College Park. On either side of him are Irving Rizzi and Jim Kiernan, of the Hoyas, ready to grab the ball which is shown far to the left. It was one of many thrilling moments as Maryland tied G. W. Lawson Little In 3-Way Tie in Frisco Golf

Stahl, Krueger Also Shoot a 1st Round 70; 10 of 175 Break Par

By the Associated Press

San Francisco, Jan. 17.—Old Man Par proved a tough foe today in the opening round of the 36-hole qualifying trials of the $5,000 San Francisco match play open golf tournament.

Of the 175 shot masters assembled from practically every section of the country, only 10 were able to tour the par 72 Lake Merced course under standard figures.

Tied for first place were three professionals, Lawson Little, one-time amateur king now operating out of Bretton Woods, N. H.; Marvin Stahl, Lansing, Mich., and Alvin Kreuger, Beloit, Wis., all with 70s.

Little Has Pair of 35s

Stahl, one-time caddie for Horton Smith, and now Michigan Open champion, put together a 36 and 34.

Krueger started in sensational fashion with a three under par 33 for the first nine, but slipped slightly on the second nine for a 37.

Seven were grouped at 71, including Dick Metz, Oak Park, Ill., who won the San Francisco Open last year, and Jimmy Demaret, Houston, Tex., who walked off with top money in the Oakland Open last week.

Heafner Again Provides Feature

Big boy Clayton Heafner, from Linville, N. C., tied with eight others in the par 72 class. Just as he did in the Los Angeles and Oakland Opens Heafner provided the tournament highlight by losing his ball on the sixth fairway. Instead of finding it in a tree, as he did in Oakland, he discovered it in the pocket of a loiterer. The ball was dropped without penalty.

Not far behind was Rut Coffey, of Winchester, Va., who toured the course in 73 strokes, 1 over par. Coffey matched the first-day leader's opening round with 36, but on the trip home got into difficulty to take a 37.

Cliff Spencer, Washington, D. C., pro of Beaver Dam Country Club, also shot a 36 on the out nine, but his 40 coming back gave him a 76 and virtually killed his chances in the tournament.

Darkness prevented 35 players from finishing. They'll complete the opening round before the start of the second half of the qualifying tomorrow.

Low 32 scores after tomorrow's play will compete in match play rounds, beginning Friday.

The leaders:

By the Associated Press

Augusta, Ga., Jan. 17.—Blonde Helen Dettweiler of Washington, D. C., shot a third-round 83 today to take the 54-hole lead in the Augusta women's titleholders golf tournament with 253.

Another professional, Mrs. Helen Hicks of Long Island, who tied with Miss Dettweiler for the lead at the end of 36 holes yesterday had a 10 over par 85 today to run her total to 255.

Jean Bauer of Providence, R. I., carded an 86 to round out the 54 holes with 260, seven strokes back of the leader.

In fourth place was Mrs. L. G. Pray, of Washington, D. C., whose 281 gave her a four-blow lead over Elizabeth Dunn, of Indianapolis, Ind.

The final round will be played tomorrow.

New York, Jan. 17 (AP).—Charlie Beetham, national outdoor half-mile champion who won the 880-yard special at Boston last Saturday, will make his first flat-floor start of the season in the limited handicap invitation half-mile Saturday night in the Grover Cleveland-Osceola club games at the Seventh Regiment Armory.

Miami Now Seen Site Of Baer-Galento Bout

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 17.—After a day of great hurly-burly, it seemed virtually certain tonight that Promoter Mike Jacobs will stage a big fight at Miami, Fla., this winter, probably matching Tony Galento and Maxie Baer.

Promoter Jacobs announced tonight, "I'll have something definite on this by 6 p. m. tomorrow."

Uncle Mike made this announcement after emerging from a lengthy conference with Galento's manager, Joe Jacobs. Before that conference he had telephoned to "certain parties" in Miami and also spent $35 talking to Baer's manager, Ancil Hoffman, in Sacramento, Calif.

These discussions came shortly after another weekly performance of the fistic follies at the New York boxing commission, where Chairman John J. Phelan informed an expectant press that action was deferred indefinitely on the fate of Galento's pilot, Joe Jacobs.

This postponement of action virtually kicked the Galento-Baer fight out of New York. Mike Jacobs had scheduled the brawl tentatively for March 4 at Madison Square Garden for the Finnish relief fund. Last week the commission approved the Garden bout, but refused to renew Pilot Joe Jacobs' license as manager or second. And Irate Joe said, "I'll get my licenses or Galento won't fight in New York State."

The commission said today it would defer reconsideration of Manager Joe's application until the district attorney's office came to some definite conclusion in its investigation of the Harry Thomas confession which allegedly stated that he (Thomas) had once engaged in a fixed fight with Max Schmeling in New York. Joe was Schmeling's manager at the time.

Meanwhile the commission has

10 Races in U.S. Listed for Maki, Finnish Star

Will Work Way East From Los Angeles in Company of Nurmi

By the United Press

New York, Jan. 17.—A tentative schedule of ten appearances in this country for Taisto Maki, Finnish distance-running star, was announced tonight by Joe Williams, New York sports columnist who heads the sports division of Herbert Hoover's Finnish relief campaign.

In order to fulfill all these engagements, Williams said Dan Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., today cabled the International Federation of Amateur Athletics at Stockholm asking for permission to waive the rule which forbids a foreign athlete from remaining in a foreign country more than 21 days.

Maki, along with Paavo Nurmi, will arrive here some time next month and will leave immediately for Los Angeles to begin training there. Maki's first appearance will be in Los Angeles and then he will work his way East, appearing in San Francisco, Denver, Kansas City, St. Louis, Cleveland, Chicago, Detroit, Boston and New York, according to the tentative schedule.

Butch Moran Signs

Cincinnati, Jan. 17 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds today received the signed contract of Cyril (Butch) Moran, rookie first baseman. He batted .347 for Muskogee, Okla., last season, knocking in 146 runs.

Terrors Best Card Cagers In Slow Game

Bob Stroph Leads Attack With 13 Points as Visitors Outshoot Hosts

By Anne Hagner

Catholic University's basketball team continued its losing streak with a loss to Western Maryland's Green Terrors in the Cards' gym last night, winding up on the small end of a 27-23 score.

In a slow-paced game that did not warm up until the last few minutes of play, the Terrors outshot their hosts as both sides missed an amazingly large majority of their tries at the net. Bob Stroph, Western Maryland's fast-moving captain, led the scoring with 13 points, as he found his way to the basket many more times than his teammates.

Irving Biasi, customarily starring for the Terrors, took a back seat to Stroph this trip but chalked up nine points, three of them made at the foul line.

The Cards, still apparently working on the theory that football men take some time to whip into their basketball stride, led at the half with the surprisingly low score of 6-5, but Stroph's keen eye got the best of them in the final stages.

Johnny White, rapid little Catholic U. guard, scored 10 points to lead the Cards' score and Joe Carrig followed close at his heels for team honors with 8.

Catholic U.'s losing ways carried over into the C. U. Freshmen-Northeast Boys' Club preliminary game, which the hosts lost, 27-13.

One of the Detroit Lions' New Bosses

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

(Detroit Lions' professional football franchise sold for $200,000—News item.)

And with that, pro football definitely takes its place in the big-dough brackets. The game didn't lose much time surrounding itself with fancy figures once it was squared away. Not so many years ago, franchises in the National Football League were kicking around at any price the buyer chose to give.

POVICH

The Redskins' franchise is worth at least the 200 G's the Detroit club brought, and the rapid rate at which pro football has zoomed up the money scale is now apparent. Originally, the Redskins' franchise was held by a Duluth man who paid the league exactly one dollar for it. That was in 1927 when the circuit was a misshaped, 13-club league. Two years later, Duluth sold its franchise to Orange, N. J., for $2,000. Eventually it fell into Boston hands for a moderate sum.

To appreciate fully the value of a franchise in the league as now constituted, one need look no farther than Pittsburgh. At this writing, Pittsburgh is probably the worst town in the league in point of attendance. Owner Art Rooney has consistently operated at a loss each season. But no later than a month ago when a Boston group wanted to buy his franchise, Mr. Rooney snapped his fingers at a $150,000 offer.

Once Shunned by Collegians

It's a far shout from the formative days of professional football when the league never knew where it's next team was coming from, or whether a club had funds to meet the pay roll. Those were the days, too, when pro football flourished chiefly in such whistle-stops as Rock Island, Canton, Massillion, Ohio, and Hammond, Ind. It made little pretense of operating as a league. In one season, 1926, one club in the league played 16 games, another only five.

Pro football was something to be shunned by the college graduate. A decade ago, it was regarded by fans and campus heroes alike as something akin to wrestling. Newspapers frowned on it, and teams could scarcely give away passes to their games. A club carried few substitutes and often played three or four games a week. It was difficult to take that sort of competition seriously.

And then, in 1926 along came Red Grange and his All-Stars to arouse a new pro football consciousness. Just as Babe Ruth pulled baseball out of its post-scandal doldrums, Grange infused new interest into pro football. His presence was the stimulant that started a steady flow of college heroes into the game.

League's Big Lift Began in 1933

From 21 teams in 1926, the league shrank to a more workable basis of ten teams in 1928. But it was still groping, in a sense. It operated with 12 teams in 1929, 11 in 1930. In 1931 it was a 10-team league, the next year an unbalanced nine-club circuit. Finally, in 1933, it settled into a profitable groove.

That was the year when the league's thinkers finally hit upon the East-West divisions with five teams in each group and a play-off of division champions deciding the title. Sectional interest was developed and the sports pages began to take note. The pay rolls were being met regularly, the campus darlings were actually seeking jobs in the league, and football, in the arms of the pros was beginning to go places.

Detroit's entry in 1935 was a boon to the league. Long recognized as the best town in baseball, Detroit proved also a football bonanza particularly when the Lions won the championship in their maiden year. Cleveland struggled in the league for two years and then, in 1938, hit pay dirt when a surprising Cleveland team slapped down the Chicago Bears twice in succession and meanwhile beat the famed Green Bay Packers. On their next home appearance, the Rams sold out their park.

Radio Revenue a Factor

Ten years ago, a $5,000 gate in pro football would have sent the promoters home chuckling at their great good luck. Today, $5,000 is merely the guarantee that a visiting club receives for every game, and it is a vastly disappointed visiting club that finds its guarantee unequal to its option of 40 per cent of the receipts.

The same cereal firm that sponsors 87 baseball broadcasts has now deemed it wise to buy the broadcast rights of all games in the National Football League. The radio revenue alone represents more profit to the club owners than came their way during an entire season of play in the infant years of pro football.

For a time it appeared that pro football was getting too big for its britches. In Boston, the Redskins' ownership, forced to meet the competition for players, lost $85,000 over a five-year period. But within two years in Washington, the same men got all their money back. There is a suspicion that $300,000 wouldn't buy the Redskins. That is the kind of dough now linked with pro football.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Jan. 17.—Notes so hot.

Of course it's only a ballyhoo stunt, but why is the Pastor-Burman fight in Detroit billed "for the white heavyweight championship of the world"? . . . The present hevyweight champion, a Mr. Louis, has obviated all need for a "white" champion—by his scrupulous honesty, his fair fighting and his avoidance of all the legal or domestic wrangles which marked his predecessors.

CONSIDINE

Al Vanderbilt says he won't add Hialeah to his Pimlico and Belmont jobs, come what may . . . the Armstrong-Montanez fight in New York next week should be a piperoo . . . It will be Henry's rushing against Pedro's cracking straight right . . . incidentally, I wish I could believe Henry's spirited declaration that he is pulling out of his scheduled fight with Ceferino Garcia in Los Angeles on February 22 because he is sore at the American Legion for barring colored fighters at the Hollywood Stadium . . . Henry happens to have fought for the Legion a number of times, and Mike Jacobs, who has a contractural noose around Henry's neck and the neck of his manager, Eddie Mead, has expressed his displeasure over the match.

Somebody Got Tex in a Mellow Mood

Too bad it didn't occur to Jedge Landis to give the whole dope on that baseball mixup in Detroit . . . the fans had it coming to them . . . That was a disappointing crowd Tom Gallery had for the Green Bay-All-Star pro game on the Coast . . . A responsible football critic tells us that pro ball won't go on the Coast because the Catholic College teams have a lock on the all-important Sunday dates.

Doc Kearns was telling us the other day about the events leading up to getting Willard to agree to fight Dempsey . . . He got Tex Rickard in a mellow mood and got him to agree to sign his name to a wire to the champion . . . it started out: "I've got a sucker kid here for you to fight. His name is Dempsey and I'd advise you to meet him now and get him out of the way, for in a year or two he might get good."

Middleweight Division Was Utter Confusion

Further confusion in the middleweight division is occasioned by a review of the lineage through which the two current champions were crowned . . . a peer into the past shows that the N. B. A. and the New York State Athletic Commissions actually swapped champions. . . . When Mickey Walker surrendered the middleweight title on December 3, 1926, the N. B. A. held a tournament which was won by Gorilla Jones, who lost it on a foul to Marcel Thil in Paris on June 11, 1932. Thil became the N. B. A. champion, and when Fred Apostoli finally got him out of Paris and beat him on the carnival of champions in 1937, New York recognized Apostoli as champ.

But the screwy part of the whole thing is that New York had held its own middleweight elimination tournament after Walker gave it up. It was won by Ben Jeby who lost to Lou Brouillard, who lost to Vince Dundee, who lost to Teddy Yarosz, who lost to Babe Risko, who lost to Freddie Steele, who lost to Al Hostak, who lost to Solly Krieger, who lost to Hostak. Garcia beat Apostoli, and should be the N. B. A. champ, but he is the New York champion and Hostak, who should be the New York champ is the N. B. A. champ.

Chicago Alumni Want Football

By the United Press

Chicago, Jan. 17.—The University of Chicago Alumni Association voted today to demand that the university reinstate intercollegiate football.

The action was taken at a meeting of the association, which also voted to petition the university board of trustees that a number of trustees, the number not yet determined, be elected by the alumni. Trustees now are appointed under self-perpetuating system.

Trustees abolished intercollegiate football at Chicago a month ago.

The motion that the trustees reconsider their action and reinstate football immediately—before schools with which Chicago had scheduled games in 1940 fill the vacant dates—resulted in heated debate. Finally the motion carried 2 to 1 on a standing vote.

Alumni Association Secretary John W. Chapman said copies of the resolutions would be mailed to the trustees, probably early next week.

"I don't expect them to do anything about the resolutions," Chapman said. "But it is my personal opinion that if student matriculation at the university starts falling off, they'll go back to football in two years."

George Washington Courtmen Subdue Navy Five, 49 to 29

Garber Leads Colonials in 7th Victory

Team Again Runs Up 49 Count; Middies Trail Most of Game; G. W. Scores at Will

By Merrell W. Whittlesey
A Staff Correspondent

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 17.—The number "nine" was a lucky one for George Washington here today in Dahlgren Hall as the Colonials and the Naval Academy resumed major sport relations after a nine-year lapse and G. W. won its seventh game in nine starts, 49 to 29. It was also the Colonials' fourth victory with a 49-point total.

Capt. George Garber and lanky Matt Zunic lacked 1 point between them of half of G. W.'s total as the two forwards led a flashy Colonial attack in the first half and then increased the margin in the second period after Navy resorted to a zone defense.

The Middies held a 2-point lead after the first three minutes of play, 4 to 2, and were in the ball game for some 12 minutes of the first half when they trailed, 15 to 12, but from there on it was a one-sided affair. The hosts started with a fast and deceptive passing attack, but the Colonials broke it up time and again in the first half and the Middies were seldom successful in working the ball in, scoring mainly on long and circus shots.

G. W. Scores on Snowbirds

On the other hand, G. W. was passing rings around Navy and scored a majority of their field goals on snowbirds and close-up shots during the man-to-man defense of Navy, where the team accounted for a bulk of the scoring.

G. W. led, 29-18, at intermission and scored 20 points to Navy's 11 in the second period. From the foul line each team missed five, the Colonials scoring 9 out of 14 and Navy 7 from 12 chances.

Bobby Gilham's field goal ended Navy's brief 4-2 lead and then Zunic fired twice and Garber once within striking distance of the basket. Garber doubled the score at 10-5 but Navy stayed within reach at 12-9 and 15-12 before Auerbach, Garber, Comer and Zunic hit one of G. W.'s best streaks of the season to boost the score to 28-15 and out of reach of the host team.

Garber Calls Parley

The Middies came out for the second period with a zone defense and Garber immediately called time out and talked it over with the boys, as it was the first zone used against them this year. The game slowed up from a scoring standpoint, with G. W. content to pass the ball around.

Zunic, Garber, Comer and Veltri hit on another streak midway in the period and ran the score from 31-23 to 42-23 before Navy connected for six in a row, one a spectacular basket by Mike Hanley, former star Western High School guard. Auerbach and Amendola worked the ball past the zone for five straight points just before the whistle, when G. W. students were yelling for 50 and the Navy supporters for 30.

Zunic and Garber with 13 and 11 points, respectively, were assisted by Auerbach with 9, Comer 7 and Gilham 6. Phil Gutting, Lew Squires, Hanley and John Ebnet led Navy's impotent attack, with floor honors to Barton and Gutting. Garber was the outstanding man on the floor.

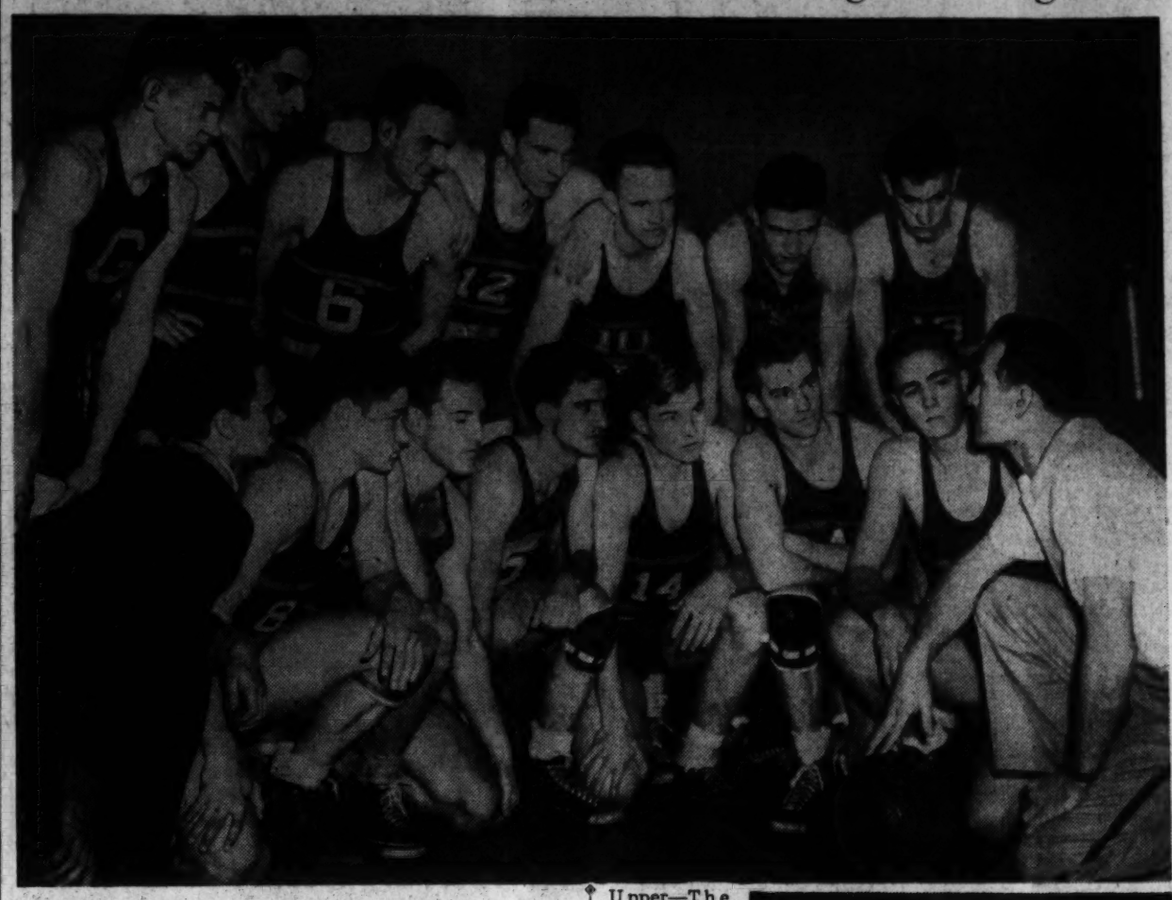
Gallaudet Coach Teaches Basketball Through His Fingers



Gallaudet on Way Up Sports Ladder Under Blair Smith

Return to Former Glory Seems Possible As Young Terp Graduate Boasts Finest Basketball Material in Many Years

By Jack Munhall.

The twin disadvantages of inadequate playing facilities and insufficient material are in themselves too great a handicap for the average basketball coach to overcome. Yet youthful Blair Smith two years ago volunteered to tackle the problem at Gallaudet Institute for the Deaf and this season his efforts have borne fruits.

Gallaudet has its best basketball team in many years; not a top-flight team capable of even extending the Nation's best but one that will more than hold its own with foes in its class. And to Blair Smith, a tall, soft-spoken youngster only two years out of the University of Maryland where he starred in track, football and basketball, Gallaudet owes a debt of gratitude for this team.

With less than 75 able-bodied from which to draw his material and with his only practice site a 70-odd year old gymnasium—far smaller than the regulation sized court—Smith has developed a team he believes will have a winning season.

Troubles Legion

Overcoming the lack of playing facilities and limited material were only two of the handicaps that Smith has conquered. Another and perhaps more serious problem which confronted him upon taking the post last year was how to impart his basketball knowledge to the Kendall Green players, all of whom are deaf-mutes.

Smith, however, takes little credit for this. He says:

"Contrary to what many may believe it is not difficult to work with these kids. I studied at Gallaudet last year, getting my master's degree, but I learned enough of the sign language in two weeks to be able to make myself understood.

"Another thing that makes teaching these kids basketball a pleasure is their willingness to learn and their amazing spirit. If you've never seen this team play, then you couldn't realize how hard they play to win. There isn't a 6-footer on the squad. In every game we give away all kinds of height and weight to our opponent, yet my kids never have quit. They're the hardest fighting gang of boys I ever have been in contact with."

We wondered if deafness was any handicap to the athlete and particularly to the basketball play-

Ernie Dusek Battles Joe Cox Tonight

A reissue of one of wrestling's most persistent feuds—Ernie Dusek vs. Joe Cox—is scheduled for tonight at Turner's Arena, where the strangle hold is the only item barred. Otherwise the boys will not be restricted.

They haven't met each other in a long time, according to Joe Turner's press release, which proudly points out that it is their first battle since last month.

Cox is fresh from a victory over Alan Eustace, a fellow Kansan. Dusek is the possessor of a string of recent triumphs and has regained his place as the No. 1 wrestler of the Dusek Riot Squad.

Eustace, incidentally, is back on tonight's card. He will meet Larrupin' Lou Plummer, a Baltimore heavyweight who has been gathering a string of victories.

The semifinal spot falls to Tarzan White, the New York Giants' tackle who meets Ralph Garibaldi. In White's corner will be his football colleague. "Tuffy" Leemans, who will second White to the extent of holding his bathrobe. White is unbeaten in two Turner Arena appearances.

A pair of reformed prizefighters will figure in other bouts. They are Tom Casey, of Kerry County who once went 12 rounds with Tommy Farr, and Tommy O'Toole who once upon a time was John Henry Lewis' sparmate. Casey meets Gus Sonnenberg and O'Toole with have a go with Abie Coleman, who is almost always described as the Mighty Midget.

Brown Rally Nips Army's Five, 41-39

By the Associated Press

West Point, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Brown University's basketball team came from behind in the last five minutes of today's game with Army to nose out the Cadets, 41 to 39.

Brown took an early lead when Coach Dutch Lentz started Army's second string, but after the Cadet varsity came into the game they steadily gained on the visitors, ending the first half in front, 23 to 20.

Army held this lead until 5 minutes from the end of the second half, when a succession of baskets gave the visitors a 1-point lead, which the Cadets were unable to overcome.

Colonials Play V. P. I. Five for Birthday Fund

The George Washington University basketball game with Virginia Polytechnic Institute to be played here Saturday night will be staged for the benefit of the President's Birthday Ball fund, Athletic Director Max Farrington announced yesterday.

Farrington said that the decision to devote proceeds of the game to the paralysis fund was in keeping with the plan of colleges throughout the country to play one benefit game of this kind. No complimentary tickets will be issued for the game.

This is the first varsity game between the Colonials and V. P. I. in several years, and George Washington will be favored to score another triumph over a Southern Conference foe. The Colonials already have defeated Davidson, Washington and Lee, and Clemson, defending champion, from the Dixie loop, as well as Florida, of the Southeastern Conference.

The Gobblers, coached by H. M. McEver, have an improved team over last year, but lost their last game, to Washington and Lee. The last George Washington-Virginia Tech cage contest, some six years ago, found G. W. winning a bitterly contested battle by one point down at Blacksburg, Va.

The G. W. freshmen meet Tech High in a 7 o'clock preliminary to the varsity game, which starts at 8:30.

C. U. Boxing Coach Seeks 2d Welter

McGill Team Asks That Two 145-Lb. Bouts Be Fought

Catholic University's ringmen have mixed opinions about Columbus after watching the Explorers lose to Miami the other night. Some of the Cardinals see themselves a shoo-in, but the older and wiser hands pessimistically predict the best they can get is a tie.

But Coach Eddie LaFond isn't worried about Columbus—yet. Eddie is concentrating on McGill University, C. U.'s foe this Saturday night. Thus far, LaFond's line-up is scrambled like a dropped omelet. For one thing, McGill won't have any 120-pounder and will use two light heavyweights.

That's all right with LaFond, because he can use both Fred Stant and Jay Turner as 175-pounders. However, a further hitch developed yesterday when Bert Light, the Canadians' coach, wired the Cardinal mentor that his 127-pounder was ill and two welterweight bouts would be necessary.

That put LaFond in a hole because there is a dearth of 145-pounders out at Brookland. Eddie has been developing Huck Hughes, who made a creditable showing in his first bout by holding Miami's George Back to a draw. But the problem of finding another welterweight is beginning to bother the rotund, little coach.

A couple of likely looking prospects are Gus Gerson and Neil Croarkin. Neither has ever had on a glove before except to keep his hands warm and LaFond is dubious about risking them against such tough competition as McGill. The Canadians always have a hand in the Olympic teams and under Bert Light have dominated college boxing in the Dominion for many years.

Mayo, Di Toto Bout Features Golden Gloves

The featherweight crown that Gilbert Mayo, of St. Mary's Club, Alexandria, has worn the last two years was almost knocked off his lofty brow last night in the seventh annual Golden Gloves boxing tournament at Turner's Arena.

Meeting Tony Di Toto, unheralded entry from the Police Boys Club No. 5, Mayo had to call on all of his fistic cunning and courage to win a close and thrilling decision before 1,500 fans in what proved to be the standout bout on the card.

After giving Di Toto a fine shellacking in the first round, Mayo was given just as powerful a thrashing by his less experienced rival in a toe-to-toe second-round battle. Then, with Di Toto on the verge of providing a startling upset, Mayo tore after his Italian foe in the final heat to wear him down with a steady fire of body punches.

By winning, Mayo qualified for the finals, where he will meet Willie Tapp, bantamweight champion, who has graduated to the 126-pound class.

In the only other senior bout of the night, Bill Nolan, rugged National Guard 175-pound challenger, gave Larry Jacobs, lanky unattached fighter, a boxing lesson to win an unanimous decision. Nolan whipped over a potent right in the first round to floor Jacobs for a 9 count.

Eight novice fighters advanced with victories last night. Easily the class of these was Alan Shreve. Pete's A. C. 147-pounder, who brought the crowd to its feet with a knockout over Pete Legge of the National Guard, in the third round. The time was one minute.

126-Pound Class
William Coakley (Pete's Athletic Club) outpointed John Gikas (unattached), three rounds.

135-Pound Class
Albert Sauer (Merrick Club) won technical knockout over Elwood Johnson (unattached), second round.
Joe Sullivan (Merrick Club) outpointed Russell Pruneau (unattached), three rounds.

147-Pound Class
Alan Shreve (Pete's A. C.) won technical knockout over Pete Legge (National Guards), 1 minute, third round.

160-Pound Class
Ray Mason (Merrick Club) scored technical knockout over Pasquale Iacangelo (Police Club No. 10), 30 seconds, third round.
Carl Ercoli (Georgetown B. C.) knocked out Jack Shriver (Olympic A. C.), 1 minute 50 seconds, first round.

126-Pound Class

'Red' Rolfe States He's No Holdout—'Yet'

Wants Pay Increase; Led League in 3 Departments of Play

By the Associated Press

Penacook, N. H., Jan. 17.—Robert (Red) Rolfe, great Yankee third baseman, paused long enough at his new gasoline filling station today to aver he was not a holdout but that unless a goodly chunk was added to his pay check—there "might be a little trouble."

Once a placid listener in baseball's business discussions, "Red" has decided to take care of the Rolfe end of the situation. He tilted once at the Yankee windmills and came out second best, but this year it's going to be different. Reports had him getting $15,000 last year.

"I'm entitled to a boost, and a good one at that," Bob asserted. "Last season I led the league in three departments and I had the best year in my whole career. If they're paying off as usual on past performances, I want mine."

He grinned as he recalled his efforts to do some individual bargaining last year and admitted he "got nowhere."

"But I've got something this year," he continued. "They haven't sent me a contract yet so I don't know what the story is. But I certainly earned a boost, and a big one. Life in baseball is too short to fool around and there might be trouble if things aren't right."

He certainly has a talking point, for he led the American League with 213 hits, scored 139 runs to top that department, and swatted out more doubles than any other player, to wit, 46.

He was sixth in the race for batting honors with a respectable .329 and his fielding was classy enough to compile a .958 average. He batted in 80 runs for the Yanks, with the handicap of batting in the second spot, and laced out a total of 14 home runs.

Coeburn Coach 'Calls' As Substitute 'Sleeps'

Coeburn, Va., Jan. 17 (AP).—Coeburn High School's team neared the end of its basketball game with East Stone Gap with the score tied at 20-20 and hundreds of exciting fans yelling themselves hoarse. Coach Bill Bowman called for one of his substitutes to go in. Once, twice, three times he called—and no response.

Fearing the heat of the game had been too much for the boy, Bowman investigated. He found the sub safe and sound—asleep.

Calumet Farm Horses Win Four Straight Races at Hialeah

Three Graded Handicaps to Trainer Jones

Easy Mon, Temulac, Talked About, Taxes Score; Daily Double Pay-off $530.10

By the Associated Press

Hialeach Park., Fla., Jan. 17.Warren Wright, the Chicago sportsman who owns the Calumet Farm, and his trainer, Ben Jones, had one of the biggest days in turf history here this afternoon when bearers of the popular devil's red and blue silks scored four straight triumphs, including the trio of graded handicaps that featured the program.

After Easy Mon, Talked About and Taxes had raced to victories in the grade "A," "B" and "C" events, respectively, along came Temulac, longest priced of the quartet at $16.70 for $2, to make it four in a row in the seventh race, a claiming contest of a mile and a furlong.

Temulac, now a 4-year-old, was the highest priced yearling of his year at Saratoga, being knocked down to Mr. Wright for $26,000. He won one ordinary affair as a 2-year-old and, today, scored his second victory. Mike Caffarella rode Temulac, Leon Haas piloted Easy Mon and Talked About, while Freddie Smith was astride Taxes.

Won Impressively

The four Calumet colorbearers all ran in streamline fashion, racing in either first position or close to it throughout their respective races. Easy Mon won the grade "A" event in 1:10 for the 6-furlongs, just missing a tie for the track record.

Temulac was taken to the front in short order and never was headed. He beat the slow starting Conrad Mann by three lengths. Seed lost the place by a half length.

There were few shouts of glee when I Bid won the opener, a 3-furlong dash for juvenile platers. The colt, which finished next to last in his recent debut, had a world of speed this time, to return $84 for $2 and start a $530.10 daily double. Earl Steffen, regarded as one of the country's best riders of 2-year-olds, had the long shot away in front. Memorosa temporarily topped the ultimate winner, but, bowed by a half-length at the end. Star Blink lost second money by another half-length. The time was 0:34 3-5.

Damaged Goods Wins

Charging up on the outside with an undeniable rush, Damaged Goods emerged the winner in the blanket finish of the second race. Four horses were heads apart at the wire, with Boss Hoss second, Dodger third and Highola fourth. Dixie Man, a strong tip and favorite, was outrun. Damaged Goods paid $15.30.

Wayne Wright, recording his first triumph here, gradually improved Damaged Goods' position and got him up in the nick of time. Boss Hoss, Dodger and Highola all fought it out for the lead in the running.

Thoroughbred Groom Trampled to Death

Miami, Fla., Jan. 17 (AP).—Robert Moore, 56-year-old groom of Baltimore, was trampled to death by a racehorse he was tending at Hialeah Park last night.

He suffered broken ribs, contusions of the chest and a fractured skull.

Moore was alone at the time of the accident with the 4-year-old filly Miss Gino, which won her last start in the second at Hialeah Saturday. Attendants said the horse had been nervous.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—I BID, $84.00, $24.50, $13.20; MEMOROSA, $8.70, $5.40; STAR BLINK (field), $3.10.

I BID, quickest away, was outrun in the early stages, but responded with determination when the final test came and wore MEMOROSA down in the last strides. MEMOROSA broke forwardly, responded to strong pressure and drew clear in the opening, but aweived out a trifle through the stretch, which probably cost her the race. STAR BLINK closed a big gap in the final furlong to wear STORK down. The latter had no mishaps.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For maiden 3-year-olds. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:31½. Off 2:32. Winner, Starmount Stable's dk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—DAMAGED GOODS, $15.30, $7.00, $4.30; BOSS HOSS, $9.40, $5.30; DODGER (entry), $3.70.

DAMAGED GOODS, lacking speed and outrun in the opening half mile, gained steadily thereafter on the outside and wore the leaders down in the final strides. BOSS HOSS, displaying good speed, went forwardly throughout and finished gamely to punishment, but could not stave off the winner's bid. DODGER drew out into a seeming winning lead entering the stretch, but Smith rode a weak finish.

Daily Double, I BID and DAMAGED GOODS, Paid $530.10

THIRD RACE—One and three-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:00½. Off 3:00½. Winner, W. J. Susini's dk. br. g. (5), by Nutcracker—Sunny Days. Trained by G. L. Hamilton. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:37⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—THE THRUSH, $13.00, $5.60, $3.20; TRANSMITTER, $5.70, $3.20; SHAMBLES, $2.40.

THE THRUSH, showing improved speed, was rated in front while saving ground and, continuing gamely, outlasted TRANSMITTER in the final drive. TRANSMITTER, nearest in pursuit of the leader all the way, closed with good courage, but could not get up. SHAMBLES, well placed early, failed to respond when called upon, but did outstay FELSUN. The latter hung through the stretch.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200. Grade C Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:31. Winner, Calumet Farm's br. g. (5), by Eternal—Lady Wave. Trained by B. A. Jones. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:10⅘.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TAXES, $7.10, $5.30, $3.70; VISIGOTH, $15.70, $7.70; FLORAGINA, $3.50.

TAXES, well handled, gradually improved his position on the outside when straightened into the stretch, drew out in the last sixteenth mile to win mildly urged. VISIGOTH, badly outrun in the first half mile, finished with a belated rush on the outside. FLORAGINA, eased off the early pace, made a game effort and outlasted ROYAL BLUE.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,400. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:05½. Winner, Calumet Farm's b. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—TALKED ABOUT, $4.20, $3.00, $2.50; STORMSCUD, $4.80, $3.90; WISE BARRISTER, $3.80.

TALKED ABOUT, away forwardly, set a steady pace while saving ground the entire trip, held on courageously when it came to a drive and outlasted STORMSCUD. The latter, going in close attendance of the leader all the way, hung slightly when the real issue came. WISE BARRISTER moved up menacingly on the stretch, but Smith rode a weak finish. AMBROSE LIGHT had no mishaps.

SIXTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,500. Grade A Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start poor from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:39. Off 4:39½. Two-dollar mutuels paid—EASY MON, $8.80, $5.30, $3.30; MAR LE, $8.90, $4.70; SPEED TO SPARE, $3.00.

EASY MON, in close attendance of the pace throughout, drew out with rush at the furlong pole and held away to the end. MAR LE, on the inside the entire trip, assumed a brief lead entering the stretch, but was no match for the winner. SPEED TO SPARE left the post pulling up, made up ground gradually, finished gamely and outlasted LADY MARYLAND. The latter finished with a rush through the stretch. GREAT UNION never threatened.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 5:10. Off 5:10½. TEMULAC, hustled to the front in the opening furlong, tried to bear out entering the stretch, but continued determinedly and won with speed in reserve. CONRAD MANN, a trailer in the early running, closed an immense gap in the last half mile. SEED, a contender throughout, faltered through the stretch, yet held on with good courage to outlast ROOM SERVICE. The latter finished in tight quarters. BILLY VAN NUYS unseated his rider immediately after the start.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,100; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from Puett gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:43. Off 5:44. Dear Al:

Thanks to the Calumet Farm's great work, the Benningites had the last four winners on yesterday's card. After being shut out we began in the fifth with Talked About, $4.20; then came Easy Mon, $8.80; Temulac, $16.70, and Myponne, $7.60. Already in front of the selectors in the Washington area, this adds to our record since the bangtails reached Florida. Perhaps I am wrong about my statement that Challedon will not run in the $50,000 added Widener next March 2. A payment of $100 to keep horses eligible for the stake was due on January 15, and Owner W. L. Brann sent his check along for that amount. Victory Morn arrived in Florida from Columbia, S. C., today. He is the fine gelding that formerly belonged to the late Ral Parr. He now carries the colors of Maxwell Howard and is a Kentucky Derby candidate. The Marylanders will not forget his brilliant stake victories last year. The son of Challenger II is being pointed for the $20,000 added Flamingo Stakes. He started ten times as a 2-year-old, accounting for six firsts, three seconds and $31,290. Col. Howard purchased Victory Morn at the Parr dispersal sale for $21,600. He is a mite of a horse, standing only 14.2 hands high and weighs only 740 pounds. Speaking of the Flamingo Stakes, Washington may have two reasons to root in this rich race. Gustave Ring, popular Washington builder, has two colts ready for the test. At least, Trainer Buster Bedwell expects to have them in action. They are Ringle and Hardway. Both showed speed in Maryland last year. Hialeah Park has a new public address system, but it is not in general use for the races. It is reserved for important announcements. To follow the races, the electric annunciator flashes the position of the horses. The track would have you believe that the customers favor this method. They can bet me. I know that the majority of racegoers want the speakers with the positions called for them. This is one column in which I'm not going to mention the name of that radio guy. It is getting so that I'm afraid to have a heart-to-heart talk with my children. Probably be on the air the next morning. Only had seven winners this week. Let's see if we can get these home.

BILL.

First race—Double Call, nicely-bred juvenile, has the speed of the wind, so they tell me, and I'm going to try to get this one home. Fair Chance looks like the improving kind and could be second. Indeed for the minor award.

Second race—Calling gets in action here with a modest weight assignment and has drawn strong backing on occasions. This looks like a good spot for a crackdown and I'm going to string along. Fore Isus and Cerisse 3d have turned in smart recent efforts and will be in the thick of the battle.

Third race—Patsey Begone burned up a wad of dough last out. Goes again in the charge of Jockey Don Meade. This appears to be a good place for this veteran and I see no reasons for mistakes. My Mommy is tossed in this with 93 pounds and is a threat. Sun Girl may take the minor money.

Fourth race—Sir Gibson may be the right one in this field of maiden 3-year-olds. He is as good as anything. Mellowmoon and Dog House figure to do some running and probably will fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—Pause is due to carry 109 pounds in this sprint. Most of that will be in the person of Jockey Meade. At the weights, I'm going to string along with this one. Greeny and Neon Light for the place and show.

Sixth race—I'm forced to string along with the Calumet Farm in this event. It will have Beau James and Count Morse in action and either could take down the chief money. Napper Tandy's last was a beaut. Remarkable for third position.

Seventh race—No Ending goes postward for this with 102 pounds and Mike Caffarella in charge of the booting. This one may take the measure of Green Melon and Low Cuts, a pair who have plenty of weight aboard.

Eighth race—Dissembler finally has found the right spot. The small field should be right up his alley. Mightily and Old Maid to fill out the money bracket.

Best bet—No Ending.

Ailing Eagles Face River Vale

D. C. Hockey Team Meets Skeeters

McKillop Reports To Replace Injured Forward Kuntz For Eagles

Good news and bad greeted Coach Redvers Mackenzie yesterday as his Washington Eagles awaited two matches with the Jersey Skeeters, their current Eastern Amateur Hockey League nemesis, within as many nights.

Tonight the Eagles are to visit River Vale, N. J., for a match with the Skeeters, while tomorrow night at Riverside Stadium they again are to engage the Jersey boys at 8:30 o'clock.

The Finnish Relief Fund, which received $140 as its end of last week's match involving the Eagles and McIntyre Miners, again benefits by 10 per cent of the gross receipts tomorrow night.

The injury riddled Eagles were cheered somewhat yesterday by the reporting of Bruce (Bunny) McKillop, newly acquired left wing, who had just completed a 3,500-mile trek from Calgary, Alberta.

McKillop, patterned somewhat along the lines of Len Burrage in physique, will make his debut with the Eagles in River Vale, N. J., tonight and will make his District bow at Riverside tomorrow night.

McKillop formerly was associated with Mackenzie at Atlantic City for six years, where he was teamed with Hal Dewey, Alan Foster, Bill Cairns and Bill Davies.

He retired from Atlantic City with a fractured leg two years ago and since has played with the Coleman, Alberta, Canadians. He is 27 and his return to Eastern League action will be welcomed.

He is considered one of the greatest defensive forwards in amateur hockey and is a good shot as well. He replaces Alan Kuntz, high scoring Eagles wingman, who is nursing a fractured wrist.

Bad tidings were received yesterday when it was learned that Paul Courteau, swift skating and colorful wingman, must submit an injured wrist to an X-ray examination. Courteau injured his wrist in the Atlantic City match last Tuesday night, but continued play. A bad sprain is believed to be the extent of his injury.

The Orioles scored their fourth and final counter in the second frame and Atlantic City tallied in the last period.

Heurich Amateurs Start Play-Off

The play-off for the first half Heurich Amateur Basketball League's championship will begin at Heurich gymnasium Monday night when United Typewriters meet Delaware & Hudson in the first game of the three-way competition at 8:30.

The Jewish Community Center's Big Five, also involved in the three-way deadlock, has drawn a bye.

The three-way tie occurred last Monday night when Marvin's Credit upset the Jewish Community Center, a heavy favorite, to throw the three cluubs into a tie with two defeats each.

Second half Heurich Amateur play continues at Heurich gymnasium tomorrow night when the Petworth A. C. engages United Clay Products at 8 o'clock and Q. and S. Laundry opposes Bantam-Press at 9 o'clock.

changed its mind about having a lightweight contenders tournament to determine a challenger for Champion Lou Ambers, who must defend his crown after March 23. The commission notified leading lightweights and their reperesentatives that the boys could go out and fight one another for various promoters and eliminate themselves. Then Ambers could pick the best one as challenger.

Amid much flood-lighting and camera-clicking, Joe Louis and Arturo Godoy signed commission contracts for their heavyweight title tilt on February 9, and Henry Armstrong and Pedro Montanez did likewise for their welterweight championship battle next Wednesday night.

Pair of Italian Heavies Meet At Arena

Colonello and Alfano Matched as Feature of Monday Benefit Card

A pair of bruising Italian heavyweights—Italo Colonello and Mike Alfano—will headline his next boxing card at Turner's Arena, Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced last night. The bout is scheduled for Monday night.

Favorite to win the fight will be Colonello, 205-pound slugger, who bears a striking facial resemblance to Max Schmeling despite their distinctly different nationalities. Colonello is fighting under the Jimmy Johnston banner. He was brought here from Rome eight months ago and won attention while serving as Bob Pastor's sparring partner.

At Detroit, where Pastor was training for Joe Louis, Colonello outslugged and outboxed the challenger in training camp battles. His willingness to swap punches has created a demand for his services by promoters.

Capital Speedway Creditor's Meeting Delayed Until Feb.

A meeting of creditors of Capital Speedways, Inc., sponsors of the midget auto races last fall, was postponed at Hyattsville, Md., yesterday until February 6.

Vincent Fraltone, president of the corporation, which filed a petition for voluntary bankruptcy in Baltimore last month, said he wasn't sure such a step was necessary. The postponement was then requested by Robert W. McCullough, secretary of the corporation, in order to hold a meeting of the board of directors.

McCullough said the corporation ran into financial difficulties after being "rained out" on five successive Tuesday nights last fall.

Wilson Tank Team Beats Charlotte Hall

Natators of Wilson High turned back the tank team of Charlotte Hall Military Academy yesterday, 50 to 15, at the Y. M. C. A. pool for the most one-sided victory of the young swimming season.

Wilson's splashers took down first place in each of the six individual events, the Cadets only victory coming in the 160-yard medley relay. A team composed of Clemson, Greene and Chesley finished in two minutes flat.

Williams, of Wilson, continued his winning ways in the fancy diving, the youthful veteran winning the event with 85.6 points against the 75.6 total of his teammate, Freyburger. No swimmer won more than one event for the Presidents, though Falardeau finished second in both the 50-yard free style and the 100-yard back stroke.

50-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Lewis (W. W.); second, Falardeau (W. W.); third, Chesley (C. H.). Time, 29.9 seconds.

Miss Hiser's 172 Game Tops Pin League

Lucky Strike Ace Also Breaks Record With High Set of 422

Carolyn Hiser, star of the Lucky Strike team, monopolized honors in the Ladies' District Bowling League last night by tying one league record and establishing another.

At the Lucky Strike alleys, Miss Hiser rolled a 172 game, to equal the record previously established, but later in the evening she totaled a 432 set to shatter all records for the season. The Lucky Strike team won two games from Arcadia. Lorraine Gulli took record honors with a 149 game and a 400 set.

The Arcade Pontiacs defeated the league leading Rosslyn club in another league battle at the Arcadia alleys, two games to one. Netta Matthews bowled a 135 game and a 372 set. Blanche Wooten rolled the high individual game of 140 and had a set of 351.

Chevy Chase Alleys

In the Ladies' District League match at Chevy Chase, the Ice Palace team won two games from Red Circle. Jessie Sacry, with a 355 set, and Florence Sabian, with a 319, were the Ice Palace stars.

The pace set by Carl Humphreys, who rolled a high game of 158 and a high set of 409, helped Commercial team into a first-place tie for the C. & P. Telephone Company League lead.

Humphreys' spectacular bowling enabled the Commercials to win three games from the Traffic team and deadlock Georgia for the league lead. The Commercials had high team game of 586 and high team set of 1,738.

In the Washington Automotive League, the Emerson Orme Service team improved its lead to three games by winning two from the runner-up Paul Brothers team. Neither of the leaders figured in high honors for the night, however. William Lloyd, of Wolfe Motor, and Wood Barrett, of Call Carl, were bracketed at 144 for high game honors. Bill Rodes, of Parkway Motors, had high set of 373, and Arcade Pontiac had high team game of 599. Call Carl turned in a high tem set of 1,670. Arcade Pontiac swept three games from the All-Stars and Parkway Motor won two games from Al's Service.

LUCKY STRIKE

The leading Wardman Park Market Swept its series with Dandy Bread to remain at the top in the D. G. S. Bowling League, at the same time registering high-team game and set, 625 and 1,775. Dave Goodman, of Daves Market, had high individual game, 156, and Jack Schwartz rolled the high set of 385.

U. S. Is Not A Model Boss, A. F. G. E. Told

Dr. Davenport Criticizes Government Personnel Policy

Uncle Sam has a long way to go before he can call himself a model employer, Dr. Frederick M. Davenport, head of the Council on Personnel Administration, said last night at a meeting called by the American Federation of Government Employes to celebrate the fifty-seventh anniversary of the national civil service act.

Dr. Davenport criticized the personnel policy of the Federal Government on several grounds. He cited the Government's failure to work out a liberal scheme of salary raises, to stabilize employment, to protect the employe's health, to work out a training system for the employe's growth and advancement, and to set up machinery for dealing with employes' grievances.

"There must be something wrong," Dr. Davenort said, "when an employe must wait five to ten years for a salary increase. It is our belief that a more liberal policy in this matter of administrative advances would do much to increase efficiency in the service."

Dr. Davenport, a disciple of Theodore Roosevelt when T. R. was crusading for a better civil service, praised the work being done by organized Federal workers to bring about a better personnel policy in the Government.

Referring to the imminent lay-off of employes in some Government agencies, Dr. Davenport reminded the audience that some other agencies are expanding. He said the Council of Personnel Administration hoped to minimize the hardship of the lay-offs.

"We don't think it is good business for one part of the Government to be hiring employes," he said, "while another is releasing capable employes. That's what we mean by stabilization. We think it is wasteful and unbusinesslike to operate in such fashion."

He expressed hope that the Government would give serious attention to the question of employe health, and thus reduce the economic and human waste growing out of accidents at work. He also urged a spread of the group life insurance idea, so that employes will not have to "pass the hat for the funeral expenses of a fellow worker."

On the matter of training, Dr. Davenport said some kind of a program to prepare workers for bigger jobs was badly needed. When this question is solved, he said, the country will have a career service worthy of the name.

Wheat Prices Turn Upward After Setback

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Jan. 17.—Wheat prices were on the upgrade again today after yesterday's setback and this time gains were extended to the best level in almost a week.

May contracts, the only futures option now on the blackboard representing 1939 wheat, led with an advance of as much as 2⅜ cents just before the close. Final prices were 1⅜-2⅛ higher than yesterday, with May at 1.01-1.01¼ and July 98⅜-98½.

Buying came from commission houses with Eastern and Southwestern connections. Brokers said these orders may have originated with mills or cash grain handlers. Corn closed ¼-¼ higher; May, 58⅛-58¼; July, 58⅜; oats, ⅜-⅝ up; rye, ⅝-1 cent higher, and lard 12 to 17 higher. Soy beans continued their recent decline, attributed partly to weakness of meal and oil prices, losing 1¾-2¼ cents.

Reform Overdose Is Harming U. S., Banker Charges

New York, Jan. 17.—In his annual statement to stockholders of the Chemical Bank & Trust Co. of New York, Percy H. Johnston, chairman, said today:

"The United States today is suffering from an overdose of reform and a dearth of the good old-fashioned principles—backbone and hard common sense—upon which the greatness of this Nation was founded. That homely virtue—economy—the corner-stone upon which the prosperity and happiness of our Nation was built, is once more challenging the thought and action of our public officials. All attempts to discard it have failed.

"After years of disregarding the insufficiency of income to meet the ever increasing expenditures of Federal, State and city government, at last those chosen by the people to direct their affairs show signs of uneasiensss over their responsibility, and dare to recommend reductions in these expenditures. The wealth of our country, the product of man's labor, is not increased by taking it from one and giving it to another.

"I have often stated at these meetings that we can have no permanent and lasting prosperity for high rate of employment until the Government sets the standard of soundness and stability."

The Chemical Bank's deposits on December 30 were $737,104,291, an increase of $117,341,000 over the previous year.

General Foods Head Offers Job Suggestion

Initiative With Competition Will Solve Problem, Says Francis

New York, Jan. 17.—In Dun's Review for January, Clarence Francis, president of General Foods Corporation, in collaboration with Arthur D. Little, suggests a solution of the unemployment problem.

"As a first step in a study of how industry can help solve America's problem of unemployment, let's decide just what we mean by industry," he says. "We throw out the loose thinking that defines industry as 'Big Busniess,' and then goes on to blame such business for our economic ills and to demand that it concoct and put into effect suddenly some economic panacea.

"For, focusing more sharply, we see that by industry we mean neither big business nor all business, but merely the manufacturing part of American enterprise. Then let us confine our suggested remedies to those fields in which industry is involved. Thereby we should be better able to keep our feet on the ground and fit something practical into the broad national picture.

Initiative

"As a second step, within the American framework, we must stick to the principles of individual initiative and competitive enterprise. Within that framework we can and will solve our problem.

"Anyone can find in business itself and in the rules and regulations under which we work certain features which are less than perfect. Individually we hold opinions for or against the tactics of our competitors; and individually we may like or dislike certain legislative trends. But to conclude that, either in our business or in our law, we have sown the seeds of our system's destruction is to ignore American history and to discount American character.

Competition

"Common sense concedes that competition calls for rules. But common sense insists that regulation stop short of authorizing the referee to call the signals.

"Common sense also has come to concede that until business itself can do more to moderate the peaks and valleys of its operations and help to create more work, both for the individual manufacturer and for the many interests dependent upon him.

"There is a natural human inertia for letting things alone when a business seems to be going along fairly well. Under such conditions it is natural not to keep probing the price structure. But it has become one of the responsibilities of modern business management to go into this price subject continuously and exhaustively, from every angle.

"Suppose an item now sells for 50 cents and a million units are sold each year with total earnings of, say, $25,000. Now suppose the manufacturer finds by experiment that a price reduction to 40 cents increases the volume greatly, reduces unit costs, adds to employment and yields $30.000 total earnings.

"Provided the cost of additional capital required for the increased business is amply covered by the increased earnings, progress has been made in the public's interest by the use of this technique."

Willkie Says U. S. Already Has Play Place in the South

New York, Jan. 17. (AP).—Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, said today that he believed the utilities industry would spend between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000 in expansion this year, whereas in his opinion the industry "could spend" $1,250,000,000 during the next two years.

Commenting on President Roosevelt's commendation of a request by the Tennessee Valley Authority for additional power to develop into a vast recreational area parts of six Southern States embraced in the TVA project, Willkie said:

'That it is a playground is not the slightest bit of news to me. The Government has been playing around down there for the past several years with several hundreds of millions of dollars and I hope that that playground will cease to exist rapidly."

The group applauded at the close of the meeting when Dr. Paul H. Nystrom, president of the Limited Price Variety Stores Association, in reply to a question as to the business outlook, replied that it was "good, if we have a presidential candidate like our distinguished guest, Mr. Willkie." Asked what the principal campaign issue will be in the coming campaign, Willkie said: "Common sense."

Dairymen to Meet

The Market

A Special Correspondent.

Prices Hold Steady in Light Trading; Wall Street Continues Beset by Worries; Treasury and Prime Bonds Firm

New York, Jan. 17.—The market held its own today but as far as the statistical performance was concerned it was nothing to call out the National Guard. There was a minor average gain, judged by the composite average, measuring 0.04 point, but there were other matters which were of far more significance to Wall Street.

One of these was the laxity in trading. The market has advanced for two successive days, but the volume today was the smallest for 1940, amounting to only 473,970 shares. This leads to the inevitable conclusion that the rally of the last two days was strictly technical in nature and meant nothing as far as any major change in the financial situation in concerned.

We are forced back to the conclusion that Wall Street still has its old and familiar quota of worries, among which may be listed the domestic political situation with its component part regarding a possible continuance of the New Deal for another four years, the war with its question mark on the possible duration, and domestic business with its multitude of unanswered queries as to whether war orders will develop and what stimulation will carry on domestic orders without foreign stimulus.

Transfer Taxes

The ray in Wall Street today supplied no answers but like other days it provided time for a consideration of those things which are driving away business when business is needed. A case in point was the study of the New York Stock Exchange today which showed the effects of the high transfer tax in New York State.

The study of the exchange points out that the tax on share transactions in this State is far higher than in any other State in which there is an exchange. The tax is measured in pennies, and as such might be considered as amounting to nothing to a man able to invest in ten shares of stock. But the study of the stock exchange shows that such is not the case, that the high transfer tax in this State has been a real detriment to the transaction of finnacial business in this State.

The expense of doing a bond and share business in New York was well illustrated today by a case which was reported on the news ticker of a man who sold 1,000 shares of Missouri Pacific preferred at ½, thus realizing a gross of $500, on which he had to pay taxes of $70 and commissions of $30 and a 1-cent tax to the SEC, in other words he received net of $399.99 for his 1,000 shares of Missouri Pacific preferred. There had ought to be a law.

Utilities Firm

Trading today showed some firmness in the utilities, equipments and better grade rails. Steel stocks have been under the most pressure since 1940 trading got under way. The Herald Tribune's average of six leading steel stocks has declined 11 out of the first 14 business days. It is becoming more apparent that a large part of the steel buying in the closing months of last year was for future needs. The rate of operations this week is estimated at 85 per cent of capacity, a decline of 1 point from last week. This decrease is small but on a seasonal basis the trend calls for a rise. A significant point about present operations is that much of it is draining backlogs, since it is estimated that new orders for steel are only averaging about 50 per cent of current shipments.

Metals about held their own today. Copper was sold at 12.25 cents, off one-fourth cent, by small producers today. This marked the first break since the 12.50 cent level was established on October 5. It follows a cut made in the scrap price Monday. Cornelius F. Kelley, of Anaconda, told the T. N. E. C. that scrap accounted for 40 per cent of the 1938 production. There has been a slow demand for new metal.

Standard Brands Active

No one group of stock stood out in today's trading. Most active was Standard Brands, up a small fraction, followed by Cluett Peabody, which ran up more than a point in a sudden burst of activity. Boeing was a leader in the aviations, 1½, and there was fair support for the leading motors. Telephone regained favor and ran up more than two points and United Aircraft was up 1⅜. DuPont weakened a major fraction on news of its explosion.

Midweek statistical information included the gain in electric power output, which showed a gain of 4.8 per cent over the preceding week. Among the commodities markets wheat staged a late rally which paced futures about 2 cents above the best of the last week. The close for wheat was up 1⅜ to 2¼ cents a bushel. Cotton was irregular, closing 3 points lower to 6 points higher.

Bond Market Irregular

Listed bonds were irregular in another extremely quiet session today, the turnover falling for the second day to less than $5,000,000. United States Treasury bonds rallied feebly, while best-rated corporate bonds remained unchanged. Domestic corporation bonds with a speculative tinge tended to improve, with rails leading the movement. In the foreign section Scandinavian bonds were weak, but there were points of strength otherwise.

Gains in longer-term Treasury bonds amounted only to a few thirty-seconds of a point, and did not begin to make up for the sizable recessions of the last few days. The corporate investment issues were steady, with the state of the market best indicated by the rapid absorption of the new issues of $11,000,000 Libby, McNeill & Libby bonds, and the small premium over the par value offering level quoted in counter trades.

Missouri Pacific bonds were active and higher in the speculative group, owing to the move by the Interstate Commerce Commission for readjustment of the financial affairs of that carrier. This tendency by the I. C. C. also stimulated interest in other default and reorganization rails. Prices were marked up by fractions to more than a point. Local traction securities had a good tone, and most other special groups likewise advanced, although movements were small.

Norwegian bonds were 1 to 4 points lower in the foreign department, and Danish issues were irregular. Belgian bonds improved, but other neutral European securities were dull. Bonds of the belligerent countries remained irregular and generally soft. Latin-American default bonds were quiet and uncertain.

Steel Output Holds Steady At 85 Per Cent

But New Business Is Only Half of Shipments, Iron Age Reports

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Steel mills are maintaining production at a high rate largely at the expense of backlogs, Iron Age said today in a weekly survey.

Operating schedules were cut only 1 point to 85 per cent of the industry's capacity this week, the review pointed out, but new business is now averaging only about 50 per cent of shipments.

Many consumers are living off their inventories, which though still not dangerously high, are sufficient in many instances to carry through the next month or two, longer if consumption should decline," the steel magazine said.

"Considering this situation, steel companies do not expect much change in the rate of new buying until mid-February at the earliest. Meanwhile, there will probably be a gradual reduction in steel operations, together with a balancing of consumers' inventories in line with consumption, which remains high in many industries, notably automobile manufacture, railroad equipment construction, shipbuilding, farm equipment manufacture and some household goods, such as refrigerators.

"Export demand continues to show promise. Tin plate is one of the items most sought after in the United States, inquiries and orders coming from many former customers of belligerent countries."

The Iron Gate composite price for scrap steel remained at $17.67 for the fourth week as the trade awaited clarification of the steel outlook.

Cotton Close Is Irregular After Rally

By the Associated Press

New York, Jan. 17.—Cotton futures rallied late today but all deliveries couldn't quite make the grade to the previous rise. Final prices were 6 points higher to 3 lower.

Bombay put the market on the minus side at the start with substantial selling orders. Foreign pressure soon spent its force, however, and a late upturn in Liverpool encouraged buying here.

December Retailing 8.4 % Above 1938

St. Louis, Jan. 17 (AP).—An average increase of 8.4 per cent in retail sales throughout the country during December over the same month a year ago was attributed by the National Retail Credit Association to a general improvement "in practically every line of business."

The association's monthly business analysis released today also showed that collections were up 3.2 per cent and credit sales 3.4 per cent. The survey covered nearly 10,000 stores in 32 leading cities, 28 of which reported improved sales.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Mrs. R. M. C., jr., and her partner won a grand slam, which they very nearly didn't bid, on these cards. Mrs. R. M. C., jr., wants the point explained so that she won't have to catch her breath in the future. Here are the cards and bidding:

No.
♠ A Q J 10 9

WEST — NORTH — EAST — SOUTH

South
♠ K 8 7 6
♡ A Q 9 5 3
♣ 7 5 2

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
2 ♠	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT	Pass	4 ♠	Pass
7 ♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

Our contributor says: "The club queen fell on the king, making the hand a laydown. The point is that I was for a minute tempted to pass my partner's three no-trump bid, thinking that she was running to cover at the nearest game contract.

"I would like your opinion as to whether this was a weak bid, and if it would not have been better for her to have mentioned her clubs, or at least have made the no-trump bid four, so as to be sure I would rebid and also locate the heart ace. In light of her minimum rebid and my low-count hand, could I have been criticized had I passed?"

Three no-trump was not a good rebid to make over three hearts. Four clubs would have been much more constructive and would have shown a better picture of the hand. Of course, Mrs. R. M. C., jr., has no right to pass three no-trump even though it was an ambiguous bid, since she has fine spade support.

YESTERDAY'S SOLUTION

Listen! with Slocum

Have you ever met a "buff?" "Buffing" seems to be an occupational disease closely associated with newspaper work. For instance, I know one "buff" who is assistant city editor of the New York Daily Mirror, and he'd walk out of the middle of the greatest story in the world if his "buffing" instincts were aroused. WJSV's newsroom major domo, Jimmy Hurlbut, is probably Washington's No. 1 "buff."

Just in case you are still with us and don't know what a "buff" is we'll tell all. A "buff" is a gentleman who makes a hobby out of going to fires. Not setting them, mind you, for there is a difference, that among other things is criminal. Somebody else has to set 'em, our heroes watch 'em, and whenever they will be allowed they take part in the extinguishing of conflagrations.

Jimmy is goofy about fires. He's plied his trade in Chicago, New York and Washington, where he's seen some lovely jobs and he's sat in on the best Detroit, Joliet and Gary had to offer while he was growing up.

Before having a go at radio, James worked for the Chicago Tribune and the Chicago News, The Washington Post, the "Leatherneck Magazine," and did a turn at press agenting. The "Leatherneck" is the Marine publication and James became mixed up with it for a spell when he took a flier at earning a commission among the "watchdogs of the sea."

(Sorry folks if this gets a little incoherent from here on. They just told me Dorothy Lamour would be in town for the President's Birthday Celebration. I'm so glad, I do want so for Mother to meet her.)

To get back to our "buff." James came to WJSV to get the news shows in such a condition that they not only sounded nice but made sense. All the time he was telling of the great fires he had seen—stockyards in Chicago, the Hoffman Hotel in Detroit, the Goose Island Elevators in Chicago, the great pier fire in New York, and many others. Patiently he awaited the day when Washington would have a real blaze. Then he'd put on a broadcast that was a broadcast.

Came December, 1937. The great Hahn fire in Washington. The moment so long awaited had arrived—and Jimmy was out for a drive with his new bride, tooling gently along Virginia's roads, miles from Washington or Hahn's.

By ELLERY QUEEN

The Dragon's Teeth

Investigating the case of the death of Cadmus Cole, who had been the first client of "Ellery Queen, Inc," Beau Rummel learned there were two missing heirs, both nieces of the multimillionaire. Because of Ellery's illness, his partner Beau was impersonating him and reporting back with his information, for Cole had paid Ellery $15,000 to handle himself "a case," although he wouldn't specify its nature. The trail to Kerrie Shawn, one of the girls, whom Beau was hunting, produced no information until Ellery suggested Hollywood. Beau left immediately for the Coast and after running down Kerrie and locating her boarding house, he moved in there and settled down to watch for her.

Chapter 5

THAT NIGHT he stole into the dark bedroom shared by Kerrie "Land" and Violet Day and callously explored it.

It was a mean room, like his own: a rickety dressing table covered by a cheap linen runner smeared in one corner with lipstick and powder; an open closet hung with a faded calico curtain, and inside dozens of flimsy wire hangers; a lame bureau; walls hung with unframed 8 x 10 "still" photographs of Kerrie and a grim blonde with long shanks and an air of world-weariness; two low, lumpy, iron beds.

Poor kid.

Beau mumbled angrily to himself. Getting soft about a perky little brunette with delusions of stardom and come-hither eyes! Why, she stood in line for more dough than he'd see in his whole lifetime!

And he began to look forward to his first sight of Kerrie Shawn with a fierce, insatiable excitement.

He saw her four days later. He heard a taxi pull up outside, a merry voice, light footsteps. Instantly he was out of his room and at the head of the stairs, his heart racing.

The tall grim blonde appeared downstairs, handling two huge pieces of luggage like a stevedore. She was followed by the brunette, who was laughing as she lugged a suitcase. And suddenly there was warmth and happiness in those dingy halls.

"Come on, Vi!" cried Kerrie, flying up the stairs.

At the top there was Beau, staring.

"Oh," said Kerrie, bumping into him in the semi-darkness. "Hello!"

"Yourself."

"Oh," said Kerrie, bumping into Beau in the semi-darkness. "Hello!"

"You're new, aren't you?"

"Absolutely reborn!"

"What? Vi, it's a funny man! My name's Kerrie Sh—I mean, Kerrie Land. This is my roomie, Violet Day."

"Do. Queen. Ellery Queen." Beau stared and stared.

"It talks," said the blonde, peering at him. "Next thing you know it'll touch you for five bucks. Kerrie, come on. My feet are yelling bloody murder."

"It's nice, though," said Kerrie, smiling at him. "What lovely hair, Vi! Looks like Bob Taylor, don't you think?" And they left. Beau grinning in the gloom.

Ten minutes later he rapped on their door.

"Come in!" said Kerrie.

She was in a housecoat. Red flowers and a zipper. Her small feet were bare. Tousled hair—nice. The suitcase lay open on the bed—the sweet-smelling bed, Beau noted with an obscure satisfaction—and she was stowing black panties away in a bureau drawer.

"It's in again," said Violet Day, asprawl on the perfumed bed, her naked toes wiggling with ecstasy. "Kerrie, have you no shame? Giving away all your girlish secrets."

"Hi," said Beau, still grinning. He felt good, he didn't know why. As if he had had five drinks.

"Go away," said the blonde. "This gal here was born with the soul of a Girl Scout, and I was placed on earth just to protect her from hungry-looking hombres who think they look like the Taylor man."

"Vi, shut up," said Kerrie. "Come in, Queen—we won't bite you! Got any Scotch?"

"No, but I know where to find some," said Beau.

"Make mine apple. Say! I take it all back," said Vi, sitting up in bed. "Where?"

"I'm sort of new in Hollywood," said Beau. "You know. Lonesome."

"It's lonesome!" giggled the blonde. "But it knows where the Scotch is. Kerrie, it does look like Taylor, you know that?"

Beau ignored her. "Miss Land, how about joining me in a little supper with that Scotch?"

Vi hugged her knees. "Lonesome—supper—Scotch! What is this, the Merry Widow? I bet he'll have you feeling his muscle before the night's over, Kerrie."

"We'd love to," said Kerrie, stressing the "we" the least bit. "I know just how you feel, Queen. It's a date—the three of us."

"The three of us?" said "Mr. Queen" damply.

"But we pay our own way."

"Utsnay! What do you take me for?"

"Dutch, or you eat by yourself," said Kerrie positively. "Your bankroll won't last forever—Ellery, was it?—and we've just had two months of steady extra work being Hawaiians. Wasn't it Hawaiians, Vi?"

"I dunno," said Vi.

"So give us a half-hour to shower and change," said Kerrie, and as she said it a dimple appeared from nowhere and transfixed Mr. Rummell like an arrow, "and we're your gals, Ellery." And she came and stood close to him at the door, smiling.

Something happened to him. As if he had a sudden heart-attack. What the hell? He found himself in the dark hall leaning against the wall.

He stood there for several minutes, wiping the sweat from his forehead. Whew! Then he ran downstairs to the pay-telephone and sent the telegram to Mr. Queen which ended with exclamation point.

THEY DINED—at Mr. "Queen's" expense—in the Cocoanut Grove at the Ambassador.

Beau took turns dancing with Kerrie and Vi. Vi just danced. Kerrie floated. She made herself part of him. He actually enjoyed dancing for the first time in his life.

Kerrie laughed. "You're accepted, Mister. Did you know that?"

"How come?"

"Vi turns her headaches on and off like a faucet. Since she left me to your mercies, it's because she thinks you're a regular guy."

"How about you?" Beau leaned forward hungrily.

"I'm not so naive. You're a nice-looking cover, but what's in the book? I'll know better when you take me home."

Beau looked disappointed. "Tell me about yourself."

"There isn't much to tell."

"Have you and Vi been friends long?"

"I met her in Hollywood." Kerrie turned the glass of vermouth slowly in her long fingers. "Vi took me under her wing when my mother died last year. Just like a hen. And I guess I was a pretty hopeless sort of egg."

"Say, I'm sorry. Your mother, huh?"

"She died of plurisy-pneumonia. No resistance. She burned herself out trying to make a Garbo out of a cluck." Kerrie said abruptly. "Let's talk about something else."

"You seem to have led a pretty tough life."

"It hasn't been all honey-and-almond cream. Monica—"

"Monica?"

"My mother. Monica Cole Shawn. My real name's Shawn. Monica slaved all her life to see me become somebody, and I'm a little bitter about . . . How did we ever get on this subject, anyway? You see, I have an uncle who's a first-class rat. He's really responsible for my mother's suffering and hardships. But I don't see why you——"

"Monica Cole Shawn," said Beau. "You know, that's funny. Was your uncle's name Cole?"

"Yes, Cadmus Cole. Why?"

"His name's been in the papers. So you're his niece!"

"Papers? I haven't seen a paper in two months. What's he done now—turned a machine-gun on the Marriage License Bureau?"

Beau looked straight at her. "Then you didn't know your uncle just died?"

She was silent for some time, a little paler. "No, I didn't know. I'm sorry, of course, but he treated my mother abominably, and I'm afraid I can't shed any tears. I never even saw him." She frowned. "How did he die?"

"Heart attack on a Caribbean cruise. He was buried at sea. His own yacht, you know."

"Yes, I'd read about him occasionally. He was supposed to be a rich man." Kerrie's lip curled. "And all the while he was spending his money on yachts and mansions, my mother was slaving to death, living in hall bedrooms, cooking Sunday breakfasts over gas-burners—if there was anything to cook . . . I took a job when I was 16 because I couldn't bear seeing her work her life away for me. But she did, just the same, and when she died last year at 52 she was an old woman. Dear Uncle Cadmus could have saved her all that—if he hadn't been a lunatic on the subject of marriage. When mother married, and my father died, she wrote Cadmus—and I still have his reply." Kerrie's mouth quivered. "Now, look here, Mr. Snoop, that's quite enough. I'll be crying on your shoulders next thing I know."

"Can you guarantee that?" said Beau. "Kerrie, I've got a confession to make."

"This seems to be Aching Hearts night!"

"I'm a heel."

"Mister Queen! Thanks for the warning."

"I mean I'm a phoney. I'm not an extra. I'm not in Hollywood looking for a job. I'm here for only one purpose—to find you."

She was puzzled. "To find me?"

"I'm a private detective."

She said: "Oh."

"The Queen agency was employed by your uncle before his death. Our job was to find his heirs when he died."

"His . . . heirs? You mean he died and left me—me—money?"

"That's the size of it, Kerrie."

Kerrie gripped the table. "Did he think he could buy me off—pay me conscience-money for having killed my mother?"

"I know how you feel." Beau put one of his paws over her icy hands, and squeezed. "But don't do anything foolish. What's done is done. He's dead, and he's left a lot of money—to you and to a cousin of yours, Margo Cole, your uncle Huntley's daughter, if she can be found. That money belongs to the two of you."

She was silent.

"Part of the money should have been your mother's while she was alive, anyway. Then what's wrong in taking it now? You can't bring her back, but you can enjoy your own life. Do you like Hollywood?"

"I hate it," she said in a low voice. "Because this is a place where only talent counts, and I haven't any. I might work my way up to talking bits, but I'm not an actress. I'm not kidding myself. I face a life like Vi's—cheap boarding houses, a starvation diet, mending the runs in my stockings because I can't afford new ones——" She shivered.

Kelley Urges Relaxing of Trust Laws

Copper Official Says Cooperation Should Be Permitted Industry

By Felix Cotten.
Post Staff Writer

Repeal or modification of the Sherman antitrust act and adoption of a plan whereby businessmen could cooperate under Government supervision was recommended to the Monopoly Committee yesterday by Cornelius F. Kelley, of New York, president of the Anaconda Copper Mining Corporation.

"The time has come," he declared, "when, if we are going to do anything constructive in industry, we have got to get away from the narrow prohibitory restrictions of a statute passed nearly 50 years ago."

Businessmen, he said, should be permitted to sit down together and "intelligently discuss their problems" without facing a "jail sentence."

Favors Consumer Spokesman

In response to questions by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, committee chairman, he said he thought it would be "infinitely better" if the consumer were represented on producer organizations set up to work out production control plans.

"I wouldn't care," he said, "if the Government also were represented.

"I would require all the minutes, every account, of such a trade association to be filed with a proper agency of the Government, such as the Secretary of Commerce or the Federal Trade Commission.

"The proceedings of the associations should be open to the press and to anybody else."

Defines Regulation

He emphasized, however, that the associations should merely be subject to Government regulation whenever the public interest justified and should not be "constantly regulated by the Government."

Kelley explained that he was not asking that protection against monopoly be abandoned. It would be "infinitely better" for all concerned, he said, "if we had some means of protecting the public and at the same time enabling industry to regulate itself."

The Capper-Volstead act, which permits agricultural interests to cooperate in the production, distribution and sale of agricultural products under supervision of the Secretary of Agriculture, could be used as a model, he suggested.

Kelley was questioned concerning various cooperative measures undertaken by the industry since the World War. Particular attention was directed to the formation in 1926 of Copper Exporters, Inc., under the Webb-Pomerene act, passed in 1918, to grant copper and various other producers exemption from the antitrust laws so far as export business was concerned.

Scoll Questions Kelley

David E. Scoll, committee attorney, and O'Mahoney tried to draw from Kelley an admission that the rise in the copper prices during the early years that the association was functioning was due in some measure to industrial cooperation by this means. Kelley, however, stressed the influence of extraneous factors, such as the increased demand for copper, coupled with the disappearance of the excessive World War copper stocks.

He explained that, after the 1929 crash, the 18-cent-per-pound copper price previously in effect was maintained until April, 1930, at the behest of the Government. Efforts to hold the price at this "fictitious and artificial level," he declared, finally were abandoned against the protest of Government emissaries, whose object, he said, was to prevent the depression from spreading.

Kelley was also questioned about production curtailment programs put into effect both by domestic and foreign producers during the early depression years.

Apartment Parking Space Plan Opposed

Compulsory Provision Proposal Voted Down by Commission

Overruling a recommendation of its planning director, the National Capital Park and Planning Commission yesterday refused to approve a proposed zoning reform making it compulsory for apartment house operators to provide parking accommodations.

For reasons which were not disclosed, the commission withheld its indorsement despite the urging of John Nolen, jr., director of planning. As a member of the Zoning Advisory Council, Nolen helped draft the regulation, which is to be discussed February 7 at a public hearing called by the District Zoning Commission.

According to Thomas S. Settle, secretary of the planning body, the members agreed that something should be done to reduce or eliminate street parking in residential areas, but apparently did not feel that this is the solution.

All residences except one-family dwellings would be affected by the proposed regulation. Existing buildings would be exempted, however, the parking reform applying only to multi-family dwellings to be built in the future.

The suggested regulation stipulates that one parking space, indoors or out, shall be provided for each dwelling unit in the building. It would also be compulsory for assembly halls to be built in the future to provide one parking space for every five seats.

Alexandria and Arlington County, Va., already have such a parking regulation, as well as Los Angeles and other large cities, Nolen declared. The plan proposd for Washington has been approved by the Traffic Advisory Council, among other local agencies.

The planning commission announced active steps are under way to buy land for a playground in the vicinity of Fifth nd O streets northwest. Norman C. Brown, associate land purchasing officer, said condemnation proceedings will not be instituted unless private bargaining fails.

Brown also reported acquisition of an additional parcel for the Columbia Heights Recreation Center, Sixteenth and Lamont streets northwest; certain lands required to protect and straighten the boundaries of Piney Branch Parkway, and miscellaneous additions to Anacostia Park, Fort Drive and the Northeast Recreation Center.

Approval was given proposed legislation for erection of a police memorial in the Municipal Center grounds and the Randolph bill, which authorizes the development of a stadium and sports center at the foot of East Capitol street. The memorial would be dedicated to policemen killed in line of duty.

With Chairman Frederic A. Delano presiding, the planners also voted to have an aerial survey of Washington and environs made, to accompany the census report; approved appraisals of land in Montgomery County, Md., which is to be acquired as part of the George Washington Memorial Parkway project, and appointed Nolen as its representative on the planning committee, Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin.

The two-day monthly meeting will be concluded today.

Census Aide Asks Business To Cooperate

Dr. Reed Appeals to Retail Secretaries at New York Convention

Cooperation of business groups in the sixteenth census was urged by Vergil D. Reed, assistant census director, in a meeting of the National Association of Retail Secretaries in New York yesterday.

Delayed and incomplete reports, he said, increase the cost of the census, and he told the group "don't let your stores use the moss-grown alibi that you can't prepare your census reports until after the income tax deadline."

The current census, Reed said, will give businessmen for the first time important information about migration of population, stability of retail ownership, consumer credit, effects of rural electrification and other topics related to marketing problems.

Changes in national life since 1930 and the impact of war, said Dr. Reed, "are reflected in an unprecedented increase in the demands from both governmental and private interests for basic facts to point the way."

"The increasing complexity of modern life, the exhaustion of our frontiers, the slowing down of population growth and the chaotic condition of the world make a complete inventory of our social and economic resources and activities a prime necessity right now," he declared.

Two speakers from Washington addressed the National Retail Dry Goods Association convention, meeting concurrently with the secretaries' group.

Chairman Robert E. Feer, of the Federal Trade Commission, told the N. R. D. G. A. that the consumer "is becoming more interested than ever before in the habits of those who ply him with merchandise." He said that technological advances in preparing goods for market, had complicated the consumer's task of selection, and he urged the association members to promote the highest standards of fair dealing, and cooperate with consumers in selecting merchandise.

F. W. Hill, manager of the accounts receivable department at Lansburgh & Brothers, described experiments with a simplified "no-posting plan" for billing accounts. He explained that under the plan customer receives a statement, like a bank statement, in amounts only, along with all charge and credit slips. He said that the plan had been tested, but that the store had not yet adopted it.
